THE SPENDTHRIFT.

Lustrous and silken hair'd he swept Blackthorn silver loose and leapt
Into the leafless lane;
His pleasant minstrelsy began;
Torrents of music ran
A river, like a gift plain;
He flung the fields new rivers
And green shaded doubtlets to the trees.

Then, stooping, from a lily bowl
Drank of the sweetness of her soul
And madly sprang away.
In marshes and moist meadows he Singed the stars down-de-lis;
Kingfisher gittitry;
He tossed amid the tangled reeds
Quivering and bent with crystal beads.

And even in his thoughtless flight
About him danced in vestures bright
His nimble butterflies.
His prancing steps rose hid dew,
Ran leaves the largest that he threw
At random to the skies.
Nor ceased he till he have made
Amid the jasmine's starry baird.

So was his rich inheritance Ruined and lost. With swift advance Came autumn, of the spendthrift youth
By bitter bodes devoid of ruth.
Demanding summer's crown.
Here from the corralled yews alone
The robins mourn his broken throne.
—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE TWO FATHERS

The mother was a widow, an industrious woman, who worked late and early in order to support her child, a little girl between 4 and 5 years old, pretty as a fairy, full of fun, affectionate and coaxing as any happy child could be.

On the opposite side of the landing of the fifth floor on which Mme. Etienne and her daughter Lillie lived was the door of the apartments inhabited by two brothers, cabinet makers by trade and bachelors elated by choice or chance, no one knew.

One of those days when the intense heat necessitates the door being left open in order to get a current of air, the prettiness of Lillie attracted the attention of the two brothers, who were already past their first youth and adored children in their quality of approaching old bachelhood. From that a sort of intimacy sprung up between the widow and her neighbors. Little reciprocal services passed between them. They sometimes made a party of pleasure on the Sunday. So well did they get on indeed that one day the eldest of the two brothers said to the other:

"That child would want a father badly."

"That is my opinion also."

"Would you have any objection to my asking the mother to marry me?"

"Why should I? In fact, I was thinking of doing the same myself. But since you have spoken first follow the notion up, but on the condition that you will let me see Lillie as often as I like. I love that child as much as if she were my own."

"Forsooth! You will live with us."

The question agreed upon, the two brothers, dressed in their best, went to call on Mme. Etienne, whom, however, they found confined to bed. The evening before she had run in order to take some work back to the shop in time; on returning she had caught a chill, passed a feverish night and was not able to rise in the morning. She begged her neighbors to go for a doctor. It was no time to speak of marriage.

Inflammation of the lungs carried away the poor woman in ten days.

Thanks to the two brothers, she had not to go to the hospital, and until the last she was able to see her little Lillie, whom she earnestly recommended to them. They swore never to abandon the child.

The funeral over they took charge of the little one, kissing her. They said to one another at the same time: "If you wish, we will never get married now."

They went to live at Vincennes so that Lillie might have plenty of good air and take walks in the wood. They were very proud of their adopted daughter. When people stopped to look at them and asked in a casual way which was her father, they replied, "Both of us."

Lillie seemed to like one as well as the other and called them Uncle John and Uncle James.

When she grew a little older they put her to school—to a young ladies' school to be it understood—taking her there every morning and calling for her in the evening. So Lillie grew up between these two affections without ever feeling the want of father or mother.

She cost the brothers a great deal of money, did the little one, but bah, they went no longer to the cafe and worked a little more than formerly. These supplementary hours were devoted to the pleasure and toilet of ma-demoiselle.

When she was 15 years of age, she was the first to suggest that she should stay at home for the future, at which, of course, the brothers were enchanted. What a charming little housekeeper they had then and with what joyful tenderness she greeted their return every evening! To say the spoiled child never abused their goodness would be saying too much, but at least she seized every available opportunity of pleasing them.

Two years passed over so quickly for all of them that on the day the two men brought a cake and bouquet to celebrate Lillie's birthday they exclaimed:

"Seventeen years old! Is it possible?"

But yes, it was possible. And James and John thought so much about it that it made them anxious and unhappy.

It was the younger who said one evening to the other:

"Do you know that Lillie is getting more beautiful every day?"

"Eh! Yes, I know it well. And others know it too. There must be a good many admirers prowling around here after her."

"And it is certain one of them will take her away from us before very long."

"Poor little thing!"

"Yes, if she were to get a bad husband!"

"Oh, I should kill any man who would treat her badly!"

"There is only one way of escaping that."

"Ah," said the elder brother, without making any addition to the exclamation.

"And then," continued the other, "think how sad it would be for us to part from Lillie—never again to see her trotting about the house, never to hear her merry voice singing after we return from work of an evening."

"I have been thinking of all that for a long time, my dear John."

"It must be put an end to."

"And your plan?"

"It is very simple if it pleases you. I shall marry her before she gets fond of any one else."

"Zounds!"

The elder brother stood up, almost threatening,

"I also have thought of that plan. I was often going to speak about it, but always held back."

"Why?"

"Because I wanted to marry Lillie myself."

The two brothers looked at one another far from amiably. Then the younger said:

"This is the same as with the mother formerly. Do you remember, James? I gave her up to you. It is your turn now to give Lillie up to me. You are three years older than I."

"Which nevertheless does not make you very young."

A song was heard ascending from below stairs. Lillie was coming back from her daily shopping.

"Listen," said John rapidly. "The child who has made our happiness up to this must not be a cause of disunion between us. Let her choose which one she likes best."

"All right," said the other. "That is quite fair."

Lillie entered, took the two men by the neck, kissed them and, drawing a chair between them, said:

"I wish to speak to you seriously."

The face of the young girl looked quite joyous.

"I wish to get married."

"John and I were just speaking about it."

"But you have not found me a husband."

"As a matter of fact we have. You love us very much, say?"

"Like father and mother at once."

"That is why we wish to propose to you to choose between us."

"Why choose?"

"Which of us will you marry?"

The young girl burst into a fit of laughter so joyous, so prolonged, that the two brothers remained quite dumbfounded. Then, brushing the tears from her eyelashes:

"No nonsense, my uncles. I said I wanted to speak to you seriously. You mustn't joke. I have a sweetheart."

Neither replied.

"Now, you must not be angry. I am so fond of him, and he is coming tomorrow to see you."

"Like that! All at once! And us, Lillie?"

"You will always be my two fathers—"Transluted From the French For Detroit News.

Athens and the Goat.

Your genuine Athenian believes the goat to be the proper milk producing animal, and he regards the cow in this connection as we Americans do the mare. The milkman takes his animals with him, jangling their bells and sneezing. "Gala!" he shouts, a quick, startling cry, with a "g" whose guttural quality is unattainable by adult learners and usually unperceived by them. When a customer comes to the door, he strips the desired quantity into the proffered receptacle before her vigilant eyes, selecting one of the goats and paying no attention to the others, who understand the business as well as he does. Patiently they stand about, chewing the cud or resting on contiguous doorsteps. When their master moves on, they arise and follow, more faithful than dogs.

The obvious and well nigh overpowering temptation to which the milkman is subjected affects him in Greece as in America. In Greece it is taken for granted that he cannot resist, and he is therefore obliged to take his animals with him. But even thus he is not above suspicion, for they tell of a rubber water bag carried inside the coat and provided with a tube reaching to the palm of the hand. Each time the milkman closes his hand over theudder he presses the bag between his arm and his body.—Scribner's.

Agreeable Parting.

"Well, major, goodby. Glad to have met you."

"Indeed, suh? Wherefore glad? It must take little to make you glad, suh."

"It does."

"Hah! Well put. But every one says 'glad to have met you' on leaving a new made acquaintance, and none means it."

"Mere figure of speech. To tell you the exact truth would hurt your feelings, major. Only hypocrites can be real nice to people. As a matter of fact, sir, I am sorry I met you, and I don't care if we never meet again."

"Why, hang it, suh, you are getting to be an honest gentleman! I should like to meet you again, suh."

"Never, if I happen to see you first, major. Ta-ta."

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR VISITORS IN BUFFALO.

Hundreds of Hotels, Boarding and Rooming Houses, Besides Many Private Homes, on the List.

So much has been said and written about the ability of the city of Buffalo to care for the crowds which will attend the Pan-American Exposition this summer that a few facts and figures will be appreciated by the general public.

In the first place, there are listed more than 200 hotels which will give accommodation to 30,000 people; there are 650 boarding and rooming houses, affording accommodation for 18,500, while 7,000 owners of houses, most of whom never before hung out their latchstring for a consideration, have signified their intention of opening their houses for the accommodation of visitors to Buffalo this summer. These 7,000 homes will accommodate at least 100,000 visitors.

The Exposition Company has arranged to furnish tent accommodation on the Exposition grounds for 250 uniformed men. There are also two companies of angling tent systems which will afford additional accommodation for sin are almost unknown today. A Jonathan Edwards would not be able to do this as deeply a religious audience with a sermon on the subject, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," as he was in his day and generation.

This is simply because sin is made light of. A consciousness of the true character of sin must be present before one will ever get rid of sin. Who will seek a physician until he knows that he is ill? No one. No more will we seek freedom from sin unless we feel that we are sinners.

John's method of getting rid of sin is to confess it. Being conscious of our sins, "If we will confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all sin." This confession must be made to God. David confessed his sin to God. Both were pardoned. 2. This confession must be definite and personal. Many are willing to confess in a general way that they are sinners, but the confession that counts before God is the confession "of our sins," not the sins of humanity, which includes ourselves.

3. This confession must be made in godly sorrow, with faith in the cleansing blood of Christ and with the determination to turn from sin to God. Such confession is followed by forgiveness and cleansing. God both pardons and purifies, both justifies and sanctifies us. He has promised to do so and will be faithful to His promise. He is righteous in doing so because Christ has died for us, and His righteousness is imparted to us by faith.

THE MIDWAY.

Principal Amusement Features of the Pan-American Exposition.

The Midway of the Pan-American Exposition far surpasses all amusement features at former expositions both in quality and novelty of attractions. The following are the principal concessions:

Equineau's Village, Glass Factory Trip to the Moon, Aero-Cycle, Old Plantation, Beautiful Orient, Miniature World's Fair, Around the World, Cleopatra, Colorado Gold Mine, Living Pictures, Dreamland, Moving Pictures, War Cyclorama, Philippine Village, Alt Nuremberg, Panopticon, Streets of Mexico, Darkness and Dawn, Burning Mountain, Darkest Africa, House Up-side Down, Water Sports Carnival, Gypsy Camp, Golden Chariots, Johnson's Flood, Infant Incubators, Fair Japan, Boston's Wild Animal Arena, Ideal Palace, Jerusalem on the Morning of the Crucifixion, Indian Congress, Bazaar Building, Scenic Railway, Venice in America, Dawson City and Miniature Railway.

The Mechanics' Institute at Rochester has obtained space in the Educational division of the Pan-American Exposition for an exhibit. The pictures to be placed on view are three sizes—28 by 22 inches, 22 by 14 inches and 7 by 5 inches. Room for 32 of the largest size has been given to the Institute.

It is worth while to do a kind thing gracefully and tactfully. There is a certain propriety of demeanor which never makes a mistake, which guards the feeling of a loved one as carefully as a mother cherishes her little delicate child. In time such tact becomes natural, and one who has it makes others happy without trying to do so.—Christian Intelligencer (Baptist).

Tact and Gentleness.

Of all the gifts to be prayed for, next to grace at heart, tact and gentleness in manner are the most desirable. A brusque, shy, curt manner, a cold indifference, a snappish petulance, a brutal appearance of stolidity, antagonize and wound and rob even really kind actions of half their value.

Suspense.

One bears with fortitude almost any certainty, but suspense tries endurance. What may be about to happen is harder to wait for than the sharpest blow and the heaviest load which have actually shown themselves to exist. "The waiting time, my brothers, is the weariest time of all."

Nevertheless even in the uncertainty of suspense one may rest on the pillow of the divine love. "I will trust and not be afraid," said one of old. We may say this still in every crisis and every contingency.—Christian Intelligencer.

True to Your Present Faith.

No man can ever go forward to a higher belief until he is true to the faith which he already holds. Be the noblest man that your present faith, poor and weak and imperfect as it is, can make you be. Live up to your present growth, your present faith.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic for the Week Beginning June 2—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—How to get rid of sin.—I John 1, 5-10. This is a topic of vast practical importance. Sin is the greatest curse in the world. Its blight is universal. The whole creation groans under its sway, and mankind everywhere is anxious to get rid of the power, pollution and guilt of sin. The cry of Paul has been echoed and re-echoed throughout the ages, "Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" And with all may will exclaim, "Thanks be to God, who giveth us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Sin can never be got rid of by denying or ignoring its existence or by depreciating its real character. Some have denied that there is such a thing as a moral evil in the world. What is called has been looked upon as a human weakness, an imperfection, but without the character of guilt. Others have made light of sin, and this is the tendency of the age

Good Afternoon.

Many poor families of Quincy, who have been so unfortunate as to need help, will perhaps miss Overseer Bass the most. Already we have heard expressions of grief over the loss of a kind friend. At City Hall he was "Uncle Henry" to all, and officials and clerks enjoyed his company and dry wit.

No one was more attached to Masonry than Past Master Bass, and no one probably has attended more meetings of Rural lodge in the last forty years than he. For three years he was master, and at the time of his death and for several years the treasurer. Bro. Bass was a 33d degree Mason and a Past Commander of South Shore commandery, K. T.

Mr. Bass was among the founders of the Granite City club and for over sixteen years its clerk and treasurer, and active worker. At the annual meeting in April of this year the club presented him a gold headed ebony cane, in appreciation of his services. Whist was one of his hobby, and he was an acknowledged expert; he successfully managed many whist parties and selected the prizes which will be remunerative of him for years.

Ex-Councilman Bass was of Mayoralty timber and is more than one contrast his name has been seriously considered for the Republican nomination. A criticism of Mr. Bass while Councilman in 1891, by Councilman Charles R. Sherman, is from a Ledger at that time.

"The order will now be put upon its final passage. Those in favor of the adoption of the order, will, when their names are called, answer 'yes'; those opposed, 'no.' The clerk will call the roll, is the familiar phraseology of the President of the City Council. At the head of the alphabetical procession is Councilman E. W. H. Bass. He answers promptly, and whether he is with the majority or minority makes less difference to him than to any other member. His vote would be the same whether called last or first, and although no member takes less time of the deliberation of the Council to explain the reason of his vote, yet we doubt if there is one of the twenty-three who has given the subject a more careful and conscientious consideration. As chairman of the Committee on Fire Department he has made the question of hydrants, as well as other matters pertaining to that branch of the city government, a study, and the voters of Quincy need have no fear that any money will be squandered in that direction with his approval.

Candidly, we do not believe that Mr. Bass is happy in the Council. He does not seem to enjoy the lengthy debates, and he impresses one with the feeling that such long drawn out arguments are unnecessary. If his membership of the Council needed to be self-sought Mr. Bass would always continue a private citizen. His silence is not a necessity, for in the numerous society meetings at which he has presided, he has given abundant proof of his readiness and ability for speech. There seems to be something particularly appropriate in the name of Bass in connection with the city government of Quincy. The vote which he received for the Council of 1892 was very flattering when we take into consideration the heat of the contest.

Drift of Opinion.

Everybody will agree with the Advertiser that the present caucus law is a failure in some ways and that it is used to legalize dishonesty and manifest trickery in politics, but not everybody will agree that the proposed amendments to the law would have resulted in any improvement. It may be worth the while to put up with the present law another year while we watch the progress of western experiments with primary elections which, at first glance, have struck many minds in this state as about the thing that is needed to simplify and purify the preliminary contests of politics.—Haverhill Gazette.

In the old times money was made by economy and 6 per cent. interest. Now economy is out of fashion, and 6 per cent. well secured is hard to get. Nevertheless, the young person who has habits of economy has a "pull" upon fortune worth any amount of booting from without. —Christain Register.

An error was made in the widely published statement that the women and girls employed in hotels and restaurants in this State should only work eight hours per day. They come under the 55-hour law, which favors the proprietors of such establishments to the time of ten hours a week over the situation as mistakenly declared and which created such a furor. If there be no evasion of the statute as it stands, the females thus engaged may consider themselves lucky. —Lynn Item.

W. Y. C. Opening.

The fifth annual opening of the Wollaston Yacht club was held at the club house on the evening of Memorial day and was very largely attended. A grand good time was enjoyed by all. The hall in the club house was prettily decorated with flags and bunting. Charles W. Page was the chairman of the committee in charge, and he opened the entertainment part of the program introducing Commodore Baker, who made an address of welcome. This was followed by a pleasing entertainment consisting of comet solos by George Critchley, readings by Miss Morton, violin solos by Master Merrill, and selections by a mixed quartette. At the close of the entertainment refreshments were served. The affair closed with a dance.

The Wollaston club now numbers 120 members and is in a most prosperous condition.

Although on its face the recent war between the White Rats and the Vaudeville Managers' association appears to have resulted in a victory for the former, the facts do not bear out this assumption. Many of the professionals now find themselves without engagements despite their loyalty to the organization, while those performers who refused to join the Rats and remained true to the managers have in most cases all the dates they care to accept. This is a somewhat anomalous condition of affairs, due solely to the lack of business capacity, which is one of the most striking characteristics of vaudeville "artists." When the fight had about worn itself out and the managers were seeking an excuse to make a graceful retreat, the Rats could easily have secured an agreement which would have served to protect those of their number who had been most prominent in the struggle. But they didn't think of that, and now a large number of the rodents find themselves in the position of victors who nominally have saved 5 per cent of their salary and actually have lost 100 per cent of it by reason of the fact that there is no longer a demand for their services.

Our English cousins are proverbially slow at "catching on" to a joke. That perhaps explains why they have taken Edna May seriously in her role as the "star" of "The Girl From Up There," which seems to have caught on in London. Miss May had made the one and only hit of her career as the Salvation Army lassie in "The Belle of New York." London went wild over her, and it was therefore perfectly natural that Mr. Frohman, having spent time and money and brain effort in introducing her as a star in this country, should seek to derive some pecuniary benefit from the enterprise by exploiting her in a city in which she had been a pronounced success, which, by the way, she most decidedly was not in New York. "The Girl From Up There" is really a senseless, vapid vehicle, and the quality of Miss May's work is not such as would tend to lessen the play's chances of failure. Yet, despite all this, it seems to be doing some business in London, which brings us back to the original proposition that the English people are unable to appreciate the joke which Mr. Frohman is having at their expense.

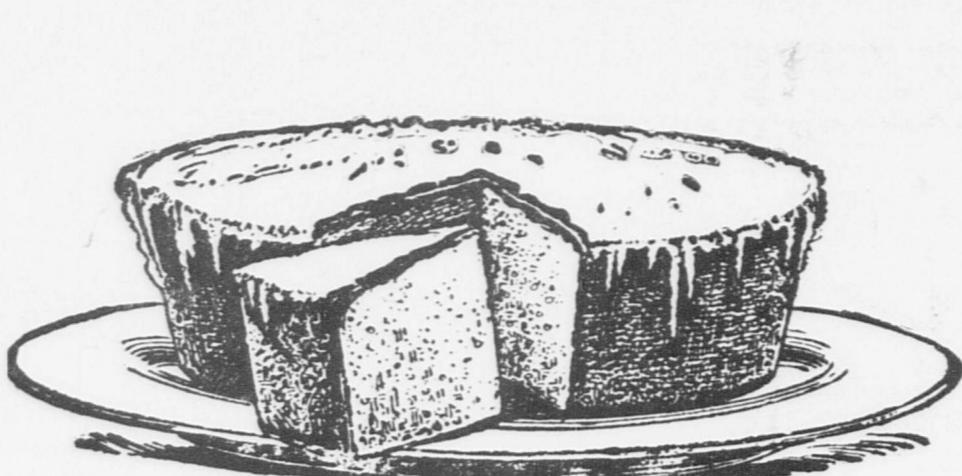

William A. Brady, the indefatigable theatrical manager, is reported to have declared that the principal ambition of his life is to bring about the recognition of his wife, Grace George, as a star of the first magnitude. He declares that, in his opinion, she is possessed of ability of a high order and that it will be his life work to discover the exact line of work to which she is best suited. This declaration on Mr. Brady's part has elicited from certain "smart" dramatic critics any number of caustic allusions to the beauties of conubial blindness, but the fact nevertheless remains that when Miss George shall be given exactly the right piece she will be able to show pretty nearly as good work as any of what we might call the "serious ingenues" of the American stage. There are several historical characters which Miss George could admirably depict, and it is surprising that her shrewd husband and manager has not already hit upon one of these as a vehicle for her exploitation.

Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott have come, have been seen and have not conquered New York City in the presentation of "The Merchant of Venice." While it is a fact that some critics would persistently refuse to regard Mr. Goodwin seriously after having known and admired him in his extravaganza, comic opera, farce comedy and comedy days, there are other critics who respect their work and would rejoice at the opportunity to hail Mr. Goodwin as a valuable addition to the ranks of the ambitious actors who have some regard for their artistic reputations. The general opinion, however, is that Mr. Goodwin is a failure as Shylock, and it is therefore improbable that his long reported intention to attempt the role of Richard III will be put into execution.

Mrs. Edith] Noyes-Porter.

The Musical Record and Review says: The woman composer is very much of a novelty in this country—and, indeed, in any land—for only of late years has this line of artistic work seemed to appeal to girls of musical ability.

Woman has interpreted the musical work of others probably to a degree, more extensive than has man, but when the woman of the older time had musical ideas she gave them to her brother or nearest friend, thus following the example of Mozart's sister.

Boston has a number of woman composers of worthy fame, among them Mrs. Edith Rowena Noyes-Porter. Mrs. Porter, the daughter of the well-known contralto, Mrs. Jeanette Noyes Rice, grew up in a musical atmosphere, and before her marriage was a pupil of Mr. George W. Chadwick in composition, and of Mr. E. A. MacDowell in piano. Ability to compose came early to this talented girl; at ten she composed a march which was played at a wedding; at fifteen five piano pieces of her composition were published.

It is already certain that the convention will be the large and most representative gathering of Association men ever held on this continent. It is expected that about one hundred gentlemen who are deeply interested in Association work will be present from Europe, Asia, Australia, South Africa and South America. Among the countries to be thus represented are: Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain and Ireland, Holland, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, China, India, Japan, Australia, South Africa, Brazil.

In connection with the Jubilee Convention, it is eminently proper that there should be a jubilee exhibit. The object of this exhibit is not only to show fittingly the evolution of the Association movement in North America during the past fifty years, but also adequately to represent the means used, the varied character, and quality of work done, and the results attained in the principal lines of activity in the different kinds of Associations. It is believed that this exhibit will be one of the most important features of the convention, and will be of far-reaching significance to the movement as a whole.

Castle Square Theatre.

The enterprise of the Castle Square Theatre management, in securing for production whatever there is best in all classes of plays, is again shown by the announcement of the laughs comedy "Because She Loved Him So." In this English adaptation of the original of Alexander Bisson and Henry Leclerc, made by William Gillette, is compressed the essence of many a bright French farce and the work has been done so skillfully that there is not a trace of the objectionable features so frequently met with in latter day comedies of the French school. The play proved an immense success during its long run at the Boston Museum two seasons ago and it has since gained the favor of audiences through the land. For the coming week's production at the Castle Square the leading characters have been cast as follows: Oliver West, John Craig; John Weatherby, John T. Graven; Thomas Weatherby, James A. Keane; Edward Marsh, Lindsay Morison; Rev. Lyman Langley, Edward Wade; Albert Pritchard, William J. Hasson; Mr. Jackson, Stanley Kent; Mr. Breslin, Waryn Cook; Gertrude West, Eva Taylor; Mrs. John Weatherby, Leonora Bradley; Donna Adeline Gonzalez, Maye Louise Algen; Margaret, Kate Ryan; Susan, Caroline Frances Cooke; Miss Julie Langley, Phyllis Ralston; Mrs. Jackson, Sadie H. BRAINTREE.

In the fall of 1893 a young couple just married made Braintree their home. Thursday they moved to Medford, much to the sorrow of their many friends. Nearly eight years Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Stone have enjoyed Braintree, and the hospitality of her people. They have been active in the First Congregational church, in the Choral Union of which he was president, in the Literary club and Cochato club.

The Ignaz Strauss Fan Co., will move at once to New York.

Memorial day exercises were held at the Monomoy school Wednesday afternoon, May 29th. The exercises were in the nature of a flag raising celebrating the removal of the flag pole to the east side of the building and the purchase of a new flag. The latter is 15 feet long and eight feet wide, and was bought by the pupils of the High and Grammar schools who attend school in the building.

Memorial exercises were held in the hall of the Jonas Perkins school, Wednesday afternoon by the pupils of the building assembled in Miss Thayer's room and had the exercises together. The Weymouth Veteran Firemen escorted by a drum corps marched through this village and past the Union Vets headquarters on Thursday evening. They were jubilant over defeating the Union which they succeeded in doing by about two feet. Had the Union had as favorable circumstances to play under, there might have been a different story.

Joseph Dunkerley of Central avenue met with a slight accident Friday night. At about 10:30, while riding on his bicycle at a good rate of speed, from Quincy to South Braintree, he ran into a team which he had failed to see in the darkness. Joe escaped without injury, but the wheel was demolished.

Mrs. Charles Lothrop of Summer street received word Saturday night of the death of her sister, Mrs. George Chamberlain of Hanover. The Hostess' Funny Story.

"A very dignified young man took a seat in a smoking car," said the hostess, who joined in the after dinner story telling. "Near him were three traveling salesmen, well dressed, jolly fellows, one of whom suggested a game of cards, and the others agreed. They appealed to the young man to take part and make up a four handed game."

"Thank you; I never play cards," came the response to the invitation.

"I am sorry for that. Will you have a cigar with us?" added the spokesman, producing his case.

"I am obliged to you, but I never smoke," replied the dignified young man.

"They thought they would jolly the young fellow out of dignity, so the leader produced a traveling companion and asked:

"As you do not play cards nor smoke you will not refuse to join us in a drink?"

"I thank you, gentlemen, but I never drink."

"With this a venerable man with a remarkable aspect sitting in the seat behind the young man reached forward and tapped him on the shoulder.

"I have heard what you have said to these men," said the sedate old fellow, "and I admire you for the stability of character which has enabled you to shun bad habits. I have a daughter in the parlor car, whom I should like to have you meet."

"I thank you, sir!" replied the young man, turning about and facing the gentleman, "but the fact is I never intend to marry!"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Cherokee Dish.

An article of food much used by the Cherokee is made from corn. The process is first to soak the corn in strong lye made from hickory ashes, just as white people in the country make hominy. This removes the hulls. The corn is then put into a large mortar made by hollowing out the end of a large log and is pounded by a huge pestle.

As the process of pounding goes on the crushed corn is removed from the mortar and riddled with a sieve made of cane and then fanned in the wind to remove the hulls. The "grit" as the course meal is called, is then replaced in the mortar and pounded into fine meal. It is then boiled up with cayenne pepper and other ingredients. A small amount of lye is left in the meal, and it has a tendency to preserve it for a long time. However, if the stuff sours, it is regarded as a great delicacy. It is known as "con-a-hanna." The food is sometimes varied by the addition of nuts, which is considered especially fine. With the nuts it is called "ca-nutch."

In the older times cakes were made of "con-a-hanna" by baking the substance in rudely constructed rock ovens or in hot ashes. These cakes would keep for a long time and, in connection with the wild game, provided nourishment for the Indians on their long hunts. Many of the older Cherokees still use the mortar and pestle to make the dish.—Kansas City Journal.

The King's Finger Bowl.

When a member of the royal family comes to dinner, it is a point of etiquette to provide none but the illustrious guest with a finger bowl at the end of the banquet. The other diners must get on somehow without that convenience.

The reason is a curious one. In early Georgian days one never knew who was loyal. Every other man might be a Jacobite in his secret heart. Now, it was a piece of Jacobite ritual whenever the toast of "The King" was drunk secretly to pass the goblet over any water that happened to be by the drinker. This was supposed to convert the toast into that of "The King Over the Water," the exiled Stuart at Rome or St. Germain.

On this becoming known the court insisted that there should be no water within reach of any guest, and the prohibition still holds.—London News.

Never Washed Herself.

Benign Old Lady (to little girl)—My little dear, do you wash your face and hands every morning?

"No, mum."

"Good gracious! That's perfectly dreadful. Do you wash your face in the middle of the day?"

"No, mum."

"Dear me! When do you wash yourself?"

"I never washes."

"Horrible! It is shocking how depraved the lower classes are! I must organize a society to see that children are properly washed. Tell me, little one, do you really never wash yourself?"

"No, mum. Mamma washes me every morning."

Not Anxious.

"You have quite a number of the poets," said Goodby, who was inspecting Woody's library. "Ah, there's Browning. Do you understand him?"

"No, I don't," said Woody.

"Ah," said Goodby, continuing his examination, "have you Praed?"

"Certainly not. What's the use of praying? I ain't anxious to understand him!"—Philadelphia Record.

Cheered by It.

"You are sure you can support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?" asked the heavy father.

"Sure," answered our hero, with the assurance of youth.

"Well, I'm glad to hear it. It's more than I can afford any longer!"—Indianapolis Press.

Counts His Toes.

He—they say a good puzzlist must learn how to handle his feet as well as his hands.

She—Then I wonder if the baby will be a puzzlist. He handles his feet all day.—Chicago News.

Good Afternoon

Senator Sprague will please accept thanks for State documents and reports including Manual for the General Court, blue book of 1900, and reports.The laying of a corner stone for a new building to be used in connection with the Quincy Mansion school, shows progress of this institution under Dr.
Willard, and is an indication that Quincy will continue to be known for its schools.Three or four names are already mentioned for the vacant office of Overseer of the Poor, to be filled by Mayor Hall. Perhaps the most prominent is that of Capt. Thaddeus H. Newcomb, a veteran of the Civil war, an ex-Councilman, and an ex-representative.
Ex-Councilman J. H. Cunningham, Quincy Tirrell and George H. Field have also been suggested.

Drift of Opinion.

The battle between the advocates of the two styles of handwriting in the public schools—the vertical and the differential—is still raging in many American cities, towns and villages.
Champions of the perpendicular lines throw out sly hints to the effect that an upright hand indicates uprightness of character, and that a slant in penmanship may be the outward and visible sign of a slant in conscience. But this really seems to be going a little too far in the heat of controversy.—New York Tribune.A woman in Ottawa, Kansas, is said to have offered one thousand dollars for proof of the existence of a Diety. The founder of the Christian religion told a story which may serve as a warning to those who think they can win the money. It was of a man who wanted to come back to earth and convince his brethren of the reality of a hereafter. To his request there was only this response: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." A woman who thinks she can pay for a foundation of faith will never find such a foundation.—New Bedford Standard.

Nantasket Fare.

In a recent article on the through line of the Old Colony street railway to Nantasket, it was stated that the fare would be ten cents from Quincy centre.
This was an error. Under the reduction made in fares, the fare from any part of Quincy or from Neponset or East Milton to Nantasket is the same, that is, fifteen cents. Boarding a car at any point in Quincy a five cent fare takes the passenger to the Quincy Point bridge. From this point to Hingham depot another five cent fare is collected and the third five cent fare between Hingham and Nantasket. The round trip tickets in use heretofore between Neponset and Nantasket have been discontinued.

Confirmation.

Bishop Lawrence made a visitation to Christ church Sunday evening. There was a very large attendance, standing room being at a premium. The church, especially about the chancel, was prettily decorated with flowers. Bishop Lawrence administered the rite of confirmation to a class of seventeen. He afterward gave an address to the class.
There was special music, and during the offertory Master John Finley sang a solo.

BASEBALL

Adams Academy played a five-innings game with the Roxbury High School on Saturday at Franklin Field. A sub-adult nine was sent over but they won handsomely, the score being 15 to 9.It was nearly four o'clock when the game began and it was agreed to play only five innings. In the first three innings the Adams boys scored fourteen runs and shut out the other side. Then an unfortunate accident occurred to Boyd, the catcher, which injured a finger of his right hand so badly that he will be unable to play again this year. Nickerson came in to catch, and other changes were made which did not seem to work well. The Roxbury team made nine runs in the two remaining innings. Hoxie pitched for Adams Academy, and after the accident to Boyd, Moore, who was scoring, volunteered to play right field. His work was free from errors.

West Quincy's Won.

The West Quincy's won again on Saturday by a close score, defeating the Carrollton school nine 8 to 7, in an interesting game. For five innings the visitors were retired without a run, while the home nine rolled up 6, but the Carrollton boys tied the score in the sixth and were one ahead when retired in the seventh. In their half of the seventh the West Quincy's made two runs which gave them the victory.

Whole Town Destroyed

Beaumont, Tex., June 3.—The little town of Jasper was entirely wiped out by fire yesterday. Every business house in the place and a number of residences were destroyed. Previous to the fire the post office had been blown open and robbed. The safe of the county treasurer also was found to have been blown open and rifled of its contents. The conclusion of the people of Jasper is that the robbers blew open these safes and then set fire to the town to cover up their crime.

PAPERMAKERS' STRIKE

Closes Nearly Twenty Mills at Holyoke

LONG STRUGGLE PROBABLE

Due to Refusal to Pay Two Dollars For Eight Hour Day to Firemen—Two Concerns Have Granted Request—Labor Troubles Elsewhere

Holyoke, Mass., June 3.—The largest strike in western Massachusetts in recent years began when 2000 papermakers left their places of employment in the paper mills in this city.

This means that nearly 20 establishments are closed, and will be closed for some time as both sides to the controversy are firm.

The strike is the result of the refusal of the owners of the mills to grant the firemen an 8-hour day with a minimum wage of $2. The mills asked until July 8 to consider the matter.

The firemen decided upon Saturday as the time limit, and their position was endorsed by Eagle Lodge of papermakers, the strongest lodge of the order in the country.

Mayor Chapin and representatives of the Business Men's association tried up to the last minute to bring about some sort of a settlement, but their labors were in vain. It is understood that the state board of arbitration will come here today.

George B. Holbrook of the American Writing Paper company, which has 11 mills affected, said that the proposal of the company presented to the firemen on Tuesday night was final; that the company had nothing more to do with the men, but awaited results. He deplored the action of the tour workers and regretted that they did not see fit to accept the proposition of the company. Mr. Holbrook said that, in his opinion, the proposition of the company was fair to all concerned, and he attached blame for the action of the tour workers to unwise leadership.

The Valley Paper company and the Whiting Paper company are not affected, having granted the requests of the firemen.

Meetings of the firemen were held last evening, and it was voted to call a meeting of the women operatives for tomorrow evening, at which time a union will be instituted. Pickets will be posted at all of the mills.

Advised Not to Join Militia

Boston, June 3.—Action was taken at yesterday's meeting of the Central Labor Union declaring against the advisability of members of organized labor joining the ranks of the militia because "experience has taught that it is the purpose of the ruling class (the capitalistic exploiters) to use the military organizations and national guard to maintain the present enslavement of the laboring class, and to maintain the unjust decisions of the courts in injunction cases."

Without Recognition of Union

Hartford, June 3.—The striking machinists employed by the Pratt & Cady company, about 135 in number, have accepted the terms of the company, which include the granting of the nine-hour day with 10 hours' pay, without recognition of the union. They returned to work today. In this action they follow the example set by the 1890 striking employees of the Pratt & Whitney and the American Bicycle company's shops.

Boston Labor Troubles

Boston, June 3.—The nine-hour committee of the Machinists' union estimates that 2200 machinists in Boston and vicinity have secured the 9-hour work day and advance in wages demanded, and that 5000 other workers within the territory named have secured shorter hours. The machinists' strike is now confined to five shops, employing in all 120 hands.

Alleged Forgery of Vouchers

Butte, Mont., June 3.—Lieutenant J. M. Neill, an ex-officer of the regular army, stationed at the presidio, was arrested home on instructions from San Francisco, charging him with forgery of vouchers in the army three years ago.

He was practically dismissed from the army at that time on a charge of having been implicated in some alleged peculations at the presidio, but the shortage was made good and nothing further was heard of the affair until the arrest.

Situation at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, June 3.—The striking machinists of this city have been further reinforced by 450 men from three shops. While concessions are daily being made by many firms, new strikes are of frequent occurrence and the number of strikers has not decreased. It is estimated that 2000 machinists in the city are idle.

Harry Smith, a Worcester, Mass., horseman, was thrown from his mount in the Country club steeplechase at Brookline, Mass., and received a fractured elbow and a general shaking up and bruising.

Burglars entered the River Edge, N. J., postoffice and stole a box containing $50 worth of stamps and $600 in cash.

PERHAPS FATAL QUARREL

In Which a Bottle and Fists Are Said to Have Figured

Falmouth, Mass., June 3.—Edward Dalmadge, a farm laborer in Swansea, lies in a critical condition at his home as the result of an assault, alleged to have been committed upon him by Frank Estrebrook, and the latter is locked up in this city.

Estrebrook says that he and Dalmadge were two of a party that gathered at a corner grocery Saturday night, and in a dispute Dalmadge struck him with a bottle. In self-defense, he says, he hit Dalmadge a single blow on the temple with his fist.

The blow was a heavy one, and rendered Dalmadge unconscious. After trying to revive him, he was carried home and a physician summoned, but he was unable to arouse him, and the man has not yet recovered consciousness.

Lawson's Statement

Boston, June 3.—Thomas W. Lawson says, in regard to the statement bearing on the yachting controversy: "I know of nothing that has in any way changed or affected the status of the Independence since the publication of my letter of May 25." This refers to the dispatch from New York saying that Mr. Lawson has agreed to turn the Independence over to the New York Yacht club for the summer races.

Not Quite Quite Ready for Business

Boston, June 3.—The formal opening of a portion of the new overhead system of the Boston Elevated railroad, which was to have taken place this morning, has been postponed one week, in view of the fact that numerous minor details of construction remain to be cleared up and the desire of the company to have everything in complete order before the line is opened to public patronage.

Pleased, But Not Surprised

Boston, June 3.—Admiral Sampson said yesterday to a reporter that he felt pleased and gratified at the reported decision of the board of awards to place his portrait on the face of the Santiago medals. The admiral did not treat the report of the decision of the board as news, and, in fact, admitted that he had been aware for some time of the board's probable action.

Boots May Become Reconciled

Boston, June 3.—Action was taken at yesterday's meeting of the Central Labor Union declaring against the advisability of members of organized labor joining the ranks of the militia because "experience has taught that it is the purpose of the ruling class (the capitalistic exploiters) to use the military organizations and national guard to maintain the present enslavement of the laboring class, and to maintain the unjust decisions of the courts in injunction cases."

MADE A GOOD SHOWING

The Independence Takes Her Initial Spin

HAD A SEVEN-KNOT BREEZE

Gave a Performance Satisfactory to Her Captain, Designer and Owner —Minor Details Which Were Overlooked Can Be Easily Remedied

Boston, June 4.—Another intended cup defender, the pride and hope of Yankee land, the Independence, was put through a joggling to stretch sails and rigging in Massachusetts bay yesterday, and from what little actual sailing was done, the Crowninshield yacht certainly showed herself to be very speedy.

The Independence was kept in the wind, a seven-knot breeze, from the eastward, for two hours, and under three lowered sails she slipped about with scarcely any commotion under her bow except when the long sleepy roll of the ocean let her flat floor slap the water. She answered her balance much quicker, and acted most satisfactorily to her skipper, Captain Hank Haff; her designer, Mr. Crowninshield, and her owner,
Mr. Lawson, who watched her from his steam yacht.

Her sails were marvels of beauty, especially the two broad sails, which sailed almost to perfection, while the big main sail, one of the largest ever spread by any yacht, gave every indication of being in similar shape when it is pulled up on the boom and two more bat-tens put in the leach. Yesterday it flapped somewhat, but this defect can easily be remedied.

The yacht was given a grand ovation, both going down the harbor and on her return. About every boat in the harbor with steam up gave the yacht three whistles as she went down the bay, and the tug nearly exhausted her own steam answering them.

Outside of Boston light the wind came out from the eastward, and the yacht met a long, heavy roll. She met the swell, however, in line shape, although considerable spray was thrown out from the slapping of her flat floor.

Before the light was reached, the crew had started on the mainsail, but it took half an hour before it was fairly set. Even then it required considerable more muscle to get it in working order, and as the two lower battens had been overlooked in the rush to get it set, the sail flapped badly along the leach. Again very little effort had been made in pulling it well out on the boom or on the gaff, so that it was badly puckered along the foot and on the top. However, it gave every indication of being in better shape another time, and so Captain Haff ordered the tow line cast off and the two head sails broken out. The jib had already been set up in stops, so that the yacht quickly gained headway, going off on the starboard tack, with Captain Haff at the wheel.

Under these three sails, with her sheets well started, the Independence romped along very fast. No effort was made to haul the boat close on the wind, but with a good rap full, she headed out to sea, meeting the swell grandly, and rising over it buoyantly. Even with the swell there was but little froth under the bow, and what wave was turned aside did not come back along the counter to retard her progress.

The wake was clean and fair; in fact, except from the spatter of the flat floor of her bow striking the water, there was little indication of a wake. She seemed to heel quickly, but not far down, say 25 percent, but as she is designed for a 115-foot waterline when under sail, this sail was quite satisfactory.

Supposed Work of Robbers

East Knox, Me., June 4.—The entire front part of the store of Merton Sweet, containing the postoffice, was blown out with dynamite yesterday, and the building was totally burned. In addition to the mall matter in the office,

there was a large loss. It is supposed to have been the work of burglars. The safe, however, was intact.

Must Have Five-Cent Fare

Westbrook, Me., June 4.—The aldermen

last night refused to grant further privileges to the Portland Street Railway company until a 5-cent fare to Portland, a distance of five miles, is granted. The company had asked to connect their tracks with the Windham

Electric road.

Escaped From Quarantine

Bangor, Me., June 4.—Miss Lillian

Stover of Dexter, who escaped from quarantine there last week, and who has since been in hiding, was located yesterday at West Orono. A guard has been established about the house, and the authorities will further investigate the case.

Registered Letters Stolen

Springfield, Mass., June 4.—Postoffice

Inspector Bullman is in the city investigating the theft of several registered letters from the Springfield postoffice.

One of the clerks in the Springfield postoffice is missing and is suspected. The amount of the loss is not known.

Hurt by Falling Chimney

Boston, June 4.—John Henchon, one of three men upon whom a chimney fell yesterday, while they were tearing down a building, has a fractured skull.

His chance of recovery is small. John

W. McLeod has a broken leg. Charles

Cox was only slightly bruised.

It was nearly 3 o'clock when the yacht started off again. When she filled away good progress had been made towards Gloucester. Preparations were then made for the setting the gaff topsail, but it took nearly 20 minutes to get the head of the sail laced on to the topmast, and by that time the east wind had flattened out completely, leaving the yacht rolling around in the swell.

There appeared to be no indications of any more wind from any direction,

UDEVILLE.

Assessors' Notice.

TO the inhabitants of City of QUINCY and all other persons liable to pay taxes thereon: You are hereby notified to bring in to the Assessors of said City.

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay Taxes.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise are particularly requested to file their returns with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested are requested to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the tax assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up the Returns of Statements:

Number of Polls 29 years and upward—Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and stocks in Insurance, Manufacturing and other enterprises; Properties charging or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise, and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $100, in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Wagons, other than near Carts, less than one year old; and Savings and Sweep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 29 of Chapter 11 of the Public Statutes.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or assistant collector a false or fraudulent list of his estate, or specifies property as a true list of his estates, not exempt from taxation, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year.

MORTGAGED PROPERTY.—Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real property may bring in to the Assessors a statement of such real estate lies within such time as shall be specified for bringing in the lists as provided in Sect. 38, or Chap. 11 of the Public Statutes, a statement under oath of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name of every holder of the same, and an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, if a recorded mortgage includes in one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgaged property in each estate or part of the estate shall be given in such statement. The assessors shall, from such statements or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate parts of such estates that are the interests of mortgagees and mortgagors respectively, and shall assess the same in proportion to the value of the mortgaged real estate; a statement is not brought as herein provided, no tax on such real estate shall be invalidated for the reason that a mortgagee's interest therein has not been assessed to him.—Chap. 175, Acts of 1875.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the Real Estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 14, 15 and 16 of Chap. 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed to pay the taxes, no statement or return is made, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the Assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Banks will be furnished to all applicants.

William G. Nixon testified to having been publisher of Mrs. Eddy's books until 1893, and knowing both parties to this suit. Asked if he knew the attitude of Christian Scientists generally regarding Mrs. Woodbury, he said he did not. His attention was called to the alleged libelous communication

published in the Christian Science Journal, which he had read, and was asked what his understanding was of the meaning of the passage, and who was the person referred to. His reply was:

"Mrs. Woodbury, the plaintiff in this case." His cross-examination by Mr.

Bartlett was quite lengthy.

The last witness of the day was Judge

S. J. Hanna, who said he had been away from the city for seven weeks. He had been a county judge at Council

Bluffs, Ia., and was now a student of Christian Science.

A DOLEFUL PROCESSION

Tows the Disabled Constitution

Into Newport Harbor

STEEL MAST COLLAPSED

Sails and Rigging Can Be Used Again

Races Scheduled For June 15 and 17 Will Have to Be Postponed—May Be Repeated in Two Weeks

Newport, R. I., June 5.—The Constitution, which left here so proudly yesterday afternoon, with sails glistening in the sun and her hull bending gracefully before the brisk breeze, came slowly into the harbor just before 5 o'clock, looking more like the derrick boat which stepped her mast at Bristol to win the candidate for the world's yachting championship. The Mount Morris, tender of the Constitution, and the Herreshoff steam yacht Eugenia, had lines out to the big ship, and at a small's pace they were dragging her towards her moorings.

While dashing along in a good whole-sail breeze off Brenton's Reef lightship, with three lower sails set, the big hollow steel mast on the Constitution collapsed like a boy's blow pipe, through the sudden breaking of the starboard and windward spreader. The mast broke off only a few feet below this spreader, about three-fifths of the length of the mast above the deck, and as the topmast was carried away at the same time, none of the spars, except the boom, struck the deck, and the latter only hit it a gentle blow, which did not injure the hull at all.

Three seamen had just come down from the masthead, after taking in the clutopssal, but the wreckage swept overboard. Second Mate Nelson. He was promptly hauled on board, however, without sustaining anything more than a few bruises. The Constitution will be taken to Bristol where another steel mast is nearly finished. The yacht will be immediately refitted, but it will probably be 10 days or two weeks before she is in shape to sail again, so that the races off this port, scheduled for June 15 and 17, will have to be postponed.

The trial yesterday was the second one given the Constitution since her arrival from Bristol, where additional backstays had been rigged to strengthen the mast. Monday she went out in a good southwest breeze and set her No. 3 clutopssal, carrying it without apparent effort. Yesterday a new main-sail was bent, and the No. 2 clutopssal set over it, but as both stretched considerably took all the forenoon to get them in satisfactory shape.

The main-sail then was hoisted and preparations made for a spin outside the harbor. The wind at the time was blowing about 15 or 18 knots, and, as the tide was strong, there was quite a lump in the sea in the channel at the mouth of the harbor.

The No. 2 clutopssal, however, was set, and, with jib and foresail up, the sloop started away from her moorings at a lively pace. There was more wind outside the harbor, but the sea was smoother, and the Constitution was swung round and headed out to sea. The wind at this time was blowing about 20 knots from the southwest, but the sea was not heavy.

As the Constitution worked off shore she felt the wind considerably stronger, and suddenly the lashings on the clutopssal gave way, and the big sail began to slap and swing around the topmast.

Three seamen went aloft to clear away the wreckage, and send down the spars. This took some 10 or 15 minutes. The yacht was then headed to the southeast. The yacht at the time was about two miles due south of Brenton's Reef lightship, going along at a tremendous pace under three lower sails, well heeled over in the breeze. The wind was probably the stiffest that the Constitution had ever encountered, but she stood it in good shape, and made great time for a riddle.

Suddenly the starboard lower spreader, over the end of which run two of the mastheads, spread, made of inch steel wire rope, collapsed or broke off on the mast. This brought the strain on the three remaining steel shrouds, which gave way and almost at the same instant the big steel mast began to fall over the port.

The mast collapsed or bent about three-fifths of the way above the deck, or a few feet below the lower spreader, which broke. As it went over the topmast shrouds broke that wooden spar in two pieces. Part of the topmast was saved, but some 10 feet of it went drifting out to sea. Both head sails were swept into the water, but the bowsprit remained intact. Both the upper shrouds were broken short off when the mast went down.

The crew at once set to work unlacing the mainsail and getting it aboard, and within an hour the great mass of canvas was on the deck. After the two head sails had been gathered aboard and as much of the wire rigging as could be lashed to the boom and the remains of the mast, the yacht in tow of the Herreshoff steam yacht Eugenia, was taken back into the harbor.

All the sails, and, except for the two masthead shrouds, which go over the spreader, practically all the wire rigging on the boat, was uninjured and can probably be used again.

The yacht presents a sorry appearance as she lays off the torpedo station, with the great steel spar bent down until the top almost reaches the deck. The boom is lying off to port, giving her a slight list, while the gaff is lashed to the remains of the port chain plates. Her canvas is also aboard, well soaked in salt water.

Police Commissioners Removed

New Haven, June 5.—The sensation started by the sudden retirement by the police commissioners of two police captains and a sergeant on the ground that they were physically incapacitated, culminated yesterday when Mayor Studley removed four members of the police board. The retirement of the officers mentioned was followed by a citizens' meeting, at which a protest was made. Mayor Studley called a hearing yesterday, and, after evidence was given of the fitness of the officers retired, the commissioners were removed.

Boston, June 5.—James F. Moran of Chelsea won the 25-mile motor-paced race at Charles River park last night from Albert Champion and Arthur Ross. The race was a fast one from the start. Agulmado, through Guevarra, advised Callies to surrender immediately. After this interview General Wade and General Sumner informed Guevarra that Callies must notify the latter, not later than next Monday, of his decision in the matter. The American generals declined to guarantee that Callies would not be persecuted.

Erie Is Champion of Great Lakes

Cleveland, June 5.—The 100-mile race from Cleveland to Erie between the passenger steamers City of Erie and the Tashmoo was the most noteworthy race ever sailed on fresh water. The Erie covered the distance in 4 hours, 19 minutes, and 9 seconds, passing the steamer at Erie 45 seconds ahead of the Tashmoo. Aside from winning the speed championship of the Great Lakes, the Erie won $100,000 for those who bet on her. Both boats were stripped to fighting trim.

No Extra Session of Congress

Washington, June 5.—There will be no extra session of congress this year. After a two hours' meeting of the cabinet yesterday, Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following statement, which was prepared at the meeting: "The president has determined that the existing conditions do not require or warrant calling congress together during the present summer, or making any change in the policy hitherto pursued and announced in regard to the Philippine islands."

CAPE COLONY OPERATIONS

Placed In Charge of General French, Indicating That Lord Kitchener Attaches Much Importance to the Invasion—The Valkfontein Fight

London, June 5.—The war office last night published the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, June 4: "Jamestown (Cape Colony) surrendered to Kritzinger's command on the morning of June 2, after four hours' fighting. The town guard and local volunteers were overpowered before our pursuing columns could come up. Our casualties were three killed and two wounded. The Boer loss is said to have been greater. Two stores were looted, and the garrison was released. Have placed General French in charge of the operations in Cape Colony."

Details received regarding the fighting at Vlakfontein show that it was one of the most desperate engagements of the war. General Dixon's column was traversing the district and establishing posts, when it was attacked by 1200 Boers under Commandant Kelp. The Boers were so close that 50 British fell at the first volley.

The yeomanry held the position, protecting the guns until they were nearly decimated, and then, finding it impossible to save the guns, the artillerymen shot the gun horses to prevent the Boers from using the guns.

The column recovered from the shock of the unexpected attack. The Derbyshires charged with bayonets, and, after a short, desperate fight, drove off the Boers, and recovered the guns. The Derbyshires and yeomanry both lost heavily.

Probably No Further Cases of Moves That the Redistricting Bill Be Referred to the Next General Court.

The smallpox patient and the people under quarantine are getting along nicely. A story was put in circulation Tuesday night, that the two men who boarded with Mr. Machek, and who are now under quarantine at the house near the City stables, were not getting enough to eat, and that they had threatened to break away.

The fact of the case is that the people are being supplied with plenty of good food but the two men object to having Mrs. McLeod cook for them. Just why they should object to Mrs. McLeod's cooking as they boarded with her up to the time the small pox case was discovered, is hard to understand. The physicians said that if they have not already taken the disease they will not, as all danger from further contamination has been passed.

The Board of Health say that everything that the people under quarantine ask for is given them, and up to the present time but two requests have been denied. These were from one of the two men who asked for half a dozen Blackstone cigars and a quart of whiskey. Both were refused as the Board of Health wisely decided that the city was not called upon to furnish whiskey and cigars.

The Board of Health are doing everything possible to stamp out the disease and every citizen should aid and assist them in every possible way.

JACKSONVILLE DISASTER.

The response for the relief of the city of Jacksonville, Fla., which recently suffered a conflagration, has been entirely inadequate, and a Relief Association which includes the Mayor of Jacksonville, the bishop of Florida and others have sent Mayor Hall a new appeal under date of May 13:

"The Relief Committee of Jacksonville sent out a statement some days ago in answer to the numerous inquiries which the committee have received. It was then too soon to estimate the extent of the needs of the city. It is now ten days since the great fire, and we are beginning to realize the greatness of the calamity which has befallen us. We have received many generous donations in the way of supplies of food and clothing, but we find ourselves confronted with the need of clearing away the debris and maintaining order and discipline, trying to prevent sickness and in caring for those who are sick.

"It is impossible, without extreme suffering, to render ten thousand or more people homeless; it is impossible to meet all the cases of need at once. The sanitary condition of this city must be perfect and maintained, and unless we can have the aid of the charitable people of the United States we are compelled to acknowledge our inability to cope fully with the situation.

"Only those who have been in the city can realize the nature of the distress of many who have been turned out of houses and homes, or can appreciate the danger of sickness from the huddled condition of the people, making the situation here alarming. It will take a very large amount of money, at the smallest estimate, to care for the actual needs of the people and put the city in a proper condition. Our duty now compels us to call upon the generosity and always ready people of this country for assistance in this our hour of need. Make checks payable to C. E. Garner, President Jacksonville Relief Association."

Mr. William Donaldson, 690 Blue Hill, Dorchester, Mass., built these houses in 1870 and roofed them with MF. SMALLPOX AT WORCESTER

Hundreds of Patients in a Hospital Have Been Exposed

Worcester, Mass., June 5.—Three cases of well-defined smallpox are reported in Worcester. The victims are Dr. Charles B. Stevens, Dr. Campbell of Marlboro, and Alfred Gilbert, a vaudeville performer. Gilbert came to Worcester two weeks ago, and, being taken ill, went to a hospital. His case was diagnosed as chickenpox. He recovered slowly, and was to have been discharged yesterday.

Monday night Dr. Campbell was taken violently ill, and Dr. Stevens was taken sick yesterday. Both had been in attendance on Gilbert. All three cases were found yesterday to be smallpox. Gilbert has been in the isolation ward all the time, but the doctors have been on constant rounds through the hospital and hundreds of patients in the wards have been exposed.

The two doctors are so ill that it has been found impossible to send them to the city isolation hospital or the pest house, and they will be kept in the isolation ward at the city hospital. Strenuous efforts will be made to prevent the spread of the disease through the institution.

JUDGE HANNA'S DESIRE

Would Have Mrs. Eddy Win Famous Libel Suit

LETTERS ARE INTRODUCED

In the Effort to Show Malice on Part of Defendant Previous to Alleged Libel—Mrs. Woodbury Takes the Stand In Her Own Behalf

Boston, June 5.—Mrs. Helen M. Winchester of Malden, who had been a student under Mrs. Woodbury, was the last witness yesterday in the trial of the $150,000 libel suit brought by Mrs. Josephine C. Woodbury against Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy. She testified that she bought Boston Herald of June 5, 1899, containing the alleged libellous message, but could not remember whether she did this of her own accord or at the suggestion of plaintiff.

There was some discussion as to the order of evidence submitted as to the responsibility of Mrs. Eddy for the publication of the alleged libellous message in the Herald, and pending argument thereon, the jury was excused, and the court later adjourned until today.

Mr. Peabody admitted that he was obliged to go back several years, but explained that malicious animal magnetism was the highest crime known to Christian Scientists.

The court stated to Mr. Peabody that on the question of malice he had allowed him to go way back to 1895. But coming to the question of an act alleged to be an act described in the libel, the attorney for the plaintiff must confine himself to a time much closer to the alleged libel.

Mr. Peabody admitted that he was obliged to go back several years, but explained that malicious animal magnetism was the highest crime known to Christian Scientists.

Mrs. Woodbury denied that she had taught me 15 years before, was a theory incarnate of the devil.

Court read that portion of a letter referring to "immaculate conception" and "incarnated by the devil."

Question—What did you say?

Answer—I told Mrs. Eddy that her theory of mental generation, which she had taught me 15 years before, was a theory incarnate of the devil.

Question—Did you, after quitting Christian Science, publish reflections on, or criticism of, Mrs. Eddy and her faith?

Mr. Eddy—Objected.

The court—You must go further and show that they came to the knowledge of Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Peabody urged that the testimony showed that Mrs. Eddy knew of the articles.

Question ruled out.

Mrs. Woodbury was then excused.

THE HOLYOKE STRIKE

Textile Operatives Ask That Demands of Firemen Be Granted

Holyoke, Mass., June 5.—The state board of arbitration arrived in the city yesterday and was in session with the mayor and with some members of the paper companies.

Nothing new has developed in the strike situation, except the petition of the textile workers, sent yesterday to the American Thread company, asking that the company grant the demands of the firemen. If these demands are not met, it is generally conceded that the textile operatives in all of the mills in the city will leave work and sympathy with the firemen.

The Central Labor union last night endorsed the strike, and all subordinate unions in the city have done the same.

Labor's Unique Demand

Chicago, June 5.—For the first time in the history of Chicago unionists, a labor body is about to present the demand that its employers' organization shall disband. The International Association of Machinists, through its local officers, will insist on the dissolution of the Chicago Association of Machinery Manufacturers after Thursday, unless the members of that organization show some disposition to settle with their striking machinists. More than 2000 of the latter are now out.

Tunnel Strike Is Over

New York, June 5.—After a conference on the rapid transit tunnel strike, lasting until late last night, it was announced that the strike was over, and that an agreement had been signed. It is understood that the men who have gone out are to be reinstated, and that concessions have been made on both sides, in order to reach an agreement.

To Hire Non-Union Men

Waterbury, Conn., June 5.—The Cross & Spiers Manufacturing company, the Waterbury Machine company and the C. J. Manville Machine company have notified their striking employees that their places will be filled with non-union men. The strikers have posted pickets about these factories.

Will Give Reason Later

Boston, June 5.—Robert W. Garrity, president of the Boston Central Labor union, tendered his resignation, to take effect at once. In his letter he states that he will give the reason for his action at the next meeting of the union. There is no change in the strike situation.

Society Favorites Married

Washington, June 5.—On noon yesterday at the residence of Admiral Hichborn, with the setting of palms, white roses and lilies, Miss Martha Hichborn, the acknowledged belle and beauty of Washington's fashionable society, became the bride of James G. Blaine, Rev. Dr. Radcliffe of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church officiated. The marriage, which was followed by a wedding breakfast, was witnessed only by a small family party. Later in the day Mr. Blaine and his bride left for New York, from where they will sail for a three months' trip in Europe, after which they will make their home in New York city.

Cornell Far Ahead

Buffalo, June 5.—Representatives of 16 of the leading colleges and universities in the east and west participated in yesterday's intercollegiate track and field events, which marked the real opening of the stadium at the Pan-American grounds. The showing in points made by the different colleges were: Cornell, 28; Chicago, 17; Georgetown and Pennsylvania, 9 each; Westminister, 7; Beloit and Minnesota, 6 each; Yale, Princeton, Purdue and New York, 5 each; Amherst, 2.

Made Desperate Break For Liberty

Fort Scott, Kan., June 5.—J. L. Whittaker, for whose arrest the Boston Police, three burglars, were being transferred from a cabin from the court to jail last night, when a friend three revolver into the cabin. The robbers shot Constable Boyd dead, jumped from the cabin and boarded a street car, which they attempted to seize. The motorman struck Whittaker over the head with a motor bar, fatally injuring him, and the other two men were captured after both had been wounded.

But Stender Hope of Recovery

Washington, June 5.—While Dr. Rixey is slightly more hopeful in his talk, Mrs. McKinley's condition cannot be said to show any material change. One of the president's visitors last night said that it was conceded that Mrs. McKinley was in a very grave condition. There was hope of the outcome, he said, but it was a very slender hope.

Explosion Released Deadly Gases

Iron Mountain, Mich., June 5.—Eight miners were killed yesterday in the seventh level of the Ludington shaft, Chaplin mine, by the deadly fumes resulting from an explosion of dynamite. Nearly 30 children were rendered fatherless by the explosion.

Deadly Work of Crazy Doctor

Singapore, June 5.—A Malay doctor named Ibrahim ran amuck and killed six people with a spear, seriously injuring nine others. He was then knocked down and died from the effects of a fractured skull.

VERDICT FOR MRS. EDY

Ordered by Judge in Famous Libel Suit

EXCEPTIONS BY PLAINTIFF

Case Will Probably Go to Supreme Court—Mrs. Woodbury Gave Further Testimony of an Interesting Character—Argument of Counsel

Boston, June 6.—"I have examined this libel with great care, both while the arguments were going on and during the trial. The plaintiff says that suddenly the motive of the writer changed, and her attitude towards the church and its progress in the world was abandoned, and that she immediately began an attack on this plaintiff. Counsel proceeded to expound the passages of scriptures quoted, showing that they were used in a purely spiritual sense. He severely denounced the action of the plaintiff in distorting the language of the Bible so as to make it apply to herself, and said that it showed a morbid mind struggling after notoriety. Even if the evidence was overflowing with malice it would not relieve the plaintiff from the necessity of giving proof of actual identification." This the plaintiff failed to do.

Mr. Peabody in reply said that the parties on this suit, Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Eddy, were once co-workers in a religious movement. He spoke of the letter addressed to Mrs. Woodbury, but sent to her husband, in which reference was made to the child being illegitimate and of the immediate conception. He submitted that this was an attack. As to the malicious attitude contained in the letters, he did not feel that he need refer to them, they having been read by Judge Bell.

The by-laws were then spoken of, and the excommunication of Mrs. Woodbury forever from the church. It appears that the Christian Scientists believe that the race were as follows: The derby stake of 6000 sovereigns each, for 3-year-olds; the nominator of the winner to receive 500 sovereigns, the owner of the second horse 300 sovereigns, and the owner of the third horse 200 sovereigns out of the stakes; about one mile and a half. There were 270 subscribers. Twenty-five horses started.

Whitney's Colt Wins

Epson, Eng., June 6.—William C. Whitney's brown colt Volodyovski won the derby yesterday. The conditions of the race were as follows: The derby stake of 6000 sovereigns each, for 3-year-olds; the nominator of the winner to receive 500 sovereigns, the owner of the second horse 300 sovereigns, and the owner of the third horse 200 sovereigns out of the stakes; about one mile and a half. There were 270 subscribers. Twenty-five horses started.

"What did she (Mrs. Eddy) do to prepare her libel?" asked Mr. Peabody. "It is said that the devil may quote scriptures to serve his purpose. She quoted scriptures that she knew her followers would understand. I say that the human heart is constituted in a certain way, and such an attack upon a woman, made at the time it was, when she was newly bereaved, I call for expressions stronger than the English language affords. It was most satanic in its character. When she completed her message she sent it to whom—to Hanna. Who is he? The most prominent and influential member of the Christian Science Publishing society."

The court said he did not need to have such ground gone over again.

Mr. Peabody continued an attack upon the faith for several minutes.

Mr. Elder briefly replied, taking exceptions to such criticism, which he called "monstrous falsehood."

Judge Bell then summed up, and ordered a verdict for the defendant.

Both Above Twenty-Nine Knots

Washington, June 6.—The navy department has received the official reports of the recent trials of the torpedo boats Barney and Bagley, the former making 29.04 and the latter 29.15 knots.

The court ruled that the copy of The Herald could not be admitted.

Mrs. Woodbury then resumed the witness stand, and identified letters which she had written to Mrs. Eddy and the replies, which were read by counsel. The plaintiff was asked if she had ever practiced "malicious animal magnetism," as was charged in one of Mrs. Eddy's letters, and she said she had not.

Mrs. Woodbury was asked what was the belief on the part of members of the First Church of Christ regarding Mrs. Eddy's being the discoverer and founder of Christian Science and her relation to them, and she replied:

"The infallibility of Mrs. Eddy and the necessity of accepting that doctrine of infallibility is a qualification for membership in the church."

"What was the belief as to her mission in establishing a new religion?"

"That she was specially selected by God as the special object of a special revelation, that revelation being Christian Science, and that she had the same relation to Christian Science that Jesus Christ had to Christianity 2000 years ago. It was also believed that she was the woman referred to in Revelations, whose mission it was to supersede Christianity, she being the author of a book which had been prophesied."

These answers were admitted, subject to objections, but questions regarding the belief of members as to the infallibility of "Science and Health" were ruled out.

Witness said that the belief of the members of the First Church of Christ is the same today as it was two years ago, when she was a member of the church.

Resuming his argument, Mr. Elder said that part of the annual message which preceded the alleged libelous part was congratulation over the progress of the church and of truth. But the plaintiff says that suddenly the motive of the writer changed, and her attitude towards the church and its progress in the world was abandoned, and that she immediately began an attack on this plaintiff. Counsel proceeded to expound the passages of scriptures quoted, showing that they were used in a purely spiritual sense. He severely denounced the action of the plaintiff in distorting the language of the Bible so as to make it apply to herself, and said that it showed a morbid mind struggling after notoriety. Even if the evidence was overflowing with malice it would not relieve the plaintiff from the necessity of giving proof of actual identification." This the plaintiff failed to do.

Mr. Peabody in reply said that the parties on this suit, Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Eddy, were once co-workers in a religious movement. He spoke of the letter addressed to Mrs. Woodbury, but sent to her husband, in which reference was made to the child being illegitimate and of the immediate conception. He submitted that this was an attack. As to the malicious attitude contained in the letters, he did not feel that he need refer to them, they having been read by Judge Bell.

"Taking the libel itself, I see nothing which can in any fair way be said to indicate the plaintiff in the first part of the libel. The only thing in the libel, it seems to me, which can by any reasonable interpretation be said to serve as means of identification is the word "widow." The words "widow" and "widhood" occur in the latter part of the message.

"I have come to the conclusion that even that reference does not absolutely identify the plaintiff, and it seems to me that the plaintiff has not made out a case here which I can let go of. I shall, therefore, be obliged to order a verdict for the defendant."

With these words, in the superior court, Judge Bell yesterday afternoon brought to a sudden and unexpected close the famous $150,000 libel suit, brought by Mrs. Josephine Curtis Woodbury of Boston against Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy of Concord, N. H., the founder and present head of the Christian Science church.

A few minutes later, the jury, which had been excluded while arguments were being made, was summoned into the court room. After examining briefly the cause for this course, Judge Bell ordered the jury to find for the defendant, which it accordingly did in the usual form.

Counsel for Mrs. Woodbury filed exceptions on all the questions passed upon. They have not yet decided upon a definite course of action, but authorized it to be stated that they expect to carry the case to the supreme court.

This extremely important and far-reaching decision of Judge Bell was given in response to one of two motions offered by Mr. Elder, senior counsel for Mrs. Eddy, at 12:45 o'clock, at which time the plaintiff rested her case. This was that a verdict for the defendant be ordered on the evidence as it stood.

The other motion, which was not sustained, was that the two counts in the declaration, referring to the publication in the two Christian Science periodicals, be stricken out.

During the trial yesterday Mr. Peabody argued in support of his offer in evidence of a copy of the Boston Herald containing the alleged libelous communication to the First Church of Christ.

Its introduction was objected to on the ground that Mrs. Eddy had nothing to do whatever with the publication of The Herald, and therefore it was irrelevant in this action. Mr. Peabody contended that Mrs. Eddy is the dominating power in the Christian Science religion; that everything is done at her instigation and approval, and that there was a duty imposed by her upon the publication society to give the widest circulation to her communications to her church. She made them her agents to publish this communication not only in their own publications, but in any others that they might see fit.

In regard to the matter of the publication in the Boston Herald the person who furnished the copy was not in the employ of Mrs. Eddy, was not paid by her and acted absolutely without her knowledge or consent. She was, therefore, in no way responsible for the publication in The Herald.

The court ruled that the copy of The Herald could not be admitted.

Mrs. Woodbury then resumed the witness stand, and identified letters which she had written to Mrs. Eddy and the replies, which were read by counsel. The plaintiff was asked if she had ever practiced "malicious animal magnetism," as was charged in one of Mrs. Eddy's letters, and she said she had not.

Mrs. Woodbury was asked what was the belief on the part of members of the First Church of Christ regarding Mrs. Eddy's being the discoverer and founder of Christian Science and her relation to them, and she replied:

"The infallibility of Mrs. Eddy and the necessity of accepting that doctrine of infallibility is a qualification for membership in the church."

"What was the belief as to her mission in establishing a new religion?"

"That she was specially selected by God as the special object of a special revelation, that revelation being Christian Science, and that she had the same relation to Christian Science that Jesus Christ had to Christianity 2000 years ago. It was also believed that she was the woman referred to in Revelations, whose mission it was to supersede Christianity, she being the author of a book which had been prophesied."

These answers were admitted, sub-

Mr. Peabody in reply said that the parties

STOOD SEVERE STRAIN

An Unexpected Test of the Independence

STEERING GEAR GAVE WAY

Tremendous Pressure on Big Steel Spar and Rigging Was Easily Withstood—Yacht Will Doubtless Prove a Tough Proposition for Rivals

Boston, June 7.—The Lawson yacht Independence, in her second sail trial yesterday, met with her first accident, a not very serious jamming of the steering gear, but sufficient to stop the trial after an hour and a half of splendid sailing, during which she attained a speed on a reach of a little over three miles, of 13½ nautical miles an hour.

The accident led very unexpectedly to most thorough test of the yacht's rigging and her big steel mast, through the sudden giling without preventer stays being run back to take up the strain, and the result showed that it will be a pretty severe blow which dismisses the Boston yacht.

The big boom, swung by a 15-knot breeze, swept over the stern of the yacht at a tremendous speed. Captain Haff being unable to prevent it, owing to the jamming of the steering gear.

It was so sudden that none of the crew were astir with the preventer tackle, and the big mast had to stand the entire weight of the sail and boom as it fetched up. There was not a man on the boat but thought that the mast would go, but the big steel spar stood the strain magnificently, and the designer, the skipper and the crew have the greatest confidence in its ability to do its work.

Previous to the accident and subsequent giling, the yacht was given a most thorough test under full sail in a strong breeze, and showed herself to be a wonderful boat, especially in her ability to run with sheets started. She also went very fast beating to windward, and was thus about as Captain Haff in something under 20 seconds.

Something of a comparison could also be made yesterday with the Constitution, for the newspaper men were on the same tug which followed the Bristol boat on her trial trip. The wind and sea were much the same, and the yachts were under similar canvas, and it certainly seems as if the Independence had the greater speed, especially in a reach, which would be the main feature of a triangular race.

The yacht did not reach the lower bay yesterday until 1 o'clock, and 10 minutes afterward the tow line was cast off from the tug, and the Independence filled away under three lower sails.

The wind at the time was blowing about 13 knots an hour from the southwest, and with sheets well lifted she ran straight out to sea a little south east. A few minutes after the gaff topsail was set, which sent her along a little faster.

In this run out to sea she was timed with considerable accuracy from a whistling buoy to the Boston lightship, a distance of 3 1/4 miles, and made it in 15 minutes, a speed of 13 1/2 knots an hour. After running out some four miles beyond the lightship the yacht was sent off before the wind, with her sheets trimmed in, and then hauled on to the wind for the beat back. In the meantime the breeze had increased to 15 knots, so that when Captain Haff, in order to give every shroud, stay and halyard a thorough test, sent her along with a good rap, the lee rail of the Independence was not only awash, but the water was running half way up the deck.

She footed very fast, going to windward, and held within 4 points of the breeze, although the topsail set very badly.

The tug, which at this time was making a full 10 knots, just about her speed at Bristol, was unable to hold the Lawson boat, although in Narragansett bay she had been able to keep pretty well up with the Constitution. Twice Captain Haff put the wheel over sharply, and the yacht turned in something under 20 seconds.

After the beat back for about four miles it was decided to try her dead before the wind. The Independence wore round with her stern high in the air, in much the same manner as was done with the Constitution in her trial trip, although the breeze yesterday was several knots stronger. Nothing gave way under the tremendous strain, and those on board heaved a sigh of relief.

They all stood aghast, however, when they discovered that, instead of keeping on a straight course, the Independence continued to swing in spite of Captain Haff's frantic efforts to get the wheel amidships. The steering gear for the balance rudder is a patent arrangement, the rudder post being turned by a long horizontal screw. When the wheel was put hard up, this screw bent slightly in the middle, so that the thread jammed. As it was evident that the yacht would go down the wind on the starboard tack, no effort was made to prepare the port preventer backstays, so that when the yacht, taking everything in her own hands, giled her boom over, there was nothing to take up the strain.

The big steel spar, however, stood up nobly, as the boom and sail were brought up with a snap by the mast. A towline was immediately sent aboard the tug, so that the yacht's head was kept in the wind, while the sails were taken in. The screw was uncoupled from the rudder head, and the yacht steered up to the city behind the tug by a tackle.

MANY TRAGIC DEATHS

Mark First Hot Day of the Season In Southern New England

Boston, June 7.—The first hot day this season, in southern New England, was made noticeable by the increase in the number of tragic deaths.

George W. Putnam of Cambridge hanged himself to the headboard of his bed. He was a motorman of excellent record.

The body of Katie Cahill, a seamstress, was taken from Boston harbor. It is thought that she had worried over rent bills. Scowmen also found the body of John Johnson on the flats during the day.

At Dedham, Howard Gates, 14 years old, was drowned while swimming in the Charles river.

Charles E. Davenport, a freight conductor, was killed at Providence by his train on the Consolidated railroad. He had been on 20 years' service.

Timothy Low, assistant roadmaster for 50 years on the western division of the Boston and Maine railroad, dropped dead at Ballardville station. He was 80 years old, and an expert at his business.

Wilbur Garland of Sanbornville, N.H., committed suicide by taking poison. Joseph McAuley, 15 years old, was drowned at Providence while playing on a small pond. The boy was sailing a raft, which capsized.

The body of Timothy J. Ford, aged 23, who has been missing for a week from Lawrence, Mass., was found in the canal in that city. It is thought that Ford committed suicide.

Thomas A. Connor, aged 13, was drowned at Worcester, Mass., and William Weeks, 14, was rescued with difficulty. The boys were in swimming.

THINKS AMERICAN ENGINES Inferior

London, June 7.—The Midland Railway company has been using 40 American locomotives. Superintendent Johnson says in the Daily Mail today that the result of six months' comparative tests made with standard Midland freight engines showed the extra working cost of the American locomotives over the British to be from 20 to 25 percent in fuel, 50 percent in oil, and 40 percent in repairs. The American locomotives in question cost £400 less than the British.

Alleged Malfeasance in Office

Albany, June 7.—State Labor Commissioner McMakin expects that at least four deputy factory inspectors in New York city will be arrested on the charge of collusion and malfeasance in office. The commissioner has been informed that employees in the factory department have been receiving bribes for winkling at alleged violations of the factory laws, and that fees ranging from $5 to $10 have been charged where the state law provides no license fee.

Possible Changes in Crew

Bristol, R. I., June 7.—There is some sentiment among the crew of the Constitution for an increase of wages in the masthead men, on the ground of the peril of the work. Most of the crew have left for shore leave over Sunday, as the laying up of the yacht for repairs gave little or no work for the 40 men.

Some changes among the crew are looked for, but nothing definite is known on this point.

Philippine Deficit Feared

Manila, June 7.—The fragmentary news received here of the Port Rican decision has caused apprehension that there will be such a deficit in the Philippine revenue that congress will need to make an appropriation to meet it. Fears are also expressed as to the result of the application of jury trials and other features of the constitution not suited to the conditions of the Philippines.

Tug Risky Jump

Boston, June 7.—Ellen Mulkern jumped from a two-story window of her home, at 26 Bolton street, last night rather than face her husband, who, the police say, was drunk and pursuing her. The distance to the street was over 20 feet, and Mrs. Mulkern injured her right knee. She was taken to a hospital. Captain Haff put the wheel over sharply, and the yacht turned in something under 20 seconds.

After the beat back for about four miles it was decided to try her dead before the wind. The Independence wore round with her stern high in the air, in much the same manner as was done with the Constitution in her trial trip, although the breeze yesterday was several knots stronger. Nothing gave way under the tremendous strain, and those on board heaved a sigh of relief.

Governor Will Complete Job

London, June 7.—Mr. Yerkes, when interviewed last night, said: "We have practically got control of the London Underground railway. That is what it amounts to. My syndicate is composed of both British and American financiers, although far the largest proportion of the capital comes from the United States."

Swiss Manufacturers Worried

Geneva, June 7.—There is considerable alarm in Switzerland over a report that J. P. Morgan contemplates the formation of a watch combine to kill off the importation of Swiss watches and materials.

The Swiss manufacturers intend to fight the contemplated trust.

Gas Explosion In Mine

Scranton, Pa., June 7.—Seven men were seriously burned at an explosion of gas at the Pancoast colliery in North Scranton yesterday, and two will probably die.

The men tapped the pocket of gas while extending a shaft, and it was ignited from their lamps.

BIG STEAMER ASHORE

Assyrian Went Astray During a Dense Fog

CREW HAD A CLOSE CALL

Vessel Considered to Be a Hopeless Hulk—Struck Face of Cliff and Was Forged Upon the Rocks—Agents Say That Cargo May Be Unloaded

St. John's, June 7.—The Leyland line steamer Assyrian, Captain Dingle, from Antwerp for Montreal, struck the rocks off Cape Race just before midnight. The crew, composed mainly of Scandinavians, Germans and Hollanders, stampeded and scrambled for the life-boats, and all finally reached shore. The officers were helpless. Only the proximity of land on the port side, forming a partial shelter, prevented a greater catastrophe.

The crew had a most wrenching experience in the boats during the night. They were not aware of their position and there was danger of the ship's collapsing boats swamping.

It now seems that the voyages of the Assyrian have ended. She was running at full speed through the fog when she struck Cape Race, and she now lies an almost hopeless hulk on the coast. For three days Captain Dingle had been navigating by the log, and he had calculated upon a course rounding Cape Race 30 miles south of land. This plan, however, was frustrated by north-easterly currents.

No fishing boats operate off Cape Race, owing to the danger of being run down by such vessels. Consequently Captain Dingle had no warning. The Assyrian struck at 11:40 Wednesday night. Land had been sighted only a minute before. The fog was as dense as ink and there was no time to reduce speed.

The ship struck with a sidelong blow. Another 500 yards southeast would have carried her clear of all obstructions and enabled her to finish her voyage without injury. She struck the face of the cliff, and was forced upon the outlying rocks. The impact tore out the bottom of the two forward holds. She heeled over to the starboard when her side glistened against the cliff.

The crew at first were panic-stricken, but after a time comparative calm was restored and all precautions were taken to secure the safety of all on board.

When the extent of her injuries was disclosed, it was seen that she was badly damaged, but would outlast any except a severe storm. Some of the crew feared that the rear part of the ship would break off, and that the hull would go to pieces, but no mishap occurred.

The arrival of daylight enabled Captain Dingle to land the mate, who climbed the cliffs, proceeded to the Cape Race station, and telegraphed the news of the disaster.

The very latest intelligence from the wreck is that the tug Favorite has arrived there with a diver, who will go under water today and will begin to discharge the cargo in the fore holds.

The entire cargo will probably be unloaded—so the agents say—as this will enable a more convenient handling of the ship, there being then no dead weight to pull off.

Prayer Was Ineffective

Scranton, Pa., June 7.—Judge Kelly yesterday directed a verdict of not guilty in the case of Mrs. Clara S. Boyd, the Dowdy priestess, charged with illegal practice of medicine. Mrs. Boyd "attended" Mrs. Lydia Newell of Throop at childbirth. The mother and child died, and the coroner's jury found that it was because of lack of proper medical attention. At the trial evidence was presented to the effect that Mrs. Boyd did nothing except pray with Mrs. Newell at the latter's request.

Awaits President's Approval

Washington, June 7.—Lieutenant R. H. Townley of the navy has been convicted by court-martial at Manila and sentenced to dismissal from the service. The charge on which Lieutenant Townley was court-martialed was in connection with the recent commissary irregularities at Manila. The sentence must be approved by the president to become effective.

Our commerce with Spain, which was interrupted by the war, will be as large this year as it ever was.

The theatrical world can ill afford to lose James A. Herne, a playwright who almost deserves to be called great. He believed in the realism that is real in a large way and real in details as well. He made plays in "Hearts of Oak," "Shore Acres" and "Sag Harbor," which in the main are models in their line. He believed in quiet methods, and the theatre-going world ought to be grateful to him for it. He relegated "ranting and scene chewing" and "mock heroics" to the background, and introduced types that looked and behaved like human beings.—Brockton Enterprise.

It is a hopeful indication that preachers in almost all the denominations are beginning to recognize the emptiness of strictly sensational preaching. Some have actually given up their reliance upon operatic singing and stereotyped, and with hearts and minds afire with a new and better purpose are confining themselves to genuine gospel truth and work. Others are thinking seriously along these practical lines, and will ere long discover a better way to present Jesus Christ to living and hungry men. It will be a great day for the church when all the preachers catch the inspiration of this conception of the ministerial office, and take their true places as "prophets of a living gospel for living men."—Zion's Herald.

Surprise Party.

Last Thursday evening, May 31, Miss Alice Butler was surprised at her home on Intervale street by a number of her schoolmates, and was presented with a beautiful finger ring. The present was much appreciated by the young lady who hoped the company would all heartily enjoy themselves during the evening.

The presentation was made by Alex. Cowe, Jr., who said that the ring was presented by the schoolmates of Miss Butler as a mark of their esteem, and with best wishes that her intended journey to Prince Edwards Island should be of the most pleasant nature.

In the course of the evening, ice cream, cake and candy were served and much enjoyed by the company. Such games as doctor, whistle, and shoe games were played with enthusiasm, so much in fact that one young man swallowed a spoonful of salt with the result that he was nearly choked. He was fortunately brought round without medical assistance.

The affair broke up shortly after ten when all dispersed highly delighted with their evening's enjoyment.

Among those present were: George Main, Jr., Alexander Cowe, Jr., Margaret Michael, Adolard Picard, John Findlay, Georgians Michael, Robin Skinner, Sadie McLeod, Robert Mitchell, James Orr, William Warner, Susie Hadden, Bessie Warrington, Bessie Miller, Mary Cranon, Lawrence Butler, Mrs. Hadden, Mrs. Michael and Mr. and Mrs. Butler.

Personal.

James McAdam, formerly a resident in Quincy and well known to granite cutters, having been for a number of years corresponding secretary to the Quincy branch of the stone cutters national union, is in the city again. He and his family went to Scotland nearly three years ago with the intention of remaining there permanently, but the old home has lost its attractions for Jim and his family, and they determined to return to the land of fuller enjoyments and larger opportunities. Mr. McAdam may not settle in Quincy, he having an idea of entering on some new business, less wearing on the body than granite cutting and more remunerative to the pocket.

PARADE MONDAY.

A parade and banquet will be features of the day on Monday.

Rural lodge will assemble at 10:30 A. M. at Masonic hall, with guests. At 11:30 a procession will be formed on Hancock street, under command of Wor. Bro. Henry L. Kincaide as chief marshal. Martland's band of Brockton will furnish music, and in the line will be:

Rural lodge of Quincy.
Representatives of the Grand lodge of Massachusetts.

Master and Wardens of Wollaston.
Master and Wardens of Delta lodge of Braintree.

Master and Wardens of Rising Sun Lodge of Randolph.

South Shore commandery, Knights Templar of Weymouth.

St. Stephen's chapter, R. A. Masons of Quincy.

The route be through City Square via Hancock street to Adams streets, counter-clockwise to Washington street, to Elm street, to Hancock street, to Granite street, where the procession will be dismissed.

At 1 P. M. a banquet will be held in Quincy Music Hall, admission to which will be by ticket. Seeler will furnish the dinner, and an orchestra from Martland's band will discourse music.

The post prandial exercises will include an address of welcome by Wor. Bro. F. W. Brett, master of Rural lodge; and addresses by representatives of the Grand Lodge, His Honor Mayor Hall, South Shore commandery and St. Stephen's chapter.

Covers will be laid for 300 and the banquet will close the celebration of the anniversary.

A list of the Masters of Rural lodges for the 100 years will be of interest:

As an expression of the esteem and respect in which Mr. and Mrs. Summers have been held by their neighbors and acquaintances, Mrs. Summers was presented with a beautiful gold watch and chain, the gift of the party. Mr. A. Cowe made the presentation and complimented Mrs. Summers on her standing as a neighbor and hoped that the new venture in which her husband was about to enter-would bring her and her family happiness.
Although Mr. Summers was not the recipient of any special mark of respect, he was nevertheless reminded that the same warmth of feeling was due to him as a friend and neighbor, as was given to his wife, and if he could not have the privilege of carrying in his pocket the fine watch which his partner in life had received, he might at times have the pleasure of noting and improving the fleeting hours as indicated on the treasured gift.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Summers thanked their friends and donors and hoped that they would have a pleasant evening.

Refreshments were liberally handed round during the evening.

Dissatisfaction at South Quincy.Owing to the poor condition of the ball grounds at South Quincy, the local team were unable to play the game scheduled for last Saturday. Money has already been appropriated for playgrounds in Quincy, but nothing has been done to help the South Quincy grounds.

The residents of that end of the city are much put out over the way their petitions have been ignored. A citizens' indignation meeting will be held in the rooms of the South Quincy Social Club next Tuesday evening. A petition will be sent in to the City Council asking for an appropriation to be used in grading the Ward Three playground. A strong attraction has been offered for next Saturday. The locals will meet the City Points of South Boston on their home grounds Water street at 3:30.

A few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will restore his liver to its normal functions, renew his vitality, improve his digestion and make him feel like a new man. PAYMENT OF INDEMNITY

Considered by Diplomats In Discussion on China

TO TAKE MIDDLE GROUND

American Proposition For Powers to Scale Down Claims Fifty Percent Having Been Rejected, We Will Accept Full Amount Due Us

Washington, June 7.—The ambassador from most of the European countries were in conference with Secretary Hay yesterday, mainly because it was diplomatic day, and the state of the Chinese negotiations was discussed.

Sir Blundell Maple, Conservative, asserted that British officers, who had been sent to Hungary and Austria, had purchased broken-down animals at extravagant prices, and divided with the sellers the price charged the British government above the actual cost. He demanded the appointment of a commission of inquiry.

Lord Stanley, financial secretary of the war office, said an inquiry would be made into the matter, and he believed that the accusation of corruption brought against British officers would be disproved.

War Secretary Brodrick said the war office paid for horses in England £4,000, Canada £30, and in Australia, the United States and Hungary from £20 to £25.

Later in the discussion Mr. Brodrick said a telegram had just reached him from Lord Kitchener announcing that between 50,000 and 60,000 troops were now suitably mounted. The war secretary defended the good quality of the horses bought abroad.

It is understood that the middle ground, or modus vivendi, concerning the form of paying the indemnity, is likely to be settled by joint and several guarantees. They will be in complete accord with the American view that there should be no joint guarantee, in the sense of binding each government to securing the payment of the entire $337,000,000. It will be joint, however, in the formal aspect of being executed by all of the powers jointly, at the same time and probably by the same instrument.

This instrument doubtless will include a provision by which each government is to assume no liability beyond its own half, regardless of the action of other powers.

Some time ago the government proposed, through Mr. Rockhill, that all of the powers scale down their claims 50 percent, so as to bring the total of the indemnities within China's ability to pay. Though this proposition failed of acceptance, our government left Mr. Rockhill under instructions to lose no opportunity to secure a reduction of the claims, but it has never signified a disposition to refuse to accept the full amount of our indemnity, regardless of the action of the other powers.

Move Toward Settlement

London, June 7.—The Chinese government, says the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, has ordered that bonds be prepared for the payment of the indemnity.

Addition to Medical Science

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 7.—An important antiseptic discovery, upon which Doctors Noy and Frere have been working for over a year, has just been made public.

The antiseptics are organic acid hydroperoxides. In a water solution 5,001 of 1 percent of active oxygen derived from the hydroperoxide is fatal to all bacteria.

The hydroperoxide which was used for the experiments is benzoyl azide, and this, as was shown by experiments on dogs, can be taken internally in large doses without poisonous effect.

Many Were Disqualified

West Point, N. Y., June 7.—No official report has yet been made by the medical examining board, but in official circles it is said that about 25 percent of the young men who on Wednesday presented themselves for an entrance examination at the military academy were found physically disqualified, mainly on account of weak eyes.

Kindergartners.

Quincy was prominent at the graduating exercises of Miss Symonds' kindergarten training school on Thursday. Two of the nineteen graduates were from this city, Miss Florence M. Howe and Miss Mary A. Graham; also the speaker, Supt. Parlin; and several friends of Misses Howe and Graham; Miss Symonds presided, and the graduating class went through marching exercises, sang songs, and played circle and visiting games. The pigeon house sequence, where the birds are imitated, and the finger plays, illustrative of things that interest the child mind, received lavish applause. The imitation of the butterfly, the brownies, the kittens, the singing of the doll songs, and the stories about the mice and the little fingers, had all so many good morals in them, as to bring out the beauty of kindergarten teaching. Original jingles were illustrated by Miss Ruby L. Barrows and Miss Nellie A. Snow.

Mr. Parlin paid a tribute to Froebel and kindergartners. He said education was the development of a child, and that it might be the method rather than the child that was stupid. Teachers must select objects from their surroundings, and study the child and his interests.

Mr. William T. Isaac left on Wednesday for a brief business trip and will spend a few days at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo before his return.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kent of Braintree have gone to Buffalo, to visit his brother, and will attend the exposition.

INTO DRY DOCK.

Arrangements Complete For Hauling Up the Lawrence.

The high wind yesterday prevented the torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence from being placed in dry dock at Hanley's. It is possible, however, that she may be hauled up today. The operation of hauling the Lawrence out of the water is an interesting one and well worth seeing. A massive cradle has been built at Hanley's marine railway. This cradle is lowered into the water and the vessel to be hauled up sails into it and is made fast. The cradle runs on a track and will be hauled in by a powerful hoisting engine. Some idea of the power of the engine and apparatus may be gained when it is known that the diameter of the iron links in the chain that controls the cradle is two inches.

It is necessary that the day should be as calm as possible when the Lawrence enters the dry dock, as great care must be used in bringing her up the channel and guiding her into the cradle; a misguidance would mean quite a loss.

Choir Boys' Concert.

The choir boys are meeting with much encouragement in the sale of tickets for their concert in Music hall next Thursday night. The attractions for this concert exceed anything of the sort given in Quincy for some years. Mrs. H. Y. Follett of Trinity church, Boston, is one of New England's best sopranos, as her position in Trinity church amply testifies. Mrs. G. W. Reed is a contralto of excellent ability. Mr. J. Russell Abbot was enthusiastically encored at the concert given by the Hewitson Singing club in Wollaston the other evening; Mr. Follett's voice is always pleasing and his duets with Mrs. Follett will be one of the most attractive features in the entertainment.

These four people alone will furnish an excellent program, but there are others — Mrs. Edith Rowena Noyes Porter's ten year old protege, Alice Eldridge, the wonderful little pianist, who plays like a full fledged artist, will have two separate numbers. Mr. Arthur Gould of Brockton, a splendid new bass singer, just coming out; besides the bright and catchy glee, choruses and part songs which the choirs themselves will sing and Master John B. Findlay "the best boy soprano heard in Boston for twenty-five years."

Surely Mr. Snyder and his boys have prepared a splendid treat of music for the people of Quincy and they deserve to have every seat in Music hall filled, for never have boys worked harder to succeed.

We should encourage our children to love and work for high ideals in art. Here is a crowd of boys and men offering to us an artistic concert. Let us one and all show our appreciation of their efforts to attain the beautiful, by buying their tickets and attending their concert.

Funeral of Mrs. Smith.

The funeral of Mrs. Laura C. F. Smith was held on Friday at 1 o'clock from her late residence on Billings street. The services, while simple were very sympathetic and were conducted by Rev. J. H. Whitaker of the Memorial church. There was no address, the services consisting of reading of the scriptures and prayer. Rev. Mr. Whitaker also read a beautiful poem.

During the services music was furnished by Harvard quartette who sang "Lead, kindly light," "I do not always know Thy ways," and "Hark! I hear angel voices."

The services were largely attended. The School Committee was represented by Dr. Hallowell and Supt. Parlin, and the Teachers' Association by the principal of the several school buildings.

There was a profusion of beautiful flowers. Several of the schools sent large wreaths and bouquets, and the Teachers' association and special teachers also sent floral tributes. There were also many flowers sent by personal friends. On the piano were two pictures of the deceased both of which were surrounded by flowers.

The poem read by Rev. Mr. Whitaker was beautiful and nothing could better express the feelings of her many friends than did this.

The burial will be at Pittsfield, N. H.

THE CHANGING SKIES.

[A sonnet.]

Form follows cloudy form across the sky;
In crystal seas float islands of delight;
Grand turrets seem to guard your mountain's height.
Lo, there the folded flecks of evening lie!
Here rosy billows heave and, breaking, sigh;
Archangels meet and clash their sabers bright;
See! Scarlet squadrons march in the night;
Pale wanderers' lamps the midnight glory;
In my life's sky dream follows dream of thee;
The wild majestic parent passes on—Adoles, defenses, warriors, herds, fair seas.
Moods come and go; shape thou my destiny,
Then who remainst when all the dreams are gone—
My home, my strength, my glory and my peace!
—Elizabeth Gibson in Chambers' Journal.

A TRICK OF AH SIN'S.

By M. Quad.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

Singapore is a city having dealings in one way or another with every people to the north, east, south and west of it, including all the large islands. Money reaches Singapore by the boat-load and is distributed as liberally. It is a sort of clearing house for the east, and the Malay and the Javanese jostle against the American and the Hollander at the counters of the banking houses.

For five years I was what is called the transfer agent at Singapore. Provided with a steam launch and a trusty crew, I received or sent out all the hard money arriving and departing. Except in case of four or five lines of steamers, no money is received at the wharf. All the native craft lie at anchor to discharge or receive. There are several reasons for this, but the main one is to save time at the banking houses. The money will arrive in bags or boxes and is in copper, brass, silver and gold. It has been counted and tagged, but it must be gone over again. A Malay Chinaman or a Borneo trader would rob his blind grandmother. If he has tagged a box "$1,000," you can be sure that it is short from $30 to $100. Assisted by two clerks, I boarded the craft and recounted, retagged and resealed the treasure and, after giving a certificate of the correct amount, loaded it in the launch and departed it on shore.

My work was anything but easy. Every consignment carried counterfeit coins to be worked off on me, and every native was up to all kinds of tricks to come out ahead. Under the law I had a great deal of power, but there were scores of ways in which I could be delayed and annoyed. Of all the people I encountered the Chinese were the worst for trickery. There are plenty of honest Chinese traders located at Singapore, as honest as the same number of foreigners, but as to the Chinese afloat I never met a square man. I found each and every one to be the slickest kind of liar and swindler. What purported to be silver bars would turn out to be lead thinly coated, gold ingots would be a deception and a snare, and they would even go to the pains of counterfeiting such cheap coins that it takes 22 of them to make an American cent. It was stipulated in my bond that I should make good all losses arising through any carelessness of counting or handling, and there was never a moment when my vigilance could be relaxed.

Almost at the beginning of my career I had business with a Chinese trader named Whang Ton. That was the name he gave, and he pretended to deal in honest goods, but I have no doubt he was an out and out pirate. He came into the port about three times a year, and he had ten times too much money aboard for an honest trader. He never disputed my count or tried to work off bad coin on me and in this was an exception. He won my gratitude if not my respect in this matter, and after having dealt with him three or four times I ceased to watch for tricks.

In three years he came into port at least 12 times, and he never brought less than $30,000 worth of stuff. He did not always have the same junk, but his men were always the same. His money was of all nations and all coinage, and it was fair to believe that he robbed all alike. As there were no charges against him I did not think best to say anything ashore, and so Whang Ton arrived and departed without let or hindrance. On what turned out to be his last visit, so far as I know, he brought only about $10,000 to be exchanged, and he informed me that he had decided to leave the sea and settle down ashore. He was more communicative than I had ever known him to be before, but there were only two or three points I remembered afterward. One was his retirement from trade, and the other was about a Philippine craft lying astern of him. She had brought in $28,000 to be exchanged, and I was to put the money aboard of her that evening. He asked many questions about her, as I remembered later, and I answered all as far as I could and gave no weight to the matter.

While I received and shipped mostly between 9 o'clock a.m. and 5 o'clock p.m., it happened now and then that a craft wanted to sail after hours, and so I stretched a point in her favor and charged a percentage. This percentage was to cover my increased risk. In the case of the Philippine craft the money was to be on board at 6 o'clock, which was an hour after dark at that season of the year. It was placed in the launch at 4:30, and I steamed out to a Malay craft and counted and resealed the $28,000 she had aboard. Then I spent 15 minutes talking with the captain of an American whaler and was ready to run down and get rid of my cargo. I had to pass Whang Ton's junk en route, and he was on the lookout for me. He said he had overlooked a box containing about a thousand dollars and was anxious to have it counted and credited with the rest. As he had a basket of wine and a box of cigars for me, I could not well refuse, and I went aboard with my two clerks to rush the count through. Five armed men were left in the launch, and I had no anxiety. We had counted half the money and old Whang Ton was standing by with a grin on his face when five or six natives who had sneaked into the cabin suddenly flung themselves upon us, and we were made prisoners. At the same moment a dozen of the crew dropped over the rail into the launch and made a fierce attack, and two minutes she was captured, and her crew passed up. Then followed the treasure, and as the launch was secured alongside the junk lifted anchor and set sail for the north. The boldness of the trick compelled success. The old pirate smilingly informed me that no one would be hurt and that his only object was the money, and after I had got over swearing and threatening and realized my helplessness we got along fairly well together. It was no one's business to question the junk, and as she had a fair wind she sailed off the miles until midnight and then ran close to the Spanish island and set us ashore and towed our launch after us. Our boat was stripped of arms and coal, and all we could do was to find an anchorage for her and wait to be taken off. It was 3 o'clock next day before this event happened and six hours later when we reached Singapore. Of course a searching vessel was sent out, and later on old Whang Ton was hunted for high and low, but he somehow got clear off with every dollar of that money and settled down somewhere to live on the fat of the land.

Female Bird Rules.

Among several species of the birds of prey a preference for the female sex is shown which is not met with in the great majority of the feathered kind, declares an ardent student of the ways of birds and beasts. He says:

"Several years ago it was my fortune to capture two young eagles of the baldhead species. When meat was thrown into the room where they were confined, the male showed plainly how great was his desire to pounce upon it, but a glance from his sister was sufficient to keep him rooted to the perch until she had finished. When beef and other similar meats were given them, this easy victory for the fair sex was the rule, but when a fish was introduced it was only after a fierce fight that the female succeeded in reminding her brother of the respect due her. "A pair of young great horned owls which I at one time owned had also displayed this female domination. I fed them principally on live rats, and when they were turned loose in the room the male retained a stolid and indifferent pose upon his perch until the female had satisfied her hunger, after which he would dispatch what was left. Many other are the instances among the eagles, hawks and owls in which the female bird is the master of the situation."—Baltimore Sun.

There Was No Duel.

Once, when the late Dr. Tanner had asked in the house whether it was true that the Duke of Cambridge had resigned his position as commander in chief, a Major Jones of Penzance was so outraged that he challenged Dr. Tanner to a duel, and the following telegraphic correspondence took place:

"In reply to your despicable question about the Duke of Cambridge, I designate you a coward. Delighted to give you satisfaction across the water. Pissots."

To which Dr. Tanner at once replied:

"Wire received. Will meet you to-morrow in Constantinople, under the tower of Galata, midnight. Being challenged, prefer torpedoes. Bring another ass.—Tanner."

When Bride and Groom Are Nervous.

Embarrassment appears to be the natural concomitant of matrimony. At least this is true in the incipient stages. Invariably, however, there is a striking contrast between the relative composure of the man and the woman. Both are nervous, but never both at the same time. If they come a week beforehand to make arrangements, she is rattled and he is cool, while on the day of the ceremony she rises to the occasion and he sinks under it. Thus I have never seen a bride who was scared. I have never seen a groom who was not.—Rev. D. M. Steele in Ladies' Home Journal.

Mental Arithmetic.

Wife of Young Literary Man—Why, George, £10 for that magazine story? How long did it take you to write it?

Young Husband (nonchalantly)—Oh, I don't know. A couple of days, I suppose.

Wife (exultingly)—Five pounds a day! That's £30 a week and £120 a month. Twelve times £120 is nearly £1,500 a year. Why, George, we can keep a carriage just as well as not.—London Answers.

It was ready to run down and get rid of my cargo. I had to pass Whang Ton's junk en route, and he was on the lookout for me. He said he had overlooked a box containing about a thousand dollars and was anxious to have it counted and credited with the rest. As he had a basket of wine and a box of cigars for me, I could not well refuse, and I went aboard with my two clerks to rush the count through. Five armed men were left in the launch, and I had no anxiety. We had counted half the money and old Whang Ton was standing by with a grin on his face when five or six natives who had sneaked into the cabin suddenly flung themselves upon us, and we were made prisoners. At the same moment a dozen of the crew dropped over the rail into the launch and made a fierce attack, and two minutes she was captured, and her crew passed up. Then followed the treasure, and as the launch was secured alongside the junk lifted anchor and set sail for the north. The boldness of the trick compelled success. The old pirate smilingly informed me that no one would be hurt and that his only object was the money, and after I had got over swearing and threatening and realized my helplessness we got along fairly well together. It was no one's business to question the junk, and as she had a fair wind she sailed off the miles until midnight and then ran close to the Spanish island and set us ashore and towed our launch after us. Our boat was stripped of arms and coal, and all we could do was to find an anchorage for her and wait to be taken off. It was 3 o'clock next day before this event happened and six hours later when we reached Singapore. Of course a searching vessel was sent out, and later on old Whang Ton was hunted for high and low, but he somehow got clear off with every dollar of that money and settled down somewhere to live on the fat of the land.

Small close hoods of lace, silk linings, and a long elder down cloak made double and with long sleeves and a small knit veil for cold days complete the outfit of most babies now. This does not count the sleeping wrapper, which may be flannel or doubled out flannel.

When the baby goes into short clothes, there may be a little more individuality. The short dresses and petticoats may be just simply cut down shorter. They are merely gathered at the neck only and left to fall straight down. It takes two yards of cambric or any other white cotton goods to make a frock with deep hem, but no tucks, for a child of 6 months and on to 10 or 12 months. A little embroidery, or better still, crocheted edging, is put at the neck and wrists. Buttons are put at the neck in the back finish it. To cut this needs no diagram. The arm sizes are hollowed out and the three long shoulders very slightly sloped and an inch taken out of the front at the neck. Then it is ready to gather and put the band on and sleeves in.

Those frocks where there is a yoke are quite as easy to make. The yoke may be cut after an old one, and it opens in the back always. From the yoke measure the length to the bottom. It needs two broadtails and two yards will make the whole dress. Nainsook costs but 12 cents a yard. Many ladies have cambric skirts partly worn, and such material is far better for the baby than new. These frocks may be trimmed or featherstitched, but so many are required to keep the baby clean and sweet that it is better to have more plain ones than fewer ones with trimming.

The only real difference in the outfit of the child of a year and that of the infant of a month is that the small one has long clothes. The older one has shoes and stockings instead of knit socks. The stockings, in winter at least, should be of wool and long and fastened with side elastics.

For summer for babies over a year and a half the new long waisted effects are suitable. To make such a frock take one yard and a half of nainsook or other fine cotton or linen lawn and cut it into two pieces and sew them together, and then lay clusters of fine tucks all around lengthwise, letting them end six inches above the bottom. Finish this with a row of embroidery or lace. Sew a bertha at the top made of the material edged with the embroidery, and one row beneath that for sleeves. Between the clusters of tucks stitch rows of insertion. This is to come but to the low waist line. A soft ribbon sash is tied around the waist low down. A smaller bow is in the front of the neck. This little dress can be used for a model, and many variations can be evolved.

Retrospection.
O life, I turn on thee a backward gaze,
Before my sun has set!
I mark the windings of a tangled maze
Of paths I'd fain forget.

I see my footprints in the telltale sand,
Nor time nor death can hide;
I see where straightest I my pathway planned;
There most I turned aside.

And sharpest sting of my regretful pain—
What deepest I deplore—
The path I made must ever so remain;
I'll pass that way no more.

I dare not "grieve a straying brother cry
Nor his intent malign."
Lest, looking backward, there I may desirer
His path more straight than mine.

I may not ever him in judgment stand
Nor ask how he has striven;
I only clasp in peace his proffered hand
As I would be forgiven.

May there not be hid, by his smiling face,
A troubled heart and sore?
I humbly whisper, Jesus, give us grace;
I'll pass that way no more.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic for the Week Beginning June 9.—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Tutor—How to enter Christ's family.—Math. xii. 46-50.

That we may enter Christ's family is the glorious revelation of the word of God. The family of Christ is the family of God, and God has repeatedly promised in His word that He will be the Father of His people and that they shall be His children. Paul declares that "the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." Christ in this passage, stretching forth His hand to His disciples, said, "Behold My mother and My brethren!" The disciples of Christ are His spiritual relatives, and this is even a clearer and a stronger tie than the ties of nature which bind men together in this life.

Membership in the family of Christ is the result of discipleship. The disciple is one who is taught of Christ and who follows His teaching. The disciple hears from Christ the will of God and does it. This brings him into the family of Christ, "for whosoever shall do the will of My Father which is in heaven, the same is My brother and sister and mother." The hearing of God's will from Christ does not bring us into relationship with Christ, nor does professing to do the will of God accomplish this blessed result. It is the doing alone that admits us into the family of God. "Ye are My friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." By believing in Christ and doing you, we are adopted into the family of God, the most desirable and blessed relationship possible in this life.

Membership in the family of Christ brings us to all the privileges of the children of God. By this relationship we become children of God; "and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ." Adopted into the family of God, we enjoy the right to all the privileges of the sons of God. We derive the divine nature, bear the divine image, receive the Father's name, are the special objects of His love and care, and God Himself makes provision for us both for this life and the life to come.

Membership in the family of Christ brings with it a great responsibility. Great privileges are always accompanied by great responsibilities. The children of a king have great privileges, but also great responsibilities. The king's honor, the king's name must be kept unsullied by them. Much more is this true of the children of the King of kings. The children of God must say nothing, must do nothing that will bring their Father's name into disrepute or cast reflection upon His cause. Let us meet this great responsibility not in our own strength, but in the strength of our Father and our elder Brother, for thus only can we be kept faithful.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a voluntary service in which each one participates as led by the Spirit.

BIBLE READINGS.

John i. 11-13; xx. 11-17; Rom. viii. 14-17; II Cor. vi. 14-18; Gal. iv. 1-7; Eph. 1-3; Heb. xii. 1-10; Jas. i. 17, 18; I John iii. 1-3; v. 1-3; Rev. xxi. 3.

HUMILIATION.

If we cannot at need even humble ourselves to win our brother, it is difficult to see where our religion comes in, especially when we think what humiliation Christ suffered that He might reconcile us to God and make us friends again with our heavenly Father and renew our broken love. Whatever be our faith and works and however correct be our creed and conduct, if we are giving place to anger, if we are stiffening ourselves in strife and disdain, we are none of His who was meek and lowly of heart. Misunderstandings and estrangements will arise, occasions will come when it seems as if not even love and forbearance can avoid a quarrel, but surely Christ has died in vain if His grace cannot save us from continuance of strife.—Hugh Black.

MORAL PROGRESS.

He who asks of life nothing but the improvement of his own nature and a continual moral progress toward inward contentment and religious submission is less liable than any other to mislead and waste his life.—Christian Work.

UNEXPECTED REPULSE

Saved a Georgia Murderer
From Being Lynched

MOB STORMED COUNTY JAIL

Sheriff Commanded Them to Desist, and When They Refused He Gave Order to Fire—One Man Killed and Two Wounded—The Governor Acts

Carrollton, Ga., June 8.—The nerve of Joseph Merrill, sheriff of Carroll county, yesterday upheld the law of the state and saved the life of a negro from a mob.

In protecting the negro, who was saved from the gallows only a few hours before through the efforts of his lawyers, one life was lost and two men were wounded.

The arrival of the state militia averted threatened trouble last night, and at 9 o'clock a special train bearing the negro and his guard left for Atlanta.

Williams, the negro, was tried and found guilty of murdering Otis Word, a white boy, on Jan. 1. He was sentenced to be hanged. The execution was to have taken place yesterday. A new trial was refused by Judge Harris yesterday morning, and the negro's attorneys immediately filed a bill of exceptions and carried the case to the supreme court.

A large crowd of white people had come to town to witness the hanging and when it was learned that an appeal had been taken to the supreme court, delaying the execution, the mob made an assault on the jail. They battered down the outside iron door, despite the warning of the sheriff, and entered the building. They made a demand on the sheriff for the key to the negro's cell, and on being refused advanced upon the sheriff and his deputies. They were told to stop or they would be fired on, but the order was not obeyed.

As they advanced down the corridor towards the sheriff the order was given to fire. George Bennett fell, dying almost instantly. The unexpected fight of the sheriff and his posse frightened the mob, and they retreated outside the jail.

The wounded men are Thomas Smith, also of Carrollton and an unknown man, presumably a farmer. Thomas S. Word, father of the murdered boy, who was in the front ranks of the would-be lynchers, was not hit. After Bennett fell, Word jumped upon the window and exclaimed, dramatically, "Shoot me, Mr. Sheriff, I would as soon die now as any time."

It was decided to call upon Governor Candler for aid. The governor was communicated with by telephone, and said he would send two companies from Atlanta as soon as they could be assembled.

During the afternoon the mob telephoned the situation to friends in the adjoining towns of Villa Rica and Temple, and made an appeal for more men to effect the capture of the negro. This was communicated also to Governor Candler, and the governor soon wired a proclamation to the people of the county. It was read from the steps of the court house by the mayor. The governor commanded the people to disperse, and said the entire military and civil forces of the state would be used to enforce order if necessary. The reading of the proclamation apparently had a good effect, as many people were seen to mount their horses and leave the town.

Much apprehension was felt for the night, and the sheriff and city and county officials decided to take the prisoner out of the county for safe keeping. The Atlanta militia arrived about 6 o'clock and one hour later escorted the negro and sheriff to the train, which was soon speeded southward for Atlanta.

Safe For the Present

Atlanta, June 8.—The special train bearing the two companies of state militia returned to Atlanta at 11 o'clock last night, having in charge the negro Williams. The convicted murderer was quickly escorted to the Fulton county jail, where he will be kept until the state supreme court acts on the appeal in his case.

Has Had Enough of Pugilists

Cincinnati, June 8.—William A. Brady, formerly a manager of pugilists and defendant in the proceedings last February to prevent the Jeffries-Rublin fight here, has notified counsel that he has retired from pugilistic management and will not assist in appealing from the injunction granted by Judge Hollister. Counsel announced in court that there would be no appeal.

Millions For Scotch Universities

London, June 8.—Andrew Carnegie signed a deed yesterday transferring $10,000,000 in 5 percent steel trust bonds to trustees for the benefit of the universities of Scotland. The amount becomes immediately available.

Brigands Took Heavy Booty

Vienna, June 8.—A band of brigands held up a mail coach near Retzgau, Hungary, strangled the driver, maimed the guards, ransacked the mail bags, and escaped with plunder valued at $25,000.

AN AMPUTATED LEG

Jury Decides It Worth $1979.16 For Labor in Caring For It

Concord, N. H., June 8.—In 1887 John H. Pearson, a millionaire railroad manager, resident of this city, was attacked by illness, as the result of which one leg was cut off. This leg Mr. Pearson had very carefully prepared in alcohol and stored in a safe place in a local drug store. When Mr. Pearson died, in 1893, the leg was, by his direction, taken from its jar and interred with the rest of his body.

Shortly after, A. P. Fitch, the local druggist who had cared for the leg, sent to the trustees of the estate a bill for $3,550 for services rendered in connection with the amputated limb. This bill the trustees refused to pay, and Mr. Fitch brought suit. The case was heard yesterday, and, naturally, it was one of great interest.

The plaintiff called 10 witnesses, including the widow of Mr. Pearson. On the other side the only witness was Professor Whitney of the Harvard Medical school. After several hours' deliberation the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff of $1979.16.

Fatal Explosion of Gasoline

Hartford, June 8.—An explosion of gasoline occurred in the factory of the Franklin Electric company yesterday which injured one man fatally, another seriously, and did damage of about $8000 to the building and adjacent structures.

Two girls employed at the factory were badly cut by flying glass. The victims were Burness M. Dyer, an electrician, who was terribly burned and died later, and John Warring, seriously burned about the head. The cause of the explosion was the ignition of a gasolene tank from an illuminating burner.

Parker Meets a Good One

Hartford, June 8.—Hjalmar Lundin of this city and Harvey Parker of Brockton, Mass., met here last night in one of the best wrestling matches ever seen in this city. The first bout was Graceo-Roman, and Lundin won in 22 minutes and 35 seconds. The second match, at catch-as-catch-can, lasted 1 hour and 27 minutes. Parker finally securing a hammerlock on his opponent and forcing him to give up. The match was then called on account of the lateness of the hour.

Charged With Swindling

New York, June 8.—William D. Stafford of Michigan, aged 60, was arrested yesterday on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences from various New Haven merchants. It is alleged that he styled himself as an agent for the Dominican sisterhood of New York, and solicited money for the furnishing of the building just purchased here by the sisterhood to be used as an academy for girls.

Verdict In Will Contest

Alfred, Me., June 8.—The jury in the Norton contested will case returned a verdict sustaining the will. Judge Norton's will provided that his property be held in trust, the interest only to be paid to his children—a son and daughter. The beneficiaries claimed that their father, at the time the will was made, was intoxicated and not of sound mind.

Difficulty In Fixing a Date

Portland, Me., June 8.—Mayor Boothby has received a letter confirming officially the statement that Bath has abandoned its plans for old home week state day. He will communicate with Governor Hill, to see if arrangements can be made whereby some other city will assume the celebration. Bangor, Augusta and Lewiston have declined it.

Patients Safely Removed

Newtown, Mass., June 8.—Fire broke out in the men's ward of the Newton hospital early this morning, causing $5000 damage. All the patients were removed without a single injury. The fire was discovered by a nurse, who telephoned to the fire alarm station.

Larceny on $4000 Charged

Boston, June 8.—Alvah L. McIntyre, 51 years old, bookkeeper and confidential clerk for John Shaw & Co., dyestuffs, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $4000.

Lexington's Big Fire

Lexington, Ky., June 8.—It was feared for sometime yesterday that the city would be laid in ashes. Fire was beyond control from 2 to 4 p.m., and 23 houses were totally destroyed with their contents. The loss approximates $80,000. Many are homeless and were cared for last night. The fire originated in a negro's cottage from a defective pipe. Several children were seriously but not fatally burned.

To Be Called Governor

Washington, June 8.—When Judge Taft of the Philippine commission becomes the head of the civil government in the Philippines he will have the title of governor. It is expected that he will become governor of the Philippines about July 1.

Good Afternoon.

Times have changed since Rural lodge of Masons was organized 100 years ago today.

There is a difference. When Gen. Chaffee left Peckin, a petition signed by prominent Chinese asking him to remain was presented to him; when Count Waldersen left, everybody was glad to see him go.

The summer pilgrimages to historic Quincy have commenced, and the "City of Presidents" promises to rival Plymouth, Lexington and Concord this year. Out of town people are enthusiastic over the old houses of the Presidents Adams and other historic sites.

There is more or less talk on the tariff question now being presented. To take for granted because President McKinley favors the extension of our foreign trade by reciprocity treaties, wherever possible, that he is any less a believer in a protective tariff than he ever was is to ignore facts. Reciprocity is the child of protection. It is because we have a protective tariff that we have something to offer nations for commercial reciprocity.

Commencement Program.

The program of the Quincy Mansion school for Commencement week, which begins tomorrow, includes a sermon at 4 P. M. by Rev. Alexander Mackenzie D. D. On Monday at 8 A. M. the commencement concert will take place.

Tuesday will be class day with exercises at 3 P. M. Wednesday will be commencement day with graduating exercises at 2:15 P. M. In the evening at 8 o'clock Dr. Willard the principal will give a reception to graduates and friends.

Exceeded Expectations.

The Herald said of the Brookline performances of Eltinge's vaudeville: "The two amateur performances given in Whitney Hall, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, were the distinct successes they deserved to be. Artistically and pecuniarily they exceeded the most sanguine anticipations. The audiences were large and fashionable and there was no lack of enthusiasm and appreciation. Mr. Eltinge naturally was the bright, particular star, and in his low cut and sleeveless dancing gown of white satin embroidered with pearls, with rows of pearls around his shapely throat, he made as pretty, as alluring and as shapely a girl as one often sees in the real thing before or behind the footlights."

Lockwood and Freeman.

In the semi-finals for the Club cup in the Wollaston golf tournament yesterday Slack defeated Mulliken, and Lockwood beat Grant 1 up. Lockwood won in the finals 7-6 on 18 holes.

For the Consolation cup, Chipman defaulted in the semi-finals to Freeman, and Johnson beat Holder 3-2. Freeman won the cup in a closely contested match with Johnson, 27 holes, by score of 3 up and 1 to go.

According to tradition, Arabic figures were derived from Solomon's seal, upon which they can all be traced with a little care.

TAUGHT A LESSON.

The Giving of False Alarms is Serious Business.

That the sounding of a false alarm of fire is a serious offence must have been evident to any who were at the district court this morning, when two West Quincy men were tried for sounding a false alarm of fire from Box 446 on the morning of May 26.

The two men were John J. Riley and Charles D. White. Witnesses testified to seeing these two men, and another named Kavanagh on the morning in question in the vicinity of the box. Henry Coran the newsdealer testified that they were under his window from midnight until morning, making such a disturbance that he could not sleep.

John Deneen, foreman of the Street department saw them on the corner of Cross and Copeland street five minutes before the alarm sounded, and members of the fire department testified that when they arrived at the box in response to the alarm that the only men there were White and Riley.

City Solicitor R. A. Sears conducted the case for the government and J. E. Terrell represented Riley.

City Solicitor Sears said there had been quite an epidemic of false alarms of fires, and that besides the expense it was a serious annoyance.

The statutes provide that a person convicted of giving a false alarm of fire may be punished by a fine not exceeding $100, or six months imprisonment in the house of correction.

The court found Riley not guilty. White was found guilty and fined $40, from which an appeal was taken.

This should be a serious warning to the parties who have been giving false alarms; for the next party caught will probably be punished more severely.

Schoolmate Surprised

On Friday afternoon, a number of boys and girls led by a "Burleigh" companion and a "Smith" took possession of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simonds, the object being to surprise their schoolmate Miss Louise. Parents and teacher were banded in the conspiracy, and Miss Louise was made to feel that in some unknown way she had offended; but her short lived sorrow was turned into joy when she found herself the centre of a group of happy, loving hearts, all intent on adding not only to her happiness but also to her wealth by the bestowal of a handsome chateaigne bag containing a nice handkerchief and a sum of money. The party included two precious stones, a "Ruby" and a "Pearl" mineral "Stone" and if any incurred displeasure a "Cuff" was ready to be administered. Though the party was to close at about seven it was through no fear of the darkness as a "Day" was there, a "Day" that is always sunshine. A bountiful repast was served and apart from the absence of one little mate, who was detained by sickness, the entire affair was a source of delight and pleasure to all and will long remain a pleasant memory to Miss Louise and her class mates of 1901.

SKETCH OF RURAL LODGE OF MASONs.

Organized One Hundred Years ago and Will Celebrate Centennial on Sunday and Monday.

One hundred years ago today—June 8, 1801—there was organized in Randolph, Rural Lodge Free and Accepted Masons, which two years later was removed to the town of Quincy. Previous to 1792 both Quincy and Randolph together with Holbrook had been a part of Braintree.

Both Randolph and Quincy had in 1801 between 1,000 and 1,100 population, sequestered New England country towns, but then there were in the United States 100 years ago no railroads, no street cars, and the streets even were few in number. The Neponset bridge or the Quincy Point bridge had not been opened for travel. The vote of Quincy for all candidates for Governor did not in those days aggregate 100.

On June 8, 1801, the day the charter was granted, the petitioners organized with William P. Whiting as Worshipful Master, Jonathan Wales, Jr., as Senior Warden, Thomas French, Jr., as Junior Warden, and Joshua Niles as Senior Deacon.

The other petitioners were: Thomas B. Wales, Elizur Bates, Isaac Walker, Eleazar Beals, Ephraim Wales, John Turner, Theophilus Wentworth, Isachar Snell and William French.

It was not until June 23, 1801, that the lodge was permanently organized.

In November of 1803, a petition was drawn up in Quincy for a charter for a lodge, and resulted in a joint petition of Rural Lodge and Quincy Masons, for the removal of Rural Lodge to Quincy, which was granted Dec. 12, 1803.

The first meeting in Quincy was on the 26th of December, when the lodge assembled at Baxter's hall, at the residence of Daniel Baxter, Esq., on School street, the house being removed about fifty years ago to Phillips street.

It was not until September 19, 1804, that Rural Lodge was consecrated at Quincy, and it was a great event in those days. The Grand Lodge officers were met at Neponset bridge, which had been opened for travel but a year, and escorted to town by a committee of seven and a band. In the procession later were: Ex-President John Adams, who had retired from office but three years previously; his son John Quincy Adams, who became President 21 years later; Thomas B. Adams, Esq., the clergy, selectmen, deacons and others. In the meeting houses which stood on the site of the present stone church Rev. Peter Whitney delivered a discourse, which was published. The officers were installed in ample form, and a "sumptuous entertainment" followed in the Town Hall.

Rural Lodge at this time numbered 35 members, 28 of whom participated in the consecration services.

Baxter hall was used as a lodge room until January, 1825, when headquarters were secured at the residence of Wm. Bro. Samuel Savill on Hancock street, near the Hancock House.

Here the lodge remained until November, 1834, when the anti-Masonic crusade caused Rural Lodge to surrender its charter.

In 1853 the charter was restored and meetings were resumed. On September 26, these officers were elected: Lemuel Dwelle as Worshipful Master; John Savill as Senior Warden, and Asa Pope as Junior Warden. Meetings were then held in Abercrombie's hall on Washington street near Town Brook, later known as Masonic Hall. The lodge continued to grow and prosper, but up to 1860 had less than one hundred members. Now it has upwards of 200 members, and has work at nearly every communication.

In 1867 lodge rooms were secured in the Goodnow building which stood on the site of the present headquarters, at the corner of Hancock and Granite streets. This building and also the Central House adjoining were destroyed by fire in 1855, being one of Quincy's worst conflagrations. All the lodge property except the ancient charter were destroyed. While the Robertson block, now The Greenleaf, was being built, the lodge returned to Abercrombie's hall or Pythian Hall as it was then called.

In 1876, Nov. 26, the present Masonic Hall was dedicated.

Feb. 22, 1881, Rural Lodge laid the corner stone of Thomas Crane Memorial Hall, the present public library building of the city, the gift of a former member of the lodge. May 30, 1882, the lodge also took a prominent part at the dedication of said hall, the proceedings of the day being published in pamphlet form at the time.

The membership today includes prominent well known citizens of Quincy, Braintree and vicinity, among whom may be mentioned:

Drawing the Line.
A good story is told in Missouri at the expense of its once famous governor, Claiborne F. Jackson. Before he solved the enigma of love lock he had married five sisters in reasonable lapses of consecutiveness. After one wife had been lost and appropriately mourned he espoused another, and he kept his courting within a narrow circle of his own relatives, for he rather liked the girls.

The antiquated father of these girls was almost deaf, and when the governor went to this octogenarian to ask for his surviving daughter the following conversation ensued:

"I want Lizzie."

"Eliza?"

"I want you to let me have Elizabeth."

"Oh, you want Lizzie, do you? What for?"

"For my wife."

"For life."

"I want—to marry—her."

"Oh, yes. Just so. I hear you, boy."

"I'm precious glad you do," muttered the governor.

"Well," slowly responded the veteran, "you needn't halloo so that the whole neighborhood knows it. Yes, you can have her. You've got 'em all now, my lad, but for goodness' sake, if anything happens to that 'ere poor missel gal, don't come and ask me for the old woman!"

Jackson solemnly promised that he never would.

Origin of "Whig."

Several reasons have been assigned to account for the word "Whig," universally known to all the English speaking people. By some the word is supposed to be a contraction of a longer one, "whiggamore," which in some parts of England and Scotland, especially Scotland, signifies a drover or herder.

It was in 1679 that the word first became common in the British Isles, when the struggle was in progress between the peasantry and the aristocracy to have or not to have the bill passed by parliament to exclude the Duke of York from the line of succession. All who were opposed to placing the duke in the line of succession were derisively called "whiggamores," or "drovers," just as the city dupe of today speaks of the "grangers," the "grays," the "chin whiskers" and the "hayseeders."

But Scotch tradition gives altogether a different reason for the existence of the word. It is this: During the early religious wars in Scotland the weakest of the factions used the words "We Hope in God" as a motto. The initials of these words were placed on their banners thus, "W. H. I. G." and soon all the followers of that clan were given the title of "Whig," which was afterward attached as a party nickname.

Journalistic Errors.
I do not allude to what are obviously mere misprints, such as when The Morning Post announced at the head of its fashionable intelligence that Lord Palmerston had gone down into Hampshire with a party of friends to shoot peasants, but I refer to blunders due to crass ignorance of a pretentious order. Perhaps the best instance was when one of the "young lions" of The Daily Telegraph in a leading article enumerated the great masters of Greek sculpture as Phidias, Praxiteles and Milo, ignorant of the fact that Milo is not a sculptor, but an island.

The Times was even worse when, mistaking Prussia for Austria, it devoted a whole leader to discussing why Prussia had joined the zollverein. The Saturday Review once explained at great length that the population might be nourished gratuitously on young lambs if killed unweaned before they had begun to crop grass, having therefore cost nothing to feed. Many other instances will doubtless occur to your readers.—Notes and Queries.

A Texas Shooting Match.
Houston, June 8.—As a result of an indictment charging hog theft, a shooting affray occurred here yesterday, in which Thomas Payne and L. D. Nichols were killed, J. B. Perkins was fatally wounded, and Dave Echols badly wounded. Payne's son was on trial, and the Echols had been summoned as witnesses. The men met down town, and after a few words the shooting began. The young Payne was in the melee, but was not hurt.

Independence a Vain Hepe

London, June 8.—War Secretary Brodrick, replying to a question in the house of commons yesterday, regarding the probability of an early conclusion of peace in South Africa, reaffirmed that the government would not consent to discuss the future independence of the conquered states with the Boers.

The Poor to Get Winnings

New York, June 8.—James R. Keene announces that the Oaks stakes, won by the Keene stable yesterday in England, will be distributed among certain charities. The amount is approximately $24,000. One-half of the money is to be distributed in this country, and the other half to English charities.

Not Looked Upon With Favor

Washington, June 8.—The naval board appointed under the terms of an act of congress to examine into the advantages of Lakes Union and Washington in the State of Washington, near Seattle, as fresh water basins for laying up naval vessels, has made an adverse report upon the proposition.

THE STATUS OF CUBA

ROOF

Cannot Be Changed Until Platt Amendment Is Accepted

MUST BE NO QUALIFICATION

Senator Platt Explains That There Is Nothing In the Document to Compromise the Independence or Sovereignty of the Island

Washington, June 8.—At yesterday's cabinet meeting most of the time was consumed with a report from the secretary of war on the situation in Cuba. It will bear fruit in an order from the war department which will be sent to Cuba, but the nature of which is kept a profound secret. Enough is known to suggest the possibility that Secretary Root may order the adjournment of the constitutional convention till congress shall meet in December, in case upon a final and decisive vote the assembly refuses to accept the Platt amendment without any commentaries or interpretations attached. Mr. Root's message, if it is as suspected, would be equivalent to notifying the Cubans that if they will not accept the terms congress has outlined for them they must appeal to congress, and not to him, for any change they wish made, as he has no authority to make any.

Secretary Root has been in communication with General Wood regarding the situation in Cuba, and was able to inform the cabinet concerning the impressions which General Wood has of the feeling of the delegates to the constitutional convention. While no new propositions have yet been submitted it is probable that the convention will not accept the Platt amendment outright until another proposition has been made to this government. The administration is fully determined that the Cubans must accept the Platt amendment without qualifications before they can be any change in the status of Cuba.

Following is the text of Senator Platt's letter to the secretary of war:

"I am in receipt of your letter of this date, in which you say that the members of the commission of the Cuban constitutional convention fear that the provisions relative to intervention, made in the third clause of the amendment which has come to bear my name, may have the effect of preventing the independence of Cuba and in reality establish a protectorate or suzerainty by the United States, and you request that I express my views of the question raised."

"In reply I beg to state that the amendment was carefully prepared with the object of avoiding any possible idea that, by the acceptance thereof, the constitutional convention would thereby establish a protectorate or suzerainty of Cuba; and, speaking for myself, it seems impossible that such an interpretation can be given to the clause. I believe that the amendment should be considered as a whole, and it ought to be clear on reading it that its well defined purpose is to secure and safeguard Cuban independence, and set forth at once a clear idea of the friendly disposition of the United States toward the Cuban people, and the express intention on their part to aid them, if necessary, in the maintenance of said independence. These are my ideas, and, although, as you say, I cannot speak for the entire congress, my belief is that such a purpose was well understood by that body."

Radicals Still Hold Out

Havana, June 8.—The Cuban constitutional convention will hold a meeting next Monday to discuss the instructions received from Washington regarding the Platt amendment. The 15 delegates who voted for the amendment are determined to force the Radical element to accept the amendment under a threat of dissolving the convention. The Radicals strongly oppose dissolution, and some of the Extremists admit that it would be better to comply with the Washington instructions.

Metal Trades to Organize

Toronto, June 8.—At the meeting of the Machinists' convention yesterday the resolution was passed pledging the association to form a part of a new Metal Trade association. The object of this new organization is to form a combination of all allied metal trades and make a common cause in any trouble arising with manufacturers. President O'Connell says that from messages received from all over the country matters are going well for the men.

Conger Wins First Round

Des Moines, June 8.—The Republican primaries in Madison county yesterday resulted in a victory for Minister Conover A. B. Cummins of Des Moines, the only candidate for governor on the ticket voted. Madison is the home of both candidates, and is the first county to go for Conger.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW
Hesitation In Some Industries Caused
By Labor Controversies

New York, June 8.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The labor situation in many parts of the country is still seriously unsettled, and constitutes a reason for hesitation in some industries, discouraging new operations which satisfactory conditions would otherwise stimulate. But quick decision is to be expected in some of these labor controversies, and in the meantime trade is encouraged by reports of a satisfactory condition of winter wheat over a large portion of the country.

Shipments of boots and shoes from Boston continue very large, but heavy ships receive fewer orders, and it will be some weeks before active work begins on fall contracts. Retailers are offering black goods for summer wear at reduced prices, and it is evident that the production of these shoes was excessive, while tan shoes have been in much greater demand and manufacturers are pushed to fill contracts. Prices are steady.

The market for cotton goods exhibited greater animation than at any previous time this season. Other textile lines were helped, though less extensively. Better movement of domestic goods and the consequent expectation that mills would need raw material, together with increased activity abroad, sustained cotton.

Aguinaldo of No Importance

New York, June 8.—General Grant was given a reception last night by the U. S. Grant post, G. A. R. In a brief address, General Grant said: Aguinaldo was not as much of a capture in the Philippines as he seems to have been. He had lost about all his influence. We cannot kill him of course, but we want to make him feel that he stands on the same footing with any other Filipino. If we should fine him $10 and send him to jail for 30 days and set him to breaking stone it would be better for him and for ourselves. If, when he comes over here, we treat him with contempt, he will be treated with contempt by the natives when he goes home. But if ever they get the idea we have a high idea of Aguinaldo's importance, when he gets back he will have a following which may make trouble.

Combined to Fight Tammany

New York, June 8.—The anti-Tammany conference committee, which met at the headquarters of the Citizens' union last night, received a report from the sub-committee on invitations to other organizations, and admitted the following organizations to the conference: The Republican committee of Queens county, the Republican committee of Richmond county, the Independent Democracy, the City Democracy, the German-American Reform union, the German-American League, the German-American Municipal League of Manhattan, the German-American Citizens' League of Brooklyn, and the German Republican county committee.

A Philadelphia Mystery

Philadelphia, June 8.—Thomas Murphy, ground keeper of the Philadelphia American League Baseball club, was arrested late last night, and is being held to await the result of serious injuries received by Dennis McGillicuddy, a ticket seller on the grounds. McGillicuddy was found unconscious with a fractured skull in a dressing room of the ball park. How he received his injuries is a mystery. Murphy is suspected of knowing something about the matter, but he refuses to talk. McGillicuddy, it is believed, was struck with a baseball bat.

Optimism

When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously.

"Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired the passerby.

"Because I have just now been emancipated from toll," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!"

Then the optimist walked off, whiling gayly, into the sunshine.—New York Sun.

A Task

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend less, to make, upon the whole, a family happier by his presence, to renounce where that shall be necessary and not to be imbibed, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim conditions to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

RUTLEDGE A SUICIDE

Second of Desperate Trio of Criminals
Who Has Met Tragic Fate

Toronto, June 8.—Of the three men, Fred L. Rice, Thomas Jones and Frank Rutledge, extradited from Chicago to stand trial for the robbery of a bank in Aurora, Rice alone survives. He was sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment yesterday. Jones died from bullet wounds received in a desperate attempt to escape from the officers last Tuesday, and Rutledge committed suicide yesterday.

The first tragedy came as the result of the attempt made by the three prisoners to escape from the constables last Tuesday night. While the carriage containing Rice, Jones and Rutledge and two constables was proceeding from the court house to the jail a friend threw three revolvers through the car window. The desperadoes, securing possession of the revolvers, opened fire upon the constables. Constable Boyd was shot and killed. The officers returned the fire and Jones was wounded in the groin and arm. He died at a hospital. A streetcar conductor, whose car the burglars attempted to board, struck Rutledge over the head with a piece of iron, knocking him senseless. Rice surrendered.

Yesterday Rice and Rutledge were sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment for robbing the Aurora bank. Rutledge was being taken with another prisoner, in charge of one of the jail guards, to dinner about 3 o'clock. Suddenly he made a dash, and springing up the stairs mounted to the gallery running around the inside of the jail, 30 feet from the floor. Climbing over the railing Rutledge jumped. He fell head foremost on the stone floor, fracturing his skull. He was immediately taken to a hospital, where he died at 5 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

Bought Up by Schwab

Philadelphia, June 8.—The North American says: It is authoritatively stated that Charles M. Schwab is the real purchaser of the Bethlehem Steel company, and that the United States Steel corporation, of which he is president, has no part in the deal. Mr. Schwab is understood to have bought the property to protect his own interests.

The deal was closed Thursday afternoon. Vickers Sons & Maxim, who sold the Bethlehem company to him, were told that he was buying it for himself.

He received a telegram from Mr. Schwab, telling him that he had sold the Bethlehem company to him.

He is reported to be a millionaire.

His Spelling System

Dobbs met his friend Turner in the train. They were both going to Birmingham and stopped at the same hotel. Turner registered his name "E. K. Philogynorrh."

Dobbs, noticing it, exclaimed, "Here, what are you using such a foreign name?" replied Turner.

"What kind of a name is it, then?"

"That is my identical old name, and it is English too—pronounced 'Turner'."

"I can't see how you make 'Turner' out of those 13 letters; besides, what is your object in spelling that way?" asked Dobbs.

"Well, you see, nobody ever noticed my name on the register when I wrote it 'Turner,'" the latter explained, "but since I commenced writing it 'Phtholognyrh' I set them all guessing. It is, as I said before, English spelling."

"'Phth' is the sound of 't' in 'philistines,' 'lo' is the sound of 'ur' in 'colonel,' 'gn' there is the 'n' in 'gnat,' 'rrh' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now, if that doesn't spell 'Turner' what does it?"

If the truth came out, I might be considered a candidate for a lunatic asylum."

Hubbard B. McDonald, the journal clerk of the United States senate, is credited with being the ablest parliamentarian connected with that body. He is the third of his family to hold the place, his father and grandfather having preceded him. THE FOUNT OF YOUTH.

The fount of youth has oft been sought
Since days of old,
And oft in fancy men have seen
Its living waters flow.
Through desert, swamp and wilderness
The search has been pursued
In hope that by the magic fount
Youth's charms might be renewed.

But men have turned from that vain quest,
Their hopes forever crushed,
For though they searched through all the world
No magic fountain gushed,
And men resigned themselves to age
That robed them of their grace,
That sapped their strength and thickly spread Time's wrinkles on the face.

In later years men's thoughts have turned
To plans for longer life,
And in elixirs they have sought
New strength for daily strife,
And oft 'tis heralded abroad
That scientist or sage
Has finally evolved a plan
To stay the flight of age.

But men grow old, and women, too,
As in the days of yore,
For no elixirs they have tried
Their youthful charms restore,
And as they can't deceive themselves,
Some seek to hide the truth
And dye bleach their hair and paint
On cheeks the hue of youth.

The fount of youth is in each heart,
And those who keep it pure
Will longer hold the charms of youth
And length of life secure,
And when at last that fountain fails
Old age that steals They'll bear it well because no man
Is older than he feels.

Everyday Courage.

By ETHEL WRIGHT.

"Polite," grumbled Lieutenant Willoughby to himself as he entered the hallway of his friend's apartment in response to a summons bawled out from some part of the interior. "What! Breaking up?" the caller asked, peering through a lighted doorway. He had been obliged to announce himself in some way, for the occupant of the room sat on the floor with his back to the entrance and evidenced no intention of turning to greet his visitor.

"Scott, your manners are beastly," was the intruder's next remark as he threaded his way through the maze of household wreckage that made ingress difficult. At this the broad shoulders turned quickly, and in a moment Scott was shaking his friend's hand in a manner so hearty that Willoughby forgave the boorishness of his first greeting.

"Sit down, old man, if you can find a place. Yes, we are breaking up, as you call it," and the speaker swept his arms in a hopeless way over the confusion of books, pictures and bachelor bric-a-brac.

"Where is the boy?" asked the caller.

"Cleared out," was Scott's short reply as he turned to light his pipe and rummage about for another for his friend.

"You haven't quarreled, have you?" Willoughby inquired quickly, when he left the city a year ago Scott and "the boy" had just taken the apartment that was now being dismantled, and the two were apparently settled for some time.

"How long have you been in town?" Scott asked instead of answering Willoughby's question.

"Got here at 3 o'clock. I had to stop at Washington yesterday to make a report and came over this morning. I tell you it's good to get back even for 30 days. The fun of soldiering in Cuba is all over. There is nothing but manual labor to do there now." Then he added after a moment's hesitation, "I wouldn't have left, though, on any other errand than the one that brought me here."

"Official, I suppose?"

"No," replied Willoughby; "on the contrary, quite the reverse."

Scott mumbled something and looked so absurdly unhappy that the young soldier laughed outright.

"What is the trouble, old man? Has some one bothered you with a retainer? You say Harrison has cleared out. What is it all about? Don't sit there looking at me in that lugubrious fashion. Out with it."

"The boy and I haven't quarreled," Scott answered after a few futile pulls at his pipe. "I jawed him a bit for leaving me with these confounded rooms on my hands, but there was no row. He has changed his plans—living over in Jersey somewhere—Cranford, I believe."

"Oh, Cranford," was the lieutenant's observation, seemingly to himself, as he recalled that the object of his errand lived at the "next stop." "And that's what makes you so glum, is it?"

"Not exactly," Scott spoke now with the tone of a man who has formed a resolution to perform a hateful duty. "If you will find a seat somewhere and light that pipe, I'll tell you about it. Fact is, my boy, you are in this story in a way."

Willoughby's expression was a composite of mystification and uneasiness, but he only waved his hand as a signal that his friend should proceed. This was just what he did not seem ready to do.

"For heaven's sake, if you have anything to say," Willoughby finally remarked rather peevishly, "say it!"

"Harrison is going to marry Miss Mead," Scott said suddenly, being careful, however, not to look at his listener. When he had imparted this information, he seemed to be able to go ahead without any further delay. "I'll tell you how it happened—the engagement, I mean. The boy has known her a long time; ever since he came to New York. First girl he ever met, and he was in love with her from the moment he was introduced. Says he was, anyway. But Harrison, you know, is a queer sort of chap. Has no idea of his worth and all that. He isn't half 'pushful' enough to get along in this world with men, let alone women. He thought Miss Mead would never look at him, and I suppose she took him at his own valuation. Women are apt to do that, you know. At any rate, he made no progress. You know what I mean. I am telling you the results of my observations. Harrison never said anything about it.

"Well, after Miss Mead met you at Tampa last year the boy's chances seemed to dwindle to nothing."

"It seems to me you are making a long story of it," said Willoughby.

"Better let me go on, I guess. Now I've told you how the case stood when Miss Mead came north last year."

The listener made another move to protest against the form the narrative had taken, but realizing that his mentor knew no other way of telling what he had made up his mind to say Willoughby settled back again.

"Three or four months after we had been reading in the newspapers about your work in Cuba Harrison was drawn on a jury." A groan from Willoughby announced his despair at this new digression, but Scott went on without a pause:

"You will see the connection later. I helped him kill time while he waited to be called, and when he was finally drawn I was there as regularly as the judge. I have forgotten the title of the case they put him on. It was the heirs of somebody against a man named Stevens, who held a lot of property that was claimed by the heirs under a will. Stevens claimed under a deed, and the suit was brought to set aside the deed on the ground that it was obtained by fraud.

"When the lawyers on each side went through the form of asking the juries if they knew any of the interested parties to the suit, I saw Harrison shake his head in a bored way. To cut this part short, Miss Mead walked into the courtroom on the second day of the trial. Harrison told me afterward that he knew in instant that she was interested in the case. Before he left the box that day he asked to be allowed to see one of the exhibits, and, reading the caption, he found that his intuition had been correct. I believe Miss Mead had been made a party to the suit after it had been begun in a lower court, and her name did not appear in the list which the lawyers read when they polled the jury.

"We talked the matter over that evening, and of course I advised the boy to explain to the court that he had discovered since the trial began that he was acquainted with one of the plaintiffs in the case. I have not been able to make up my mind as to why he insisted upon going on with the trial. I explained to him that it was a very risky thing to do. He always was belligerent, though, when he made up his mind.

"Miss Mead did not come to the courtroom again until the last day of the trial. The lawyers strung it out for two weeks. It was a very close case. I could never have decided it either way. It had been fought by skilled lawyers from the start, and they had succeeded in keeping everything off the record that would throw light on the questions at issue. There was something like $20,000 or $30,000 in it for each of the heirs under the will. These heirs were nieces of the original beneficiary, but that hasn't anything to do with this story. Miss Mead is not rich, I believe," the narrator added reflectively.

"As I have told you, Miss Mead was on hand to hear the lawyers sum up on the last day of the trial. She took good care not to sit where Harrison could see her, but he passed within ten inches of her when the 12 men filed out to the jury room. It was a long, uneasy wait for me while that jury 'deliberated,' as the newspapers say. Harrison was the foreman, and when he got up to deliver the verdict I could feel my heart beating 'way up in my throat!'

"Go on, go on," Willoughby urged as Scott paused at the recollection of how his heart acted on this occasion.

"Well, the jury decided against the heirs at every point. Stevens had several deeds, and every one was sustained. The heirs didn't get a shilling. Miss Mead had left the room by the time the jury was discharged."

"By Jove!" insanely remarked the listener.

"Yes, sir, and Harrison told me he had a hard time persuading two of the jurors to decide against the—against her."

"But I don't quite see"—Willoughby began.

"Of course you don't, my brave soldier boy. I am coming to that now."

"Harrison, mind you, had not seen Miss Mead for the two weeks, except on those two days during the trial, and he did not hurry about calling after the verdict. I think that it was a week later that we all met at the theater, a great piece of luck for the boy. I can't tell you exactly how they straightened the matter out. Perhaps it didn't need any straightening, but way back in the box toward the end of the show I heard Miss Mead say, half soberly and half laughingly, 'There are all sorts of courage,' and when we got home!"

"I think that's enough, Scott, if you don't mind. Where can I find the sailing of the Havana boat?"

"I was afraid of that," said Scott.—St. Louis Republic.

THE HORSE SHOW.

Emma Offutt, 21114, who won the M. and M. in 1896, is in training once more.

The Canadian trotter, Superior Lily, 2194, will be seen in the grand circuit this season.

Freed, 217½, pacing, is being worked without the pyjamas by M. S. King at the Cleveland track.

Ira Ryerson was the leading money winning driver at the late meeting in Vienna. His horses won $2,775.

R. P. Lougee drove Lady Harris, a pacer, by Combination, a mile in 2:23½ hatched to a cart at Readville the other Ind.

The pacing gelding Chestnut, 2:12½, will again be campaigned in 1901, and according to reports from Danville, Ind., he is a sure two timer.

The E. H. Harriman who was such a conspicuous figure in the stock market recently is best known to horsemen as the owner of John R. Gentry and Stamboul.

George Cochran, Allegheny, popularly known as "Rusty," is now quartered at the Cleveland track with Single K, 2:13½, and Lucy B, a promising green gelding.

A horse standing 23½ hands high has been imported from Spain by L. N. Roberts, Boston, according to reports, which, if true, makes this giant eight green feet.

The green paper Tommy Pointer is now owned by A. E. Cummings, Reading, Pa., who purchased him recently from W. C. Brown, Chicago, for $2,000. It is claimed he has 2:10 speed.

THE WHIRL OF FASHION.

Bertha collars of embroidered batiste appear on very many of the new gowns.

French châle and the sheer, beautiful muslin veils are proving two very favorite materials in preparing the summer outfit.

White, black and white and soft gray feather boas have taken the place of all heavier kinds of neckwear. These are but instances of many styles, however. Tours de cou are seen in all colors.

A novel idea in flower trimming is a wreath of ivy geranium. The foliage is extremely delicate, lending itself to any shape, and the pale pink or red blossoms are pretty in various combinations.

Veils of plain meadow tulle are taking the place of the fancy designs. Tulle of the same color as the flowers on the hat is considered most tasteful, although white lace veils are worn with simpler hats.

Wide ribbon in plaid, floral or Persian patterns is in demand for sailor hats. Some pretty hats for morning and country wear are trimmed with plain wide ribbon edged with a straw braid to match the hat.

A French design for making beach and mountain costumes has the blouse arranged to represent a white shirt waist in front under an Eaton jacket, collarless or not and with or without revers, as the wearer chooses.

THE DOMINIE.

General O. O. Howard has declined to accept again the presidency of the Congregational Home Missionary society. General Howard has desired for several years to retire.

The Rev. Charles O. Day, secretary of the Congregational Educational society, has been elected Bartlett professor of homiletics and practical theology at the Andover Theological seminary and has been chosen president of the faculty. Dr. Day is a graduate of Yale in the class of 1872.

The Rev. Mr. Pearson, the clergyman who was elected sheriff of Cumberland county (Portland), Me., after having been nominated as a joke by the liquor men, has been a source of unending trouble to them ever since. His rigid enforcement of the prohibition law has, it is said, resulted in an offer of a large sum if he will resign or go to Europe and remain there until his term shall have expired.

PEN, CHISEL AND BRUSH.

Swinburne has a marvelous memory.

He once recited several pages of Milton's prose 20 years after reading them.

Robert L. Aitken has been chosen as the sculptor for the American navy monument to be erected in San Francisco.

John S. Sargent, the painter, was born in Italy in 1856. He was educated there and in Germany until he was 18. It was Lord Leighton who first encouraged him to paint and suggested his studying under Carolus Duran.

"Yes, sir, and Harrison told me he had a hard time persuading two of the jurors to decide against the—against her."

"But I don't quite see"—Willoughby began.

TALES OF CITIES.

Toronto saloons close at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, that no workman with a weakness may spend his wages before he gets home.

Chicago has a much disregarded ordinance requiring that the windows of high buildings shall be so adjusted that they can be washed from the inside.

The vexed question of street signs

Filthiest Place in the World.

Port-au-Prince, the capital, is—by consent of all who have had opportunity of comparing it with other cities—the filthiest place in the world. The town was laid out by the French, and the streets are wide. It is only their great width, that makes them passable, for the roadway before his dwelling is every householder's rubbish shoot, and slab-sided pigs and starving dogs perform all the sanitary offices for the town of Port-au-Prince save in the rainy season, when a heavier storm than usual comes to flush the open drains. In consequence the populace live in an atmosphere of combined cesspool and ash pit, which by all the laws of hygiene should produce chronic plague.

The free and independent negro leads the life that most nearly approaches his ideal. They have a proverb in the country that "only white men, black women and asses work," and there is truth in it. The black men lie around all day sleeping in the sun. His utmost effort is to play dice or watch a cock-fight, but sleep is his favorite occupation, and he can do that better than anything else. In the country districts the old plantations have long since slipped back into the luxuriant overgrowth of the forest. In town any trading done is by the women and by foreigners. Undisturbed by the white man, to whom he is insolent, the only exertion demanded of him is to avoid the attentions of the police.—Chambers' Journal.

Uncle Mingo and the Waiter.

Uncle Mingo was in town a day or two ago. It had been a long time since the old man had been to Savannah, and he rambled over the streets all the morning, impressed with the wonderful things he saw.

Naturally toward the midday he began to feel a little tired and very hungry, so as he passed in front of one of the eating houses for colored people, of which there are several in the neighborhood of the Plant system depot, the succulent piles of edibles in the windows offered too great a temptation to be resisted. He entered the restaurant and sat down to a table.

"All right, sah," said the affable waiter, coming up. "Wot'll it be?"

"I want some o' dat fried fish casserole, too, an' some o' dem doughnuts."

"Yes, sah. Wot else?"

"I want some o' dat fried chicken, too, an' some o' dem doughnuts."

ON WIND AND REACHING

Independence Gives Another Fine Exhibition

SHOWED HER HEELS TO TUG

Has Not Yet Been Tried In a Spin Dead to Leeward—Lawson Tells the Public That He Will Show What a Modern Boston Boat Can Do

Boston, June 10.—The Independence had another short sail in the bay late yesterday afternoon, and the breeze being only moderate the big yacht spread more canvas than has yet been hoisted.

The sea was smooth and again she proved her wonderful reaching qualities besides showing considerable ability in windward work.

Not only did she hold well up to the breeze, keeping within an average of three points, but she footed quite fast and tacked in the neighborhood of 20 seconds. The trial was confined to less than two hours of actual sailing, most of the time being spent on the wind or reaching, and as yet the yacht has not been sent dead to leeward, it being thought well to wait for the spinaker and jibtopsail.

There was no accident, barring a slight rent in the mainsail, which rather hindered the setting of that great piece of canvas.

The wind, which, up to 3 o'clock, had been blowing half a gale from the northwest, calmed down to an eight-knot breeze as the Independence started off, so that the yacht did not foot quite so fast in her first broad reach as during her second trial last Thursday. After running out into the bay for about three miles, the sheets were still further eased, and for a mile or two she ran down the wind with her boom about three-quarters out.

In this run she dropped the tug rapidly, and it was only when she hauled on to the wind that the newspaper men were able to get within a quarter of a mile of her. During the windward work the gaff topsail was sent up and set considerably better than on Thursday. The tug was sent along directly in her wake, and twice she tacked within six points of her compass. The breeze at the time was blowing about 8 miles an hour, and the Independence seemed to move very fast.

Sheets were again eased, and the baby jibtopsail hoisted, which gave her the largest spread of sail which she has yet carried. Under this sail she made another reach of 3 1/4 miles in about 18 minutes. By this time it was beginning to grow dark, and the tug was called alongside to tow her back to the city.

To the public which has followed the building of the Independence with interest, Mr. Lawson makes the following announcement:

"It now having been settled that the Independence cannot take part in the cup defense, I will do all I can to arrange as many races as possible for her until the season closes, that she may show her friends what a modern Boston boat can do."

"Her first engagement is the races at Newport against the Constitution and the Columbia, July 2, 4 and 6."

Those who are directly interested in the Independence are feeling down in the mouth and are much chagrined at the attitude of the committee.

A. C. Fernald, secretary of the Boston Yacht club, does not sympathize with the feelings expressed by some others. He says: "I read the New York Yacht club's last letter to Mr. Lawson, and I think the New Yorkers are just about right. I must say I rather liked the reply they made. They have been as plain and straightforward as anyone could be in all their dealings with Mr. Lawson. They told him May 1 what he must do to enter his boat for the trial races to choose a cup defender, and he has persisted in not doing it. They told him long ago that he must charter his yacht to some member of the New York Yacht club, and they would ask nothing more."

"Mr. Lawson has all along taken an attitude which showed his intention to make the New York Yacht club his cup defender, and I certainly don't approve of it. He is a public-spirited man, and he has the only boat ready to race, but that doesn't alter the facts of his dealing with the New York Yacht club."

Another person of Mr. Fernald's opinion said: "There is hardly a member of the New York Yacht club who does not want to see the Independence race. I believe this; I know it!" Commodore L. M. Clark of the Hull-Massachusetts Yacht club was the speaker. This remark is the more significant in that Mr. Clark is president of the Yacht Racing association, and his name has been frequently mentioned as the party to whom Mr. Lawson might turn over the boat.

Russian Police Net Out

London, June 10.—The Russian government," says the Moscow correspondent of The Daily Express, "has been arresting and sending into exile prominent persons suspected of complicity in revolutionary agitation. Among them is Count Bobrinsky, a descendant of Catherine the Great."

POWERFUL STIMULANTS

Still Considered Necessary to Prolong the Life of Mrs. McKinley

Washington, June 10.—The slight improvement in Mrs. McKinley's health, which manifested itself the latter part of the week, continues, and hope begins to be felt that she may, after all, recover from her present attack. The improvement, however, is so slight as not to change materially the extreme gravity of the case.

The usual consultation of physicians was held yesterday, and at its close the following bulletin was issued: "Mrs. McKinley's physicians report that she passed a very comfortable night, and continues to improve."

The fact that Mrs. McKinley has more than held her own, and that no unfavorable turn has occurred, is considered in every way encouraging, but as this result is due partly to the constant use of powerful medicines, the physicians fear that effect of reducing the stimulants and likewise have to cope with the effect on her system of the constant administration of the only means of prolonging her life and making ultimate recovery at least a possibility.

These stimulants and the complaint from which she suffered in California, which is now under better control, have so weakened her powers of resistance that apprehension is ever present that sinking spells may occur suddenly, from which she cannot be roused. Dr. Rixey regularly makes three visits each day.

Mrs. McKinley will be taken to Canton whenever she is in condition to bear the journey. It is believed that considerable benefit would accrue from removal to her old home, especially as it is cooler and more breezy there than here.

Suicide of Major Daly

Pittsburgh, June 10.—Major W. H. Daly, surgeon general on the staff of Lieutenant General Miles in Porto Rico, committed suicide at his home here yesterday by shooting in the right temple. No cause is known for Dr. Daly's death unless it be that insomnia drove him to temporary insanity. The doctor was a widower, and leaves no immediate family. He was 59 years of age. He gained international prominence during the Cuban war, as it was his report to the commanding general of the army that started the "embalmed beef" investigation.

Miners' Terrible Experience

Halifax, June 10.—Two miners employed in the old Aberdeen mine at Springhill colliery on Friday, were rescued alive yesterday. At the time of the accident thousands of tons of stone rolled down the incline, completely blocking the slope for nearly 200 feet. A gang of 60 men went to work to rescue their comrades, whose tape conveyed the news that they were still alive. An opening was made from a new direction, and the men were reached after 36 hours, very much exhausted and chilled by cold and damp.

Glad of Troops' Withdrawal

Pekin, June 10.—The Chinese express great satisfaction at the announcement of the intention of the court to return to Pekin in September. All the foreign troops, with the exception of the legation guards, are expected to withdraw before the middle of that month, the only troops not already under orders of withdrawal being the Japanese.

It is said, however, that when Japan is absolutely certain the other powers are evacuating, her own troops can be withdrawn on two days' notice.

Charged With Seven Murders

Middlesboro, Ky., June 10.—Louis Burt of Bridgeton, N. J., a former Smith college student, who is under arrest in the county jail on the charge of larceny of money, watches and jewelry, to the value of $3000, from the rooms of students of Smith college, is suffering from mental derangement and should receive treatment.

This important development in the case, that has attracted so much attention, was made known to the father of the girl late yesterday afternoon. Dr. Mary J. Brewster, physician at Smith college, visited the girl Saturday night and again yesterday, and she reported finding her in such a condition mentally that she expressed a desire that Dr. J. G. Hanson, the woman physician at the state insane asylum, be called into the case.

Dr. Hanson, after making a careful examination, expressed the opinion that the Burt girl is suffering from mental derangement and should immediately receive treatment. The physician stated to the girl's father, J. O. Burt, and that if she were released from jail she will not be in a condition to go home, but should be sent to a sanitarium.

Mr. Burt spoke of the nervousness and impulsive character of his daughter, and said she could not be in her right mind and commit the crime she is accused of. He said her life had been exemplary one while at home; she was a bright scholar and was valedictorian of her class when she graduated from the high school.

One of the physicians, who saw Miss Burt yesterday, expressed the opinion that her nerves had been unstrung to such a degree that it had affected her mind to such an extent that she had lost the power to control her actions at times. Experts on insanity have been sent for. If these experts decide the girl is mentally deranged, their statements will be certified to before Judge Bassett of the probate court, and then submitted to the grand jury, which meets today, and will probably report on all criminal cases by Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning. If the jury fails to find an indictment against the girl then the question of bail is likely not to be considered.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt spent several hours yesterday with their daughter in the Hampshire county jail, and several college girls visited the institution, but were not allowed to see Miss Burt, who was not required to attend the regular chapel services held in the morning.

Dreyfus Is Ungrateful

London, June 10.—The visit to England of Maitre Labori has developed the fact that the relations between himself and Dreyfus have greatly changed since the Remond drama. Maitre Labori's friends declare that the last time Dreyfus was in Paris he never went near M. Labori and has in other ways shown what they stigmatize as an utter lack of gratitude. M. Labori does not conceal this appreciation of these circumstances, but is as ardent as ever in declaring in private that Dreyfus was wrongfully convicted.

Poor Prospect of Salvage

Belfast, June 10.—A mob hooted the Corpus Christi procession of 5000 persons here yesterday. Several rushes were made, and finally the police were compelled to charge the crowd, a number of persons being injured. Many were placed under arrest. The excitement continued for several hours.

J., a former Smith college student, who is under arrest in the county jail on the charge of larceny of money, watches and jewelry, to the value of $3000, from the rooms of students of Smith college, is suffering from mental derangement and should receive treatment.

NO PRECEDENT

For Non-Acceptance of Presidential Chair For a Third Term

Cincinnati, June 10.—"There has been no time in our history when conditions would so justify the election of a president to a third term as in the case of McKinley." This remark was made by Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor.

"McKinley is personally the most popular president we have had in a long time, and he has certainly most creditably performed the duties of his high office. I think it is time, furthermore, to demolish the fiction that there is an unwritten law, established by Washington, that no President of the United States may accept a third term. The facts are, as any student of the times may discover, that it was fear of defeat which impelled Washington to decline a third nomination. Being a Federalist he was the object of very violent attacks on the part of the Democrats of his day, and recognizing the growing strength of his opponents, he doubted, as I believe, his ability to again secure an election if he should run."

Alleged Forger Caught

San Francisco, June 10.—Edgar Geirhafer, who claims to be vice president of the Universal Automobile company, with offices in this city, was arrested in escelles on a bench warrant issued in New York. He was charged with grand larceny. It is claimed that forgeries committed by Geirhafer in New York last March against the company employing him, netted $16,000. He passed through this city on his way to Japan, but went only as far as Honolulu. He returned from there, and has since been residing in Martin county.

Triple Drowning Accident

Philadelphia, June 10.—A party of six persons, three men and three girls, while sailing on the Delaware river yesterday, a few miles below this city, were thrown into the water by the swamping of their skiff during a squall, and the three girls were drowned. They were guests of the Federal Boat party.

Two of the men remained at the place while the others notified the police of this city and Assistant Medical Examiner Meigs, the latter going out to Chelmsford and granting permission for the removal of the body to Lowell. It was then dark, so that search of the woods was abandoned for the night. The autopsy will be held today.

As it appeared after the body was found, the protruding limbs in the brush pile could have been seen from the wood road, and a number of persons have driven over the road within the past few weeks.

Several of these persons did not see anything out of the ordinary, probably because they were not looking for it.

The logging crew during the winter were in charge of Foreman Conroy, who is still at work in another wood lot half a mile distant, but who states that he had no occasion to go to the old camp.

Even had he gone there, the chance might have been, as with one of his workmen, who, only a few days ago, went over the wood road, and by the wood pile in question to the camp, without noticing the brush heap.

The logging crew scattered with the warm weather, but the foreman remembers no woman who would have had any reason to go into the camp, save to have made a brief visit to carry in clothing to relatives. Dr. Meigs on viewing the body where it was found thought it had lain there four or five weeks, and the camp had been locked longer than that.

The body was viewed at an undertaker's in this city by Dr. Meigs. He judged the woman to have been 25 to 30 years of age, 5 feet 4 inches in height, and to have weighed 140 pounds.

Whether or not there were wounds remains to be shown by examination. An abrasion near the heart may have been from violence, but insects evidently had made some inroads in the flesh. On of the men who assisted in removing the body from its first position concluded that the abrasion was from a bullet, but as to this the autopsy will determine.

The police know of no missing woman in Lowell or neighboring towns. They believe the body was taken into the woods and left there.

Killed by Overwork

A Lesson to Humorists.

One cannot safely assume in these days that there is any region in which such and such a journal is not read. Recently a certain humorist needed a rest and went and stopped in a cottage in a remote village by the sea. His sitting room opened on the kitchen, where his landlady, a woman widely esteemed as a person of great acumen and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and put both landlady and neighbors into some amusing sketches which were promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Then one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cover before an indignant matron, who told him, among other things, that he had one hour in which to pack his traps and quit the village. She was not going to have an eavesdropper in her house, and she added a significant hint to the effect that the people of the village were of the same opinion and might be betrayed into an attempt to give a forcible demonstration of their views.—London Post.

Caterpillars Cause Worriment

Boston, June 10.—The Allston district is infested with caterpillars, and many persons are suffering personal discomforts on account of the situation. For some time doctors have been puzzled over cases of skin poisoning, and at length they have concluded that the fuzz which flies from the worms is at the root of the trouble. The citizens are fighting the pest with all sorts of destroyers.

Four Bears at a Shot.

A number of years ago Mr. Withee was presented with two fine hounds, and, wishing to try their training and their grit, he took them out to do a little bear hunting.

The first morning Withee let the dogs out for a run while he was getting the breakfast, expecting them to be back in a short time. When breakfast was over, the dogs had not returned, so, taking his gun, Mr. Withee started out in the direction they had taken. After traveling about a mile the faint barking of dogs could be heard, and it was then plain why the dogs had not returned. They had scented game and were in pursuit. The sound of the barking led him far up the side of a mountain, and soon he came in sight of the dogs standing around the upturned roots of a tree.

Mr. Withee crept up cautiously until within about 15 feet of a cave that was near by, and then a black, shaggy head was seen just above the roots.

Taking good aim, he fired his .44 caliber and awaited results. After several minutes he went up to the cave, and what he saw there gave him a shock from which he has never recovered.

Two bears lay dead, and two more were so stunned that a few quick passes with a knife settled them.

For the four bears Mr. Withee received $20 bounty, $27.50 for their hides and $42 for the bear oil, making $89.50 for one day's hunt.—Maine Woods.

All For Love.

It was a runaway match. The young couple had nothing to live on but love, and they grew thin on it, for the butcher, baker, etc., heartily refused to barter any of the necessities of life for a bit of love, and the landlady wouldn't accept even a large slice of it for rent.

At last they were reduced to such extremes that starvation stared them in the face. When starvation does this, it, so to say, "puts you out of countenance."

"Oh, George," wailed the young wife, "what shall we do? I am so hungry."

"Asias, I know not, darling!" he sighed fondly but sadly, twining her luxuriant tresses.

"But I know, George!" she suddenly exclaimed after a pause. "Sell my hair!"

"What?" he almost shouted, with a horror stricken face. "Sacrifice your lovely golden locks! Ruthlessly cut off the greatest ornament a woman can possess? Never! Never! I will starve first!"

"But, George," she assured him, "it does not require cutting off. See!"

And she detached the glistening 3 guinea switch from her head and laid it on his hand.

That night the young couple supped luxuriously, but still he was not happy.—Pearson's Weekly.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS

ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town bourse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1774. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS' MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

PRESIDENTS' LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squat, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is Sachem's Knoll.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q. was born. Has quaint old paper parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will bear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

A cricket ball has been hit 30 yards farther than it has ever been thrown.

The wild white sheep is found nowhere in the world but Alaska, and few specimens for mounting whole have ever been obtained.

The original word translated apothecary in the Bible is believed by some authorities to be better translated by perfumer.

In the year 1600 the manufacture of silk began in England.

FIFTIETH CONVENTION

International Jubilee of Y. M.

C. A. at Boston

FIVE THOUSAND DELEGATES

Are Expected to Participate in the Proceedings, Those From Australia and Japan Having Already Arrived —Exhibit of Association's Work

Boston, June 11.—Streaming into Boston from nearly every quarter of the globe have come delegates to the semi-centennial and international jubilee convention of the Young Men's Christian association of North America.

Practically every civilized country in the world was represented today when the convention was called to order in the big exhibition hall of the Mechanics' building, and it is expected that there will be 5000 delegates from the different associations in attendance during the six days the convention is in session.

Those who have reached the city scarcely paused to shake the dust of travel from their clothes before appearing at the headquarters at Mechanics' building, where a large force of officials was ready to assign suitable boarding places and attend to other needs of the visitors.

No delegate left the building without a most careful and thorough inspection of the great jubilee exhibit in one of the large halls of the building. This consists of photographs of Y. M. C. A. camps, athletic teams, gymnasiums and diagrams of work done in Bible study, sent by 200 city associations, 40 railroad, 55 student, 15-colored, 10-army and navy associations, and 40 boys' departments, as well as 10 associations in foreign lands, whose work is fostered and modelled after the work in America. Awards of merit, consisting of blue ribbons and red ribbons, for first and second prizes, had been distributed among the different classes of exhibits.

The exhibit contains material from all kinds of associations, in all departments of activity. It was designed to graphically present the history of the movement in the American associations for the past 50 years. Naturally the bulk of the material is historical, showing evolution, progress and development.

Aside from this, there was material showing the nature and extent of work done in the most important Bible study and religious work activities; the practical educational work in its numerous phases of Library, reading room, literary societies, educational clubs, lectures and valuable class work; the important physical work and all that stands for symmetrical body building and clean sport; the social work, employment bureau, women's auxiliary, and the newly appreciated and vastly important work for boys.

The exhibition, it is believed, will prove one of the leading features of the convention.

The first of the delegates to arrive were those from the most distant climes, one party from Adelaide, Aus., and another from Japan getting in yesterday. Nearly all the arriving delegates were met at the station by committees, and after visiting Mechanics' hall, began a sightseeing tour of the city. Nearly all the places of interest, especially those of an historic nature, in which Boston abounds, were thrown open to the visitors, while on the Public Gardens there was a special floral display for their benefit.

The actual work of the convention begins today, when the retiring president called the great body to order in the main hall of Mechanics' building. This hall has a seating capacity of nearly 6000, and there is every indication that its resources will be severely taxed every day during the week. Special meetings have been planned to be held in other places.

Old Landmark and Relic Gone

Bayfield, Wis., June 11.—The old Catholic church at La Pointe, Madeline Island, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The church was an ancient landmark, and contained an ancient painting, "The Descent From the Cross," which Indian tradition says was a gift to the La Pointe mission in 1693 by Father Marquette. It is the opinion of some that the picture was stolen and the church set on fire to cover up the loss.

Surrendered to Escape Mob

Hagerstown, Md., June 11.—Hunted by armed men, who threatened to lynch him for assaulting Miss Lizzie Gossard, a young white woman, Joseph Powell, colored, gave himself up to the officers yesterday to escape the vengeance of his pursuers. He was hurried to Chambersburg and placed in jail, and a strong guard established about the building.

A Chinese Calamity

Victoria, B. C., June 11.—The steamer Kinshia Maru arrived yesterday from the Orient. She brought news that a Chinese passenger boat, bound from Che San to Ne Pin, was upset during a squall, and out of 68 on board only nine were saved.

HUB'S NEW L ROAD

Management Met With Many Difficulties on the Opening Day

Boston, June 11.—Boston's new elevated road, five miles in length, was publicly opened for traffic to about 300,000 passengers yesterday, without loss of life, although with two serious accidents, and a number of minor mishaps. The conditions are the minimum of risk, considering the crushes of humanity at the several stations all day. The victims of serious accidents were James G. Boyd, aged 30, and John Dunphy, 35, workmen, who were knocked off the elevated structure at the Dudley street station. The fall was about 20 feet to the street pavement. They were working on the road and were probably pushed off by a train.

The running of trains, a total of 300 for the day, was not without great friction, due to the abnormal demands for transportation. In operating the trains the road's officials had their hands full. The time schedule in the morning went to pieces badly, and while recovery was made in the middle of the day, the delays when people were homeward bound were frightful. Today the running is smoother.

Mrs. French Sued For $30,000

Boston, June 11.—Mrs. Julia P. French, of the French family, was sued for $30,000 by Frank Highstetter, in the suit brought by Frank Highstetter to recover $50,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution and defamation of character. The plaintiff did odd jobs for Mrs. French, and some time ago she caused his arrest on a charge of larceny of diamond rings. In the criminal court Highstetter was acquitted by a jury, and immediately instituted this civil action against his accuser. The defense sets up the truth of the accusation, and also that Mrs. French was acting under advice of counsel in making the complaint.

Proposed Races Are Off

Boston, June 11.—The proposed races off the north shore between the Shamrock II and the Constitution, Independence and Columbia, for Mr. Lawson's $1000 cup, will be abandoned. Members of the Hull-Massachusetts Yacht club committee say that the postponement of the America's cup race would place the north shore races too late in the fall, so that the Shamrock II could not come, while the Constitution and Columbia would not, because of the friction over Mr. Lawson's correspondence with the New York Yacht club.

Hutchinson Succeeds Guy.

Boston, June 11.—The Republican city committee last night unanimously elected Isaac P. Hutchinson, its president to succeed Jesse B. Guye. After the convention Mr. Hutchinson gave out a statement in which he attacked reflectively Mayor Hart's "board of strategy," which he declared, had been making serious blunders. A resolution of congratulation to Governor Crane on his attitude on the referendum in connection with the proposed Washington street subway was voted down.

Lynn School Contests

Lynn, Mass., June 11.—O. B. Bruce, who has been superintendent of schools here for 15 years, failed of a re-election by the school committee last night, and so a long drawn out contest to secure a new superintendent has made headway. As there was no result, after balloting for three candidates, election was deferred until July. The committee ended another contest by voting to continue military drill at the high school.

Don't Pay to Disobey Court

Worcester, Mass., June 11.—The Bigelow Carpet company of Clinton was fined $2000; its agent, E. W. Burdett, and two others were sent to the house of correction for 20 days, and Walter F. Page and Isaac J. Flagg, men in charge of the outdoor work of the corporation in Clinton, were each fined $100 for contempt of court yesterday by Judge Gaskill of the superior court, for violating an injunction issued by him last Thursday.

No Light on Mystery

Lowell, Mass., June 11.—There is yet no clue to the identity of the woman whose headless body was found in the woods near Chelmsford, nor is there anything that tends to establish by whom she was murdered. Investigations indicate that it is improbable that any of the woodchoppers who work in the vicinity are guilty of the crime.

Prices at Bed Rock

Fall River, Mass., June 11.—The selling committee, at a special meeting held here yesterday to consider several offers for large blocks of cloth at a price 1-8 below the prevailing quotation, decided to refuse all bids for prints under the present market figure. The action of the committee meets with the unanimous approval of manufacturers.

Plymouth Monument Defaced

Plymouth, Mass., June 11.—The recent vandalism at the Plymouth rock canopy has been paralleled by the placing of defacing words on the base of the Soldiers' monument on Training Green. Tar was used, and the exudation was very deep into the granite.

Another For Little Swede

Worcester, Mass., June 11.—John A. Nelson defeated Albert Champion in a 15-mile motor-paced match race at the opening of the Coliseum here last night. Champion was clearly out of condition. Nelson experienced considerable trouble with his pacing machines.

MAINE CENTRAL STRIKE

TRACKMEN WANT ADVANCE

They Quit Work and Are Followed by Coal Heavers—Engineers and Firemen May Go Out—Canadian Pacific Line May Become Involved

Waterville, Me., June 11.—A general strike of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trackmen on the Maine Central system was inaugurated yesterday afternoon when section bosses handed in their keys and declared that they were to be considered no longer responsible for the property of the company.

Eight hundred men are affected by the strike. The brotherhood on the Maine Central system is divided into three divisions, Portland, Waterville and Bangor. John T. Hogan of Waterville is chairman of the general grievance committee, and will establish headquarters in Portland. The men ask for an advance of 25 cents a day. Mr. Hogan says that 95 percent of the men on the system are in the order. It is reported that the other railroad orders will refuse to go upon the road until the trackmen are replaced. Chairman Hogan has made a statement defining the position of the trackmen.

The coal heavers of the Maine Central have joined the strikers. At strike headquarters it is claimed that all but three men are out between Waterville and Vanceboro, and between Waterville and Brunswick. Reports indicate that the strike is general on the Maine Central system. Strikers claim that the engineers and firemen are in charge of the tracks. The strikers are confident of winning inside of two days.

Union Men Frozen Out

THE KILLING OF MOSHER

As Described to Counsel by William Hands

GRAFFAM IS A MURDERER

If the Statement of His Alleged Accomplice Is True—Will Tell Jury All He Knows About the Mother of the Victim Testifies

Portland, Me., June 11.—What promises to be one of the most interesting legal battles in recent years began in the superior court here when Edward Graffam was placed on trial for the murder of Clifford Mosher in Gorham on the evening of Jan. 12, 1901.

The entire forenoon session was occupied in securing a jury and active proceedings in the trial began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when County Attorney Whitehouse opened the case for the government.

The county attorney gave an account of the movements of the two men, as told by the negro, William Hands, to his counsel. This is different from any account ever published, and is to the effect that when Hands accompanied Graffam to the Mosher place he was in ignorance of the latter's real motive. When the two arrived there, Hands says, Graffam went to the door and knocked, and returning to Hands, told him that there was no one at home but an old lady, and proposed that they go in and get her money. Hands refused to have anything to do with the matter, whereupon Graffam went around back of the buildings alone. Hands says he heard a crashing noise inside the house, and, going to investigate, found the woman dead and cremate another body procured from a hospital.

The woman became ill, according to program, but did not rally, and died. Her body was at once cremated. An inquest was held by Assistant Coroner Weickler, without a jury, and Weickler returned to the coroner's office a verdict that the woman had died of natural causes. The death of the woman is shrouded in mystery, and physicians on the stand differed widely as to the cause of death. The state, however, declared that the woman was murdered, although it could not be positively proven.

It was shown that all the insurance carried by the woman was assigned before her death and that her will was drawn up after these assignments had been made. The will had no effect save the clause touching cremation, and it is claimed by the state that the will was prepared only to facilitate the disposition of the body after death.

A doctor found that Miss Loch's skull was fractured. He said she could not recover.

PENITENTIARY SENTENCES

For Two Men Who Conspired to Defraud Insurance Companies

Chicago, June 11.—Dr. August M. Unger and F. W. Brown, on trial for conspiracy to defraud insurance companies, through the death of Miss Marie Debach, were last evening found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary under the indeterminate act. Frank H. Smiley, indicted with Unger and Brown, pleaded guilty, and turned state's evidence. It is likely that he will escape with a light sentence.

The evidence in the case showed that Unger, Brown, Smiley and Miss Debach entered into a conspiracy by which Smiley was to appear as the affianced husband of the woman. She was then to be ill and apparently die, leaving the insurance, which included one policy in a stock company and two in fraternal organizations, the total aggregating $25,000. The woman in her will said that she desired her remains to be cremated, and it is supposed that it was the intention to hurry her away after her supposed death and cremate another body procured from a hospital.

The woman became ill, according to program, but did not rally, and died. Her body was at once cremated. An inquest was held by Assistant Coroner Weickler, without a jury, and Weickler returned to the coroner's office a verdict that the woman had died of natural causes.

The death of the woman is shrouded in mystery, and physicians on the stand differed widely as to the cause of death. The state, however, declared that the woman was murdered, although it could not be positively proven.

President McKinley Would Not Accept Renomination

MAKES PUBLIC STATEMENT

Clearing the Ground of Inevitable Third Term Suggestions Which May Be Brought Before His Advisers In Filling Engagements This Summer

Washington, June 12.—President McKinley has put an effectual quietus on the third term talk which has gained some currency in the newspapers through interviews with certain well-known Republicans, favoring the renomination of the president for a third term.

Shortly before yesterday's cabinet meeting adjourned, Secretary Cortelyou gave to the press a signed statement by the president, intended for the American people, announcing that he was not a candidate for a third term, and would not accept a nomination if one were tendered.

A decision to issue such a statement was reached Monday night, when the president read to the members of the cabinet his proposed statement, at the same time personally pledging each to secrecy until public announcement was made. The cabinet, on hearing the reasons the president advanced, which are substantially set forth in the public announcement, coincided with the view of their chief, that the present was an opportune time for its pronouncement. The phraseology of the announcement was considered further by the cabinet yesterday, and after a change or two from Monday night's draft, Secretary Cortelyou was directed to make it public.

The president's intimate personal and political friends later expressed themselves as not surprised at the decision announced, but quite generally conceded that they had not expected such an announcement at this time, thinking that the president would not quickly take heed of the third term gossip. They said, however, that they believed the president had shown his quick and excellent political judgment by crushing the third term movement in its very birth.

The president's statement given out by the president was what occasioned the evening session of the cabinet Monday, which was attended with so much secrecy. The other topic then discussed closely allied to it was a certain proposed trip the latter part of this month. The president told his cabinet that he desired to arrange for a system of representation at most of the places where he is expected. He wants to have one or two members of the cabinet go for him to Buffalo and others to other places, so distributing the work around as to save him from it, in the present critical condition of Mrs. McKinley's health. In arranging for appearances the inevitable third term question would be suggested, and in order to clear the ground, the president thought it best to give out a dignified, but emphatic, statement of the purposes of the administration. This has been effectively done.

The following is the statement given out at the White House:

"I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it notice. But there are now questions of the gravest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term. In view, therefore, of the reiteration of the suggestion of it, I will say now, once for all, expressing a long-settled conviction, that I am not only not, but will not be, a candidate for a third term. I would not accept a third-term nomination if it were tendered me. My only ambition is to serve through my second term to the acceptance of my fellow countrymen, whose generous confidence I so deeply appreciate, and then with them to do my duty in the ranks of private citizenship."

Cleveland Has Nothing to Say

Princeton, June 12.—Ex-President Cleveland, when interviewed by the Associated Press correspondent on President McKinley's statement regarding a third term for president, said: "I have not a word to say on it. Not a single word."

Double Murder at Newark

Newark, N. J., June 12.—Henry Schaub, a barber, murdered his wife and 6-week-old infant here yesterday. He cut both their throats with a razor, and slashed his own throat. There was apparently no motive for the crime, and insanity is supposed to be the explanation.

INTERESTING MEETINGS OR Delegates to the Y. M. C. A. Jubilee Convention at Boston

Boston, June 12.—A sea of upturned faces greeted President Shuey of Dayton, O., as he called to order the great international jubilee convention of the Young Men's Christian association in Mechanics' building yesterday. Those faces were, for the most part, strange to Boston. From all over the globe the delegates had come, bringing with them individual enthusiasm in the great work for young men, and that enthusiasm, grown mighty in its unison, made the scene before President Shuey one that was powerfully effective. The big hall was radiant with color.

The opening exercises were quite brief and to the point. President Shuey had made preliminary remarks, asking the gathering to join in singing "All Hall the Power of Jesus' Name," accompanied by a band. Rev. John Y. Dobins of Mount Clair, N. J., was then presented, and conducted devotional exercises. Greetings from associations in Berlin and North Liverpool were read, after which the convention transacted some routine business and the session was closed by the singing of the Doxology.

The afternoon service was held in Trinity church, beginning with a procession hymn and including special prayers, canticles, readings from the scriptures, all forming a ritual of solemnity befitting the anniversary. Rev. Charles C. Hall, D. D., preached a sermon "On the Power and Glory of Our Lord Jesus Christ as the Saviour and Redeemer of Men."

William E. Dodge of New York presided at the evening meeting in Mechanics' hall, when welcoming addresses were made by representatives of the state, city and local Y. M. C. A., with responses by C. T. Williams of Montreal and William E. Dodge.

Sadie Biddle Found

Malden, Mass., June 12.—From early yesterday morning until the afternoon the Malden police dragged Felsmire pond, trying to raise the body of Sadie Biddle, whom they felt sure was drowned there with her sister, Lillian, whose body was found Monday. Just as they had decided to stop, word was brought that the missing Sadie had been located in Jamaica Plain. She was brought here by an inspector, but refused to return to her parents, and was taken in charge by the police as a neglected child. She claims that she was ill-treated by her parents.

Family Think Him "Demented"

New York, June 12.—Louis Hays, son of a wealthy real estate dealer, was arrested yesterday, accused of assaulting and attempting to rob George E. Mellert, a bank messenger. Mellert had in his possession $2000 in bills and $100 in quarters. He says he was struck on the head with a bar of iron by Hays as he was passing down the stairway of the Twelfth Ward Bank building. Hays' family say that his alleged act was that of a demented man. The police take a different view. Hays himself refused to say anything at all about the matter.

Protection For the Young

Chicago, June 12.—Children of Christian Scientists and of believers in various types of "mind cure," faith cure and divine healing, will hereafter be committed for medical treatment to various institutions. Such is the announcement made by Judge Tutill of the juvenile court. According to the view of Judge Tutill, adults are at liberty to use medicine or "faith cure" or any other means to fight disease. Children, however, according to his belief, must legally be given that sort of cure which, according to generally accepted notions, is needed.

Details of Suicides Suppressed

Emporia, Kan., June 12.—An epidemic of suicides in this town, culminating Monday in three attempts, all exactly similar to recent successful suicides, caused the mayor and board of aldermen yesterday to forbid the publication of details of suicides or attempts in local papers. CHELMSFORD MYSTERY

Partially Solved by Finding of Missing Head

IT WAS SUNK IN A BROOK

Wrapped in Waist and Skirt of the Murdered Woman—Evidently That of a Woman Between Thirty-Five and Forty Years of Age

Lewell, Mass., June 12.—The missing head of the murdered woman was found yesterday in a brook not far away from the wood lot in Chelmsford where the body was found Sunday.

The murderer, after he had severed the head from the trunk, had wrapped the waist and skirt taken from the woman about it, tied a heavy stone to the bundle and dropped it over the side of the bridge on the Billerica road, with the expectation that it would sink beneath the bridge and escape notice in three or four feet of water. This was just what happened up to yesterday.

The head was found by Harry C. Greene, a private detective, who has gone to work upon the case. He made the discovery yesterday morning, but did not make it public until afternoon, for he was obliged to wait until the state police arrived from Boston.

The head had certain things by which it should be identified without difficulty. In the ears were earrings of spiral pattern, containing small moonstones. The lower part of the mouth contained a complete set of false teeth, in good repair. The upper part of the jaw contained a partial set of false teeth, and two eye-teeth that were natural. The hair was done up in a "pug," kept in place by four hairpins, with an ordinary hair comb of light color in place beneath it. The long exposure to the water had whitened the features beyond easy identification, but the nose is small, and the hair of the head is black in color.

The waist found with the head is of white flannel, buttoning in front with four plain gilt buttons, but fastened with hooks and pins. It is well made, with narrow ticks in the front and back. The skirt is an underskirt of red satin, with four rows of black braid on the bottom, and a single row 7 1/2 inches above. The overskirt is still missing.

After placing the head with the body last night, Dr. Meigs was obliged to revise the previous opinions as to the woman's age, and said that she might have been from 35 to 40 years old. Her height appears to have been from 5 feet 2 inches to 5 feet 4 inches.

The medical examiner also made this important statement, after an examination of the head: The head was severed from the body by several blows, probably as many as six or seven. The indications are that they were delivered with an axe. The blows were probably delivered from the right side, and it is quite probable that the body was in a reclining position at the time. There are bruises about the face, but some are post mortem ones. One blow of the axe carried away the lower part of the chin. There is also a bruise above the forehead that was probably made before death. There was no fracture of the skull. The only blows that are certain to have caused death are those at the throat, which of course severed the top of the spinal column.

A RACER LAUNCHED.

The Cadillac Put Into the Water This Morning.

The yacht Cadillac built by the Hanley Construction Co. for a syndicate of Detroit gentlemen to compete in the trial races to select a defender for the Canada's cup was successfully launched this morning. There were no ceremonies with the launching. She was simply lowered gradually under control of a windlass into the water. As soon as she is rigged, which will be in about a week, she will give a trial spin in the harbor and then sail to the great lakes.

Capt. Joe Taylor, the skipper of the Harbinger in her races with the Beatrice, will sail her in the builder's trial trip and then take her around. It is also understood that Capt. Taylor has been engaged by the owners of the Cadillac to sail her in the trial races.

The dimensions of the Cadillac are; overall, 49 feet; water line, 27 feet 6 inches; overhang forward, 10 feet 6 inches; overhang aft, 11 feet; beam, 12 feet; draft, 2 feet.

Good Features.

"W. F. A." the Boston Journal critic, says of Eltinge's vaudeville as given at Brookline:

Particularly good were the features: Mr. Gildon gradually transforming himself, on the stage and in sight of the audience, into Dan Daily (it will be remembered what he hit made with the impersonation at the Tremont Theatre last winter); and the sudden disclosure of Mr. Eltinge, as prima ballerina assoluta, in a white ballet costume, against a plain black background. That black background—apparently of plain sarseten cambrie, was an inspiration! Prima and coryphées all looked superb against it. Of the charm of Mr. Eltinge's ballet girl, and that velvety baritone of his I wrote some length last winter; he was as winsome and fascinating last evening as ever.

There was a large audience, who evidently enjoyed the entertainment very much; encores came with professional frequency. The whole was under the patronage of several prominent Boston and Brookline ladies.

Dined at Greenleaf.

The Grand officers of the Grand Lodge of Masons, who were guests of Rural Lodge on Sunday were entertained at dinner at The Greenleaf, on which occasion the menu was:

SUPS: Consommé Royale Fish: Boiled Penobscot Salmon Allemande Sauce ROASTS: Roast Ribs of Prime Beef Dish Gray Roast Chicken Currant Jelly VEGETABLES: Mashed Potatoes Butter Beans Squash

Asparagus on Toast Sliced Cucumbers ENTRÉES: Chicken Croquettes Queen Fritters Wine Sauce Lobster Newburg in Cups DESSERTS: Apple Pie Lemon Pie Chocolate Cream Pie Strawberry Shortcake Baked Rice Pudding Vanilla Ice Cream Ten Milk Coffee Parker House Rolls.

Norfolk Conference.

The summer meeting and one hundred and third session of The Norfolk Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches will be held Thursday, June 20, 1901, with the First Congregational parish in Canton. The program includes: Address by Rev. E. D. Towle, of Brookline, on the topic, "Problems of the Suburban church," Address by Rev. Alfred R. Hussey, of Taunton, on the topic "The claims of the Sunday school"; and paper by Miss Edith Randall, of Quincy on the topic "The Ideal Sunday school." Trains leave South Station, Boston for Canton Junction at 8.15, 10.15 A. M. and 12.15 P. M.

Bicycle Accident.

There was quite a serious bicycle accident on Independence Avenue, Tuesday evening, caused by a head-on collision between a young man named Spargo who resides on Rodman Street and Henry Curtis. Spargo was coming down the hill toward Quincy and it is said was going swiftly. Curtis was coming up the hill and was not going fast. The two wheels met on the curve at the brow of the hill. Both young men were badly shaken up, particularly Spargo who was seriously injured. He was attended by Dr. McLennan, and was removed to his home in the ambulance. Curtis was able to go home unaided and is out today, although he has to use a cane. Spargo is still confined to his home. Both wheels were badly smashed.

Boys' Concert.

The Brockton production of the Boys' boys' concert Tuesday evening was very heartily received and encores were general. The choruses were unusually good. Little Miss Eldridge proved a wonderful pianist. All the soloists were excellent. The Quincy production tomorrow evening will be even better, and Music hall should be crowded. Concerts of this kind should be encouraged.

Full Measure.

Francis A. Spear, Sealer of Weights and Measures, is after peddlers of fruit with a sharp stick. He has issued a circular calling attention to the laws in relation to the size of baskets used for the sale of fruit, also relating to weights and measures of all kinds. He intends to enforce the law without fear or favor, and it behoves dealers to be encouraged.

Pan-American Hint.

The great Pan-American Exposition has realized fully the expectations of the managers, while the great public is more pleased with the artistic and inventive displays provided.

The creative genius apparent in the architecture of the many buildings is without equal, and the effects obtained through the marvelous color decorations are simply astounding. The landscape work has developed the grounds into a perfect paradise. The exhibits are a chosen lot and far superior in comparison to those of all other expositions.

Buffalo, as a city is a most delightful place, and excursions can be made in every direction to localities intensely interesting, but the greatest attraction save the Exposition, is Niagara Falls, which is truly one of the marvels of the world. The Boston & Maine Railroad is making every inducement possible for the benefit of the tourist to Buffalo from New England. The rates are the lowest—the routes most numerous—the most direct and its trains without question the best equipped of any from Boston. The General Passenger Department of the Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston, will upon application, send you a Pan-American Folder, which is replete in information of service and yours for the asking.

You may well expect to run a steam engine without water as to find an active, energetic man with a torpid liver and you may know that his liver is torpid when he does not relish his food or feels dull and languid after eating, often has headache and sometimes dizziness. The few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will restore his liver to its normal functions, renew his vitality, improve his digestion and make him feel like a new man. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all druggists.

Queer Indian Beliefs.

There is an odd feature in the theology of the small Indian tribe of the Bella Coola, which inhabit British Columbia in about latitude 52°. They believe that there are five worlds, one above the other, and the middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are two heavens, and under it are two underworlds.

In the upper heaven is the supreme deity, who is a woman, and she doesn't meddle much with the affairs in the second world below her. The zenith is the center of the lower heaven, and here is the house of the gods, in which live the sun and the rest of the deities.

Our own earth is believed to be an island swimming in the ocean. The first underworld from the earth is inhabited by ghosts who can return when they wish to heaven, from which place they may be sent down to our earth. If they then misbehave again, they are cast into the lower of the underworlds, and from this bourn no ghostly traveler returns.

The Bella Coola are sun worshippers, and ordered him to kill the old lady. Hand refused, whereupon Graffam threatened him with a revolver. Finally Hand entered the house, broke open the door of Mrs. Mosher's room and demanded her money. She told him she had none, and he left her without molesting her in any way. As he came out, Mrs. Mosher started to go upstairs. Graffam saw her, and sent Hand back to complete his work. Hand re-entered the house, but did not follow the woman up stairs.

Hand and Graffam then left the place. When they arrived at a point on the road below Mosher's Corner, Graffam gave Hand a roll of bills, a watch, a razor and a few other articles, and told him to "go to—, and not bother me." He then ran on ahead, and Hand did not see him again, only at a distance, until they met in the Portland jail.

He was rigidly cross-examined by Mr. True, senior counsel for Graffam. Attorney True then read portions of the statement made by Hand the day following his arrest, and asked Hand if he had made these statements. The statements were as variance with his direct testimony yesterday, and Hand appeared disconcerted at being confronted with his former account of the affair.

On re-direct examination, Hand said the story he told the officers the day following his arrest was not true, and that he first told the true story of the affair to his counsel. Hand denied that he struck Mrs. Mosher on the night of Jan. 12, or that he did anything out of the way while there. At this point court adjourned until today.

Fraud Is Suspected

Washington, June 12.—J. W. Carnahan, president of the United States Army and Navy Historical Association of this city, was arrested yesterday, under an indictment, charging him with having conspired with agents of the association to defraud by impersonating special examiners of the pension bureau. He waived a preliminary examination, bond being fixed at $1000.

Church Separated From State

London, June 12.—Cardinal Gibbons has explained to the pope, says the Rome correspondent of The Daily Chronicle, how impossible it would be for the United States to accredit a representative to the Vatican, because the papacy acknowledged no state religion, and did not recognize the diversity of Christian confessions.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

Asyrian Still on Rocks

St. John's, June 12.—The attempt to float the Assyrian failed yesterday, owing to the pumps getting choked and having to be removed for cleaning. The water is again rising in No. 2 hold. Another attempt to float the steamer will be made.

Death by Court Martial

Pretoria, June 12.—Two Boers have been court-martialed and shot for trying to escape from Pretoria and to rejoin their commandoes, after having taken the oath of neutrality.

HANDS TELLS HIS STORY

Of the Slaying of Clifford Mosher In His House

IS SOMEWHAT AT VARIANCE

With That Related by Him on the Day Following His Arrest—Claims Having Had Anything to Do With the Killing

Portland, Me., June 12.—The state made good progress yesterday in its case against Edward Graffam, who is standing trial for the murder of Clifford Mosher, Joseph Kelley, the convict to whom Graffam told the story of the old lady, related the conversation he had with the respondent, William Hands, the negro who admits being at the Mosher house on the night of the murder, testified that Graffam was the man whom he accompanied to the spot.

Hands began his testimony by identifying Edward Graffam as the man who accompanied him to the Mosher place on the evening of Jan. 12. He then testified that he first met Graffam at the police station in South Framingham, Mass., on the evening of Jan. 9, whether he had gone to obtain a night's lodging. He went to Boston with Graffam the following day. They went to the freight yards together, and stayed until Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, when they took a train for Portland, arriving in this city about 3 o'clock. Graffam asked Hands to take a walk into the country with him, while he collected some money that was due him. Hands agreed, and they started out. Graffam asked Hands to change coats and hats with him, which he did. They arrived at the Mosher house about 8 o'clock, and Hands told Graffam to go in and collect his money, adding that he would stay outside.

Graffam went to the side door and rapped and then went around behind the barn, and was gone several minutes. Then he came back and told Hands that there was no one at home but an old deaf woman, and proposed that they go in and get her money. Hands said he refused to do this, and demanded his coat and hat back. Graffam then left him and went around the barn again. Shortly afterwards Hands heard a crashing noise, and, going to the side door, rapped and rang the bell. He got no reply, so followed Graffam's tracks around the barn. When he came to the broken window he looked in, and saw nothing. Attempting to climb in he fell and cut his hand on the glass. He then looked in again and saw a woman get up off the floor and enter a room adjacent to the kitchen. Then Graffam came out and threw down his coat and hat, and told him to take his old coat and hat on.

Graffam gave a fence picket to Hands and ordered him to kill the old lady. Hand refused, whereupon Graffam threatened him with a revolver. Finally Hand entered the house, broke open the door of Mrs. Mosher's room and demanded her money. She told him she had none, and he left her without molesting her in any way. As he came out, Mrs. Mosher started to go upstairs. Graffam saw her, and sent Hand back to complete his work. Hand re-entered the house, but did not follow the woman up stairs.

Hand and Graffam then left the place.

When they arrived at a point on the road below Mosher's Corner, Graffam gave Hand a roll of bills, a watch, a razor and a few other articles, and told him to "go to—, and not bother me." He then ran on ahead, and Hand did not see him again, only at a distance, until they met in the Portland jail.

He was rigidly cross-examined by Mr. True, senior counsel for Graffam. Attorney True then read portions of the statement made by Hand the day following his arrest, and asked Hand if he had made these statements.

The statements were as variance with his direct testimony yesterday, and Hand appeared disconcerted at being confronted with his former account of the affair.

On re-direct examination, Hand said the story he told the officers the day following his arrest was not true, and that he first told the true story of the affair to his counsel.

Hand denied that he struck Mrs. Mosher on the night of Jan. 12, or that he did anything out of the way while there. At this point court adjourned until today.

Fraud Is Suspected

Washington, June 12.—Mamie Collins of Brooklyn, whose engagement to Patric Hawkins had been broken, lay in wait for him last night and dashed oxalic acid into his face. Then she threw her arms about him, shrieking and crying that she did not mean to hurt him. The man will probably lose the sight of both eyes.

On Good Terms With All Nations

Madrid, June 12.—The queen regent, accompanied by the king, opened the Cortes yesterday. Foreign relations were pronounced to be excellent. The government would especially devote itself to cultivating good relations with the Spanish-American countries.

Portland May Have It

Portland, Me., June 12.—Mayor Booth states that, if no application is made for the state day celebration for old home week, he will endeavor to have Portland again assume it. In event of acceptance by the city, however, the expenses will not exceed the amount now held by the local association.

Nelson Defeats Linton

Pretoria, June 12.—Two Boers have been court-martialed and shot for trying to escape from Pretoria and to rejoin their commandoes, after having taken the oath of neutrality.

SENSIBLE YOUNG WOMANCauses Arrest of a Man Who Forced His Attention Upon Her

Essex, Mass., June 12.—The apparently endless chain of murders of young women by infatuated admirers has been broken in the case of George W. Oliver of this place, and instead of harming the object of his affections, as it is claimed he has threatened to do, he is now under arrest, on the complaint of the young woman herself.

Miss Eunice Cossill, an attractive woman of 20 years of age, complained to the police yesterday that she had been the object of threats at the hands of George W. Oliver, aged 25, who had become infatuated with her, but whose affections she did not return. She said that for weeks Oliver had attempted to force himself upon her notice, and had threatened that she "would be sorry for it" if she did not do so.

On Saturday last Miss Cossill found a note in one of the buildings on her father's estate, from Oliver. It contained the request that she meet him at a designated spot on the following day, Sunday, and threatening her life if she did not comply. The request was, however, declined, and Monday afternoon, while Miss Cossill was at work in the rear of her parents' house, Oliver personally renewed his requests and his threats of violence. It is claimed that, in accordance with his threats, he fired a revolver point blank at the Cossill residence Monday evening.

Fatal Accident at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., June 12.—H. S. Bigelow of Buffalo, a freshman at Harvard, was instantly killed by a chemical engine of the Cambridge fire department last night. An alarm was rung in for a slight fire, but before the firemen responded the fire was extinguished. The alarm, as usual, caused the firemen to assemble, and as the firemen drove up there was much jeering. Just how the accident happened is not yet cleared up, the firemen claiming that the horses on the engine, becoming excited at the howling crowd of young men, made a break forward, scattering the crowd. The students claim that the driver, John Dowdell, deliberately drove his engine into the students. Bigelow became caught under the wheels and instantly killed.

Interesting Relics Found

Boston, June 12.—While at work excavating for the foundation to the new building in process of erection in Post office square, the workmen found a number of cows' horns in a fine state of preservation, old wooden tunnies, used for tanning leather, bones, skins, a lot of tan bark, etc. It has been ascertained that in 1860, 220 years ago, there was a tannery located on this spot, which accounts for these ancient relics being deposited there. At a depth of four feet below the present grade, a well-preserved street was found with curbstones intact for sidewalks.

The coming Fourth of July in Independence square, Philadelphia, is to be delivered by Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Minister. How the "proud bird of freedom" will cock his eye at sight of Wu's pigtail.—Lynn Item.

Dr. and Mrs. Willard have had great success with their school. With an excellent corps of teachers, and such attractive surroundings the future pupils of the school have much to look forward to.

Klark-Scoville Company.

The Klark-Scoville Comedy Company was greeted by an exceptionally large and appreciative summer audience, at Lynn theatre, Monday evening, when the players began what promises to be a very profitable six days' engagement. The organization is one of the new comers to Lynn, although during the past two seasons it has played all the principal cities and towns on the New England circuit with much success.

The performance of "On Hand," given as the opening bill, was one of exceptional merit and was well received. It is a light, breezy comedy written for laughing purposes only, and in the hands of the Klark-Scoville Company it held the closest interest of the audience until the final fall of the curtain. The acting company is well balanced and one of the best of its kind now on the road. Harden Klark, the manager, is a genuine comedian, and Monday evening cast in a German character part, kept the audience in an almost constant state of laughter. He also showed himself to be a very capable actor in more serious parts, while as a musical artist he is one of the best. Zula Klark, the leading lady, is an actress whose work must be seen to be appreciated.

The specialties presented between the acts are of a high order of merit. Frank Urban appears in a clever clay modeling turn and during the week will give a monologue and musical specialty. Miss Gladys Klark, who sings illustrated songs, has a pleasing voice of considerable range and power and made a big hit Monday evening, when she gave "The Spider and the Fly" and "I Wonder if She's Waiting." Other specialties are introduced by Mr. and Mrs. Klark, who made the hit of the evening in their musical sketch, in which they play on a number of new instruments, while Frank P. Haven in a "Rube" turn, brought down the house. Some new views were shown by a vitascope. During the week these acts will be entirely changed.—Lynn Evening Item.

Saturday and Monday.

Base ball is booming in West Quincy and there will be plenty of sport the next few days, playing the Young Mens' Catholic Lyceum of East Boston on Saturday, and two games Monday, the Seventeenth, when the West Quincys meet the Hyde Parks in the morning, and the Boston Journals in the afternoon. These games should be worth seeing, as the first two teams are as strong as any semi-professional team in the State. The Boston Journals have just returned from a successful trip through the State of Maine. This is the only team to defeat the local nine this year, and as the boys wish to redeem themselves, a hot game may be expected. Games called in morning at 9:30; in afternoon at 3:30.

GRADUATION.

At the Quincy Mansion School for Young Ladies.

The graduation exercises of the Quincy Mansion school were held Wednesday afternoon at 2:15. The school marched in to the strains of the processional song, "Angel of Peace." An effective background was formed by a tastefully decorated window of flowers bearing above the following motto: "Heia aye, rumpe monas."

The opening exercises began with prayer by Dr. Barber. The salutatory in Latin prose was recited with great expression by Miss Gertrude Waterhouse. In addition to this she gave a composition in chemistry. Music by school and solo by Miss Curtis followed; also "The American Flag," Miss Taylor; George Washington superior to Abraham Lincoln; Miss Misses; Abraham Lincoln, superior to George Washington; Miss Lyon; Homes and Baunts of Whittier; Miss Spaulding; vocal music, Miss Curtis; Sonnets and Lyrics of Shakespeare's time; Miss Logan; "The influence of Pictures," Miss Steane; "The King of Rome," Miss Putnam; "Farewell addresses," Misses Logan, Spaulding and Putnam.

J.; Eula Wright Putnam, Putnamville, Vt.; Helen Elliot Spaulding, Haverhill; Rose Ethel Spence of Rockland; Jessie Sybilla Steane, Hartford, Conn.; Lillian Taylor, Pittsburg, Pa.; Gertude Tobey Waterhouse, Wollaston.

In the evening a reception was given by Dr. and Mrs. Willard. Later dancing was indulged in and a collation was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard have had great success with their school. With an excellent corps of teachers, and such pithy things said by a delegate to the congress of mothers. It describes the Transvaal situation in a nutshell and explains better than a volume of exposition the secret of that determined resistance to English conquest.—Antecedents Standard.

A Fire at the Magnolia Cottage but No Alarm.

The little pony cart of the Barker children is the envy of all the little ones in Atlantic. Miss Florence Barker with her white hat and red flowers sits up as straight as a soldier, and has the reputation of being an excellent whip. The pony could pass in a dog show he is so tiny, and the little cart is of a size to be drawn conveniently.

Two houses on Appleton street were broken into this week, and Atlantic is not a little aroused over the fact. Nothing of value was taken, because the inmates of Miss C. E. Chase's house were aroused, and the burglar was pursued, but unfortunately escaped. The other entry was into the house of Mr. Todd Meek.

THE VAUDEVILLE.

Girls from "Miss Simplicity" Capture the Town.

Eltinge's Vandeville at Quincy Music Hall Wednesday evening exceeded expectations. It was all that was claimed for the production—sparkling, vivacious, and bright. From opening to finish it had a snap and a go which delighted a large and appreciative audience. Every number was encored, and in some instances five or six times.
Every one was a star, but especially those who took girl parts.

Mr. Eltinge appeared in three different gowns and was perfect in each.
First in a rich creation of white satin with pearl trimmings, cut low and abridged in length. He was an expert in handling the skirt, also decidedly coquettish and at the same time a good singer. For an encore he sang a duet with C. W. Cole. Some thought Mr.
Eltinge was at his best in the golf costume; certainly he was a charming golf girl, and the young caddy who appeared after the encore, added to the success of the number.

Mr. F. W. Bailey received the most encores for his song "The Interrogative Child," but he did not have verses enough to satisfy the audiences.

Mr. H. D. Gardner was a bewitching girl, and sang effectively "You'd better take it back." He or she also appeared in duets on encore.

Mr. Paul J. Chute captured the house with his dance, impersonating a girl.
Mr. Philip N. Hutchins who was down for a coon song, opened with a monologue with local hits. His song was encored.

Waldo Glidden also gave a monologue and introduced the languages of several nationalities as heard at Madison Square gardens. He also sang "Shy Eighteen" with Mr. H. C. Johnson who impersonated a girl. Their waltz-ing was a feature of the show.

The farce, "Serious Situations in Burleigh's Room," was full of surprises. Messrs. J. S. Bleeker, A. E.
Corbin and W. H. Taylor appeared as college students, F. W. Bailey as Prof.
Sheedly a tough sporting character. Mr.
Johnson as Mrs. Hudson, and Mr.
Eltinge as his daughter, who visited their son and brother and were "shocked."

Danforth's orchestra furnished delightful music during the evening, playing all the popular rag time airs.

THE YOUNG GAMBLER.

He Had an Even Chance, but Fate Was Against Him.

I remember one handsome young fellow whom I used to meet occasionally on the staircase who captured my youthful fancy. I met him only at midday, as he did not rise till late, and this fact, with a certain scrupulous elegance and neatness in his dress, ought to have made me suspect that he was a gambler. In my inexperience I only invested him with a certain romantic mystique.

One morning as I was going out to my very early breakfast at a cheap Italian cafe on Long wharf I was surprised to find him also descending the staircase. He was scrupulously dressed even at that early hour, but I was struck by the fact that he was all in black, and his slight figure, buttoned to the throat in a tightly fitting frock coat, gave, I fancied, a singular melancholy to his pale southern face.

Nevertheless he greeted me with more than his usual serene cordiality, and I remembered that he looked up with a half puzzled, half amused expression at the rosy morning sky as he walked a few steps with me down the deserted street. I could not help saying that I was astonished to see him up so early, and he admitted that it was a break in his usual habits, but added, with a smiling significance I afterward remembered, that it was "an even chance if he did it again."

As we neared the street corner a man in a buggy drove up impatiently. In spite of the driver's evident haste my handsome acquaintance got in leisurely and, lifting his glossy hat to me with a pleasant smile, was driven away.

I have a very lasting recollection of his face and figure as the buggy disappeared down the empty street. I never saw him again. It was not until a week later that I knew that an hour after he left me that morning he was lying dead in a little hollow behind the Mission Dolores, shot through the heart in a duel for which he had arisen so early.—Bret Harte's "Under the Redwoods."

Hard Ducks to Kill.

The screaming wailoos is a hard duck to kill. Its hide is very tough and is thickly covered with feathers and down. Besides the bird is a great diver, one of the kind that used to dive at the flash when hunted with the old arm that flashed when fired. It is very little value for table use, being so tough. The only way to manage it at all is to skin it and parboil it in a big pot with plenty of water. The gourds make caps of wailoos skins.

"They are great ducks for diving," says a well known Tred Avon river progeber.

"They can dive quicker, go down deeper, remain under water longer and come up farther away than any other duck that frequents our waters. I remember once I succeeded in killing a wailoos, and being short of game for the table, I determined to cook my bird. I got a negro to skin it, giving him the hide for his trouble. After being cleaned we put it in a great pot full of water and under it kindled a hot fire. After awhile I wanted to see how the cooking of my duck progressed and lifted the top off the boiling pot, but there was so much steam escaping I could not see into the pot and struck a match over it. The blanched wailoos, sir, dived at the flash of the match. It disappeared and has never been seen since."—Baltimore Sun.

Double Domestic Tragedy

Denver, June 13.—Julius C. Benton, a well-to-do stockman, last night shot and killed his wife and then killed himself. The shot which killed Mrs. Benton was fired through the window of their residence. Mrs. Benton was a daughter of former State Auditor Lowell.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm, advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pain in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He said the company hoped that she would do 17 and a quarter knots, but she had exceeded their expectations, and kept well within her power.

President Orcutt of the New York News

Shipbuilding company expressed him self after the trial as being thoroughly satisfied and pleased with the performance of the ship. He said the company hoped that all suffering likewise will bear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

New Rectory.

The Calendar of Christ church for week of June 16 says: At the corporation meeting on Tuesday it was voted to authorize the Building Committee to expend a sum not exceeding $6,500 in addition to the architects commission. This figure is made large enough to cover all contingencies and the Building Committee is confident that the cost of the new rectory including such minor items as wall papers, window shades and screens, lighting, fixtures etc., will come well within this sum. The old rectory has been sold to be torn down immediately, reserving the plumbing and roofing slate which will be used in the new house.

The contracts for the new building will be signed within a few days.

The spring lamb proper, which is from six weeks to three months old, is simply divided into fore and hind quarters by a middle cut, which leaves several ribs attached to the hind quarter. This brings the highest price as it gives the greatest amount of meat, but the fore quarter or shoulder is superior in flavor. Lamb is not called mutton until it is a year old, and is sold as lamb from spring until late winter.

Samples free at all druggists.

MURDERED AT BOSTONTheory of Police In the Case of Mrs. Blondin*LANDLADY HEARD QUARREL

Woman Was Never Seen to Leave Her Apartment Afterward—Two Missing Trunks Would Probably Throw Much Light Upon the Mystery

Boston, June 14.—The theory that Margaret Blondin of Lawrence was murdered in the Green street lodging house was given weight yesterday by an interview between police inspectors and Mrs. Mary Hannigan, the landlady. The officers and the woman talked over all the movements of Mr. and Mrs. Blondin.

Mrs. Hannigan said that on Saturday, April 27, the day of Mrs. Blondin's disappearance, she was sitting in the hall way, near the front door, when, just a few minutes before 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Mrs. Blondin came in from the street and asked Mrs. Hannigan what time it was. On being told, she exclaimed: "My husband will kill me," and ran upstairs to her room.

Mrs. Blondin had no sooner reached her room than her husband opened the street door, and, in commanding tones requested Mrs. Hannigan to tell him how his wife spent the day. Upon being told that she spent the day quietly, as was her wont, he rushed upstairs as if he was in a furious temper, and violently pushed open the door, and then closed it with a bang, turning the key in the lock. The landlady heard some angry words, which was followed by a noise as if someone had fallen. After that all was quiet in the room, and in about 10 minutes Blondin came out wearing his best clothes. He locked the door, not only by the ordinary fastening, but with a padlock which Blondin had attached that morning.

Mrs. Hannigan went upstairs and knocked at the door, but there was no response. She thought that possibly the woman was sulky or ashamed, and did not want to talk about what had taken place. Blondin did not return until the following Tuesday. Mrs. Hannigan, meanwhile, made several ineffectual attempts to get into the room.

When Blondin returned he looked haggard and manifested a desire to be left alone. He hurried to his room, and remained there about an hour, when he passed outside, doubly locking the door. He was in a great hurry, and his face was very pale. In half an hour he returned with an expressman, explaining to Mrs. Hannigan that he had accepted a position on a government boat in Canada, and that he was going to Montreal.

"Where is your wife?" asked Mrs. Hannigan.

Blondin muttered something which the landlady did not catch.

"I cannot understand what you have kept her locked in her room so long," continued Mrs. Hannigan. "Is she going with you?"

"Yes. She is at the depot now," replied Blondin. Then he took the expressman upstairs. Around the trunk which they took away, were heavy leather bands. Then Blondin left the house, and the landlady did not see him again. This was the substance of Mrs. Hannigan's story.

The police think they have traced Blondin's trunk to the North Union station. It has been learned that a trunk similar to the one described by the inspectors was shipped to Chelmsford on the night of April 30. They also learned that on May 2 Blondin hired a room on Howard street, this city.

The inspectors have received information by which they hope to establish the fact that the trunk was taken from Chelmsford to Lowell in a farmer's wagon on June 1, and from there shipped to Portland, Eastport and Lubec.

Witnesses say that Blondin was sent to Bangor yesterday.

Old Hands Out of Work

Rockland, Me., June 14.—But about 25 of the laborers who struck for an advance in wages at the lime kilns failed to show up for work yesterday. The strike has thus proved abortive. As many new men were given jobs after the crew quit Thursday, some of the old hands will have to seek employment elsewhere.

Will Furnish Work for Eighty

Madison, Me., June 14.—The Lakeside worsted mill of East Madison, which was to have been shut down until Aug. 1, has been leased by the Marston Worsted company until that time, and will be run day and night to its full capacity. Eighty hands were sent to Bangor yesterday.

Accident Closed Big Mills

Halifax, June 14.—The piston head of the 500 horsepower engine at the factory of the Dominion Cotton Mills company blew out yesterday, wrecking the whole machine shop. It will keep the factory idle for four or five weeks, throwing 350 hands out of employment. No 80 hands will be employed.

THE BARRE SENSATION

Italian Consul Considered Not Likely to Render Much Assistance

Barre, Vt., June 14.—Late yesterday afternoon State Attorney Hoar received a reply from the Italian consul general in New York to his telegram of Wednesday, asking the consul if he would assist in investigating the case of the Italian government spy, Eugenio Ristoli, whom the anarchists here were contending to send away.

A reporter tried to interview Mr. Hoar at his home last night, but he refused to say a word about the matter, so the exact substance of the consul's reply could not be learned. It is understood that it is not very encouraging for a searching investigation, but Mr. Hoar may conclude to proceed alone in the matter, as new evidence which developed yesterday afternoon may be of great importance.

A young man who is studying law with the state attorney discovered in the office waste basket some small scraps of paper, covered with writing.

He noticed that it was in the Italian language, and began matching the scraps together. Enough have been arranged to show that they were originally pieces of a letter written by Ristoli to the Italian consul, which he probably wrote to him while he was taken to Mr. Hoar's office Wednesday. An interpreter is at work arranging the pieces and transcribing the writing.

He Didn't Stay Away

Gloucester, Mass., June 14.—Stephen J. Ingalls was arrested last night at his home in Gloucester on a capias of the superior court. Ingalls had been before the court charged with incendiarism, and pleaded guilty to three of the charges. He has recently been at liberty on agreement that he would leave Essex county, and not return again during his lifetime. By this agreement he would not be sentenced for the offenses he had committed. He will now be taken to Salem jail, where he will remain until September, when his case will be disposed of.

HEROES.
If so it be we are forbid by fate
To do the deeds that make a hero great,
Let's do our duty, each one as he should,
And, lacking greatness, let's at least be good.
Oh, there are seeds of kindness to be sown
In hearts that never have such kindness known;
And words of gentleness and actions true
Are always possible for me and you.

'Tis true these seem of little worth, because
They do not win for us the world's applause.
But noble actions are not judged by size,
The great intent the action magnifies.
And though our names the world may never fill,
The ear of God may find them sweeter still.

WHEN TWO HAVE LIVED.

How would we live! We'd drink the years like wine,
With all tomorrow's hid behind the vein.
That is your hair; between two lilies pale,
Your slender hands, my heart should lie and shine.
A crimson rose. We'd catch the wind and twine.
The evening stars a chapter musical.
To crown our folly, here the nightingale.
To sing the blithe your lips should teach to mine.
And if the sage who cried that life is vain
Should frown upon the flower of all our days
And shade the sun that knows no tears of rain
He should not tease our heart with cynic eye.
The soul's vast altar stands beyond his gaze.
When two have lived, then shall they fear to die!

AN UNEXPECTED PLEASURE.

A Story of the Civil War.
BY FANNY DAY HURST.

The period, the early part of the civil war; the scene, one of the stately old homes that have made the Blue Grass State famous for its hospitality; the chief actor, a stanch little rebel, who glories far more in the fact that in this awful time of war her husband was one of the bravest in Morgan's brave band of rough riders than she did in the knowledge that in the times of peace no other home in all Kentucky showed more elegance in its appointments than did hers; the exact time, an early morning in the early summer, when the inhabitants of the town had awokened to find that, although a few hours before they had gone to sleep in Dixie, with "Desha's boys" camped in one of the fine old woodlands just west of them, they had seemed to awaken in Yankee land, for their streets were filled with 1,000 bluecoats under Colonel Landrum.

Coming from her room on the morning in question, with her boy in her arms, Mrs. Peebles met at the door two negro women, their black faces filled with terror and their bodies quivering in an agony of fright.

"What is it, mammy? Quick! Has anything happened to?"

Her mistress' anxiety dispelled her own fright in an instant, and the elder of the two answered: "Mass Jeems? No, chile, bress Gavd, I hope he an Gin'l Mawgins is still makin' hit wawn' to de enemy in Ten-see. But dis mawgins in befo' I was up Kit come a-reshin' to my cabin an say de Yankees done got us, an sho' 'nuff, Miss Annie, de town's done live wid 'em. Heath, gummie dat chile, honey, kaze you se gwine drap him sho'! Sit down, now, an don'take on so. I might 'a' known you couldn't stan' dis fright."

"But what has happened to our boys?" Mrs. Peebles asked, stepping to the door and glancing into the street at the line of soldiers stationed at intervals as far as she could see. "Were many of them killed?"

"What dat you say?" And Easter's face spread into a grin. "Not much am dey killed. Dey done got de news dat Kun'l Landrum comin' wid a big Yankee army, an dey jes' fel' up dey tents an lef', an dey ain't specify no regrets, nuther. Dey do say, Miss Annie, dyah a comp'ny brack niggers 'mongst de Yankee soldiers an dat we all 'll have to feed de whole kit an biddle of 'em."

The little woman's eyes flashed as she answered: "I for one shall not feed any Yankee soldiers, and you may send for me if any of 'em come around. Ah, good morning, uncle!"

The last was spoken to a negro soldier who wore the blue uniform and who had come up the walk as she spoke.

"Good mawnin, missis. I jes' wants to use yo' saw of you can lemme have it to a little while. We done mawch all night, an we's mighty tired an hungry, an we has to cut some wood fo' de fishes."

"Yes, indeed. Of course you can have the saw," answered Mrs. Peebles quickly. "Kit, show the man where to get the saw, and let him have the woodhouse too."

A suppressed laugh from behind her brought a smile to Mrs. Peebles' face, and she turned to the older negro to say:

"Mammy, I am sure that negro was ten feet high."

"No, Miss Annie, 'twarn his bein' a big man what done hit, but you knows you ain' gwine turn no hungry nigger frum yo' do'. Tain't in you, an you can't do hit, even if you does wanter kaze he got on dem blue clothes."

A few days later martial law was declared. What was coming no one knew, and so strict was the surveillance that not one word could be got from the outside world. When the military rule had begun, the supply of food had seemed large enough to last perhaps six weeks, but at the end of the first month the supplies began to run low, yet neither market gardener nor grocer was allowed to bring food into the town. Evidently the Federals were getting ready for the early advance of a Confederate troop and were using every precaution to prevent the enemy gaining any advantage.

One evening during this anxious time as Mrs. Peebles sat in the twilight crooning a lullaby to her baby boy Easter came into the room and asked in a low tone:

"Am de little lam' asleep, Miss Annie?"

"Not quite, mammy," the mother answered and smiled to see the little fellow sit up and hold out his arms to the old nurse, who said:

"Dat's right. Come to yo' mammy, honey, an shell tell you about Brer Rabbit. Dyah is Yankee captivin' in de library, Miss Annie, an he says he mus' see you, dat dyah some business he mus' talk to you about."

When Mrs. Peebles entered the library, the soldier stood looking at a picture of her husband that hung over the mantel.

A sudden fear seized her. Was it Morgan's men whom the Federal had expected and had a skirmish already occurred?

"Oh, sir," she exclaimed, "do you bring me news from my husband?"

He was an elderly man, and as he turned and saw the white face, with its pleading eyes searching his own, he pressed her gently into a large rocker whose arm she had clasped for support and said rather to himself than to her:

"Ah, these women of ours! They suffer at home more than we do in the field." Then to her: "No, I have no news from your husband. Our division is made up entirely of northern men. With whom is your husband?"

"You mistook my meaning," she exclaimed, the color creeping back to her face and the old fire awakening within her eyes. "He is not a Union soldier. He is with Morgan's men, but I thought perhaps there had been an engagement and you had come to me, even as he would go to an anxious northern wife. Have you heard from Morgan's men, captain? It is so long since we had any news from outside the town."

The pleading in her voice touched him, for he turned to the window and stood looking out into the gathering darkness. When he turned toward her, a tear glistened in his eye.

"And so you are a rebel," he said. "It is a pity! A pity, indeed! War is a terrible thing, and we must all suffer while it lasts. I could not even suffer you with an answer about Morgan's men if I knew ever so much about them. Martial law would avail little if we gave away its secrets."

Once more Mrs. Peebles' eyes flashed, for had he not spoken as if the pity of the war lay upon the shoulders of the southerners. She straightened herself in her chair and said coldly:

"You wished to speak to me about a matter of business, I believe. May I hear it?"

He was a soldier now.

"Certainly, madam. It becomes necessary for us to quarter our men upon the citizens for a day, and I must ask you to provide for one company, giving them the noonday meal tomorrow."

She opened her lips, but as if he divined that she was about to ask a hard question he continued, "I can only explain that the men are detailed for special duty, and the food must be prepared for them."

"But how can I supply food for so many men?" she exclaimed. "You forget that we have been under martial law for weeks, and I have scarcely food for my own family. Besides, why should I cook for men who would shoot down my husband but for the opportunity?"

The officer spoke calmly:

"I respect your fidelity to your cause, madam, but my men must have food. Our commissary is stationed two doors north of here. Present this order and prepare the food by noon tomorrow. Good night."

He was gone, and she, knowing enough of the power of an occupying army to rebel no further, went to the kitchen to give the necessary orders.

At noon on the morrow great platters stood heaped with juicy slices of boiled ham, kettles and buckets steamed with beans and rice, baskets were ready, filled with delicious southern biscuit, and in the oven the last pan of corn bread was taking on a delicate brown.

No soldiers appeared, and in the distance the popping of rifles and the boom of cannon could be heard. Plainly the Confederates had come up and a battle was on. In every house women were busy tearing old linen and cotton into hints and bandages. The firing drew nearer, and presently a southern cavalry officer rode by, followed by a bunch of soldiers. Morgan's brigade had come with all of its fearless enthusiasm. Expected from one point, it had made a detour, divided and entered from three unprotected points. Mrs. Peebles hurried her children and servants to the cellar, and there, with throbbing hearts, they waited.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon there was a lull and by 3 all was quiet. Morgan's men stood in lines along the streets, and Cynthia was in the hands of an army of famished soldiers.

Many hands united in giving Uncle Sam's food to the graycoats, but Mrs. Peebles was not among them. In one of the brightest rooms in her home the gray haired Federal captain lay, suffering from a bullet wound in the thigh. She had found him lying near her door and with her own hands had helped to dress his wound. An hour later a gray-coated cavalryman was brought in, his left leg shattered below the knee, and as Annie Peebles knelt, sobbing, beside his bed he whispered:

"It is nothing to lose a leg, dear. Many a poor fellow has given his life today."

A happy smile drove the tears away as she lifted her head to say:

"God was good to bring you home for me to care for—" Sunny South.

A Nautical Explanation.

The officers were on the quarter deck looking at a comet and noticed an eager discussion among the crew forward.

The captain called one of the men aft and asked him what was the subject of discussion.

"We were trying to make out what that there thing was," replied the man, pointing to the comet.

"And what do you imagine it is?"

"Dunno, your honor, but Bill Jones here, as knows most things, says as how it's a star that's sprung a leak."—London Telegraph.

PLAYTIME CLOTHES.

HOW TO MAKE CHILDREN'S OUTFITS FOR OUTDOOR WEAR.

Suits For Seashore, Mountains and Garden Which Are Meant For Rough and Tumble Use—Overalls For Little Boys and Girls.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

It is only of late years that anything has been done to allow the children to play and yet be able to keep clean. The material of which they are made differs according to circumstances, but probably the best is blue denim. Galatea cloth is also good, but it should be something thick enough to be durable under great stress and so that dust will not penetrate it. Khaki would be good if it were not so dear.

It requires two yards of denim for either of the funny little overalls shown in the illustration. One takes up on the shoulders, and the other is long. They are for boys or girls, but those for girls might be made a little wider. The one for the smaller child has the front gathered at a yoke, and the legs are made very wide and are buttoned at the back like the panties, and are made quite full to allow for the skirt of the dress worn beneath. The other pair is cut to reach the ground and hold up by means of straps over the shoulders.

At the beach it is the custom to let the children run about barefooted and have the "greatest kind" of a time. It is not well to let them go without shoes of some kind, on account of the sharp shells.

The two sailor shaped bathing suits are cut all in one piece so far as the waist and pants are concerned, and many bright mothers take the old pantaloons which are past wearing by the men of the house and cut them into the right shape. An old pair will always have at least three-quarters of good material, and they are just wide enough. To make such a suit, sew the leg part up and then sew the two pieces together from the seat to the neck in the back and to the opening for the head in front. Bind the bottoms and sew a strong elastic under the bottom about an inch above, so that it will form a little ruffle. If cloth is scarce, a sailor collar may or may not be added.

The suit for the girl differs in no way save that it may be made out of an old dress skirt of almost any kind or color. It will get just as hard usage. The tiny man has a regular bathing dress made out of his big brother's old sweater, washed and with a little red thread run in along the edges of the sleeves and legs.

For children who are to go to the mountains or to the old farm the overalls for the boys are among the necessities. For the girls, even those up to 10 years old, there are special suits, consisting of full Turkish trousers and a blouse waist. The trousers are cut like any pair of other drawers as to the upper part, and the legs are wider and reach almost to the ankles. The hem is then sewed in, and an elastic is run in and fastened so that it will hold.

them at the knees. Pockets are just as good for girls to have as boys. For a girl of 10 it will require three-quarters of a yard of double width goods or one and a half of single to make these knickerbockers.

The blouse is the old style come to life again. This has really no shape to it, only just enough to bring it to fit around the neck. The sleeves are rather narrow bishop shape and have cuffs. If a sailor collar seems too much trouble for a blouse intended only for rough wear, it may be finished off at the neck with a band and buttoned down the front.

A pocket should be set on the outside of this at the left side. At the bottom this blouse is hemmed with rather a wide hem and an elastic or a tape run in to hold it snug. The blouse should be six inches longer than the waist line, so that when it is fastened it falls over and hides the top of the knickerbockers. OLIVE HARPER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JUNE 13.

Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Reverence for sacred things.—Ex. iii, 1-6.

Reverence is a virtue that needs to be inculcated today as seldom ever before. We are living in an age characterized by irreverence. The beliefs and traditions of the past are treated in the most flippant manner. In the home the respect of children to parents is sadly lacking. There is not the respect for authority and for those who are in places of authority that there once was. It is not to be wondered at that this spirit should also pervade the atmosphere of religion and should manifest itself there. That this has been the case is only too sadly true. Reverence for sacred things has diminished. God's name is profaned and blasphemed. God's day is not kept sacred and holy unto Him, and God's book is most lightly esteemed by man. This is a sad condition of affairs and also a serious one, for while man may hold those guiltless who profane sacred things, God will not. His name, His day, His house and His revelation are the objects of His love and care, and punishment will be meted out to all who dishonor them.

Reverence for sacred things is repeatedly emphasized in the Scriptures. Moses beside the burning bush, in which God appears to him to reveal His will to him, is taught a lesson upon this subject. He approaches too closely the place made sacred by the presence of God. God calls out to him: "Draw not nigh hither. Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." And Moses, when he was conscious of God's presence, "hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God." As the angel veiled their faces in the presence of God and exclaimed, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty!" so Moses in God's presence was filled with humility and godly fear. The teaching of Scripture throughout is that sacred things—things made sacred by the presence of God—should be considered holy and should be respected and revered.

God has also declared in His word that irreverence shall receive His displeasure and severe punishment. "The Lord will not hold him guiltless who taketh His name in vain." And what is true of the name of God is true of His day, His house, His word. God has often severely punished irreverence. Hophni and Phineas, sons of Eli, were punished for their gross dishonoring of sacred things. The hands that too lightly esteemed the ark and touched it were forever stilled. And thus God teaches by precept and example that He will punish those who profane sacred things. Let us take warning and guard ourselves against the irreverent tendency of the age. Let us reverence sacred things. Let us honor God and all that is holy. Then God will honor us.

BIBLE READINGS.
Ex. xii, 7-14; xx, 7-11; Joshua v, 13-15; Lev. viii, 30; Ps. lxxvi, 7-12; lxxxix, 7; cxi, 10; Acts vii, 30-33; Heb. xii, 25-29; Rev. iv, 8-11.

Through Toll and Suffering.

Through toll and through suffering we are enabled to gain a keener insight into spiritual things and greater power in doing spiritual things, increased purity of heart, a deeper humility, more intense desire for holiness, then toll and suffering are endowed with the highest of all meanings. And this meaning is given to labor and sorrow just in the degree that they are borne in humble trust in God and in the desire, so far as lies in our power, to be faithful to our profession of faith in the Saviour. That we know not the reason why we are compelled to labor so hard or to suffer so much does not affect the result. Through the presence in us of the true spirit of devotion, through the offering of ourselves in this way, the blessed effects will be wrought. For in our lives as individuals as well as in the life of the church and the nation there is the hiding of God's wonderful power.—Reform Church Messenger.

LIVE BY THE BIBLE.
He who believes the Bible and follows its directions as to his conduct of life cannot fail to see that the heaven to which he is going is a goodly land. When he gets there, he will know more about it than he can know here. But while here he will know enough by faith to transport his soul with the most exalted hopes and make him content to leave this world whenever it shall please his heavenly Father to call him to the higher and better world. Thrice happy the man, and as wise as happy, who makes the Bible practically sufficient to train his action and lives for heaven in the light of what it teaches.—New York Independent.

REST.

Thou hast made us for Thyself, and the heart never resteth till it findeth rest in Thee.—St. Augustine.

The great spiritual law is "from death unto life." Jesus had a perfect human will, and yet He ignored it when He said, "Not My will, but Thine be done," and when we sincerely say the same, pertaining to the little as well as the great things which come into our daily lives, we enter into the will of God, which means life, joy, peace, rest.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Fault Finders.

The fault finder does not attract. There is something about his face, gait and manner as well as about his temper and words that repel. Sweetness, gentleness, and charity are lacking in his composition, and people fight shy of him. Men become a bane to themselves and to society when dominated by a critical, carping and harsh spirit.—Presbyterian.

TOPPLED IN HER DOCK

Transport Ingalls Causes a Serious Disaster

CROWDED WITH WORKMEN

Many of Whom May Have Been Caught Down in Her Hold When the Dock Sank From the Strain Upon It—At Least One Killed Outright

New York, June 15.—The United States transport Ingalls slipped from the blocks supporting her and turned over in the balance dry dock at the Erie basin, South Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. One man is known to have been killed and many others injured.

About 240 laborers were at work on the vessel and dock at the time. It is supposed that the wreck was thrown from an even keel by ballast improperly placed, or by the shifting of the blocks on which she rested, driving the shortening beams through the walls of the floating dry dock in which she was cradled.

Besides the mechanics and other workmen who crowded the vessel and dock, preparatory to her voyage to Manila, there was supposed to have been about 30 Italian laborers in the hold of the ship, employed in shifting the pig iron ballast.

While the terrorized and screaming workmen were trying to escape, the dock itself, overbalanced by the weight of the ship, turned on its side and sank in 50 feet of water and jammed under and between the wreckage which rose to the surface. How many were caught has not yet been learned.

Martin Anderson, a painter, was caught under the descending side of the ship and killed outright. Others were dragged out of the water badly injured or half drowned, and hurried to the hospital.

Added to the horror was the uncertainty of the fate of the men in the vessel's hold. Some managed to get to the dock and leap into the water as the vessel was sinking, but it is feared that the majority were less fortunate.

The Ingalls went into dry dock at 11:30 yesterday morning, and about $80,000 was to have been expended on her for repairs. The dock in which she was placed was a very old one, having been constructed over 50 years ago. An effort was made to close the gates at the time of the accident, but was unsuccessful. No one can be found who would give any estimate of the amount of damage the disaster had entailed.

Redpath Killed His Mother

Montreal, June 15.—Investigation by the coroner's jury put a new light on the Redpath tragedy. The evidence showed that Mrs. Redpath had been shot twice, once in the back of the head and the second time in the right shoulder, while a bullet had entered young Redpath's head to the right of the left temple. The jury brought in a verdict that the young man had killed his mother while in a fit of temporary insanity, brought on by an epileptic fit, and then had taken his own life.

Fire Settles a Dispute

Newburg, N. Y., June 15.—The Mountain House, in the mountains back of Cornell, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The building, formerly a big summer hotel, was unoccupied, and was being put in order for use as a sanatorium for consumptives. To this use the people of Cornell objected, and had arranged to hold a mass meeting last night to make a public protest.

Explosion in a Theatre

Portland, Me., June 15.—An explosion occurred at the property room of McCullum's theatre, at Cape Cottage, last night, blowing out the side of the building, and burning two men quite severely. The property man, Charles Scott, was handling a gun, when it went off into a quantity of powder and red fire, and caused the explosion. Both injured men will recover.

Mysterious Had a Game Eye

Baltimore, June 15.—In the second round of the fight here last night between "Mysterious" Billy Smith and Young Peter Jackson, Smith received a blow which closed one of his eyes, and he left the ring, his seconds throwing up the sponge at the end of the round. It was a fast rough and tumble exhibition.

THE DARWINIAN THEORY

Brings Forth a Ripple In One of the Y. M. C. A. Convention Meetings

Boston, June 15.—Friday's sessions of the international Young Men's Christian association convention were not held under any special designation, but were grouped in sections, in order that departmental work might be discussed by leaders.

Among the section meetings, the most striking incident occurred at that held in the First Baptist church. Here Christianity and evolution came into clash through a paper read by Dr. W. S. Hall on "Modern Tendencies In the Development of the Race." He discussed racial development on the lines of the Darwinian theory. He pictured early man swinging from limb to limb, and from tree to tree. He spoke about the missing link, and the physical development of the new-born baby; how its back and shoulders were much stronger than its legs, just the same as prehistoric, neolithic, antediluvian man. He then traced the gradual growth of man from forest to field, from branches of trees to caves and huts, houses and palaces.

There was a ripple in the audience, and one man arose and asked Dr. Hall as to the period when the soulless man became a man with a soul. Dr. Hall, apparently, was vague in a solution in the opinion of some, when he said that he thought God could allow the man with a soul to rise higher and higher both physically and mentally, for Rev. Dr. Plumbe, who presided, arose to ask a question, which was:

"Then, according to that logic, the clock in the Strasburg cathedral was once a Waterbury watch; it grew larger as a watch until it became a small clock, and then it became a great cathedral clock."

Dr. Hall thought Rev. Mr. Plumbe's question answered itself, and the incident was ended.

Mrs. French Loses

Boston, June 15.—In the superior court yesterday a verdict of $5000 for the plaintiff was returned by a jury in the case of Frank Highster against Julia B. French. Mrs. French caused the arrest of young Highster, a former employee at her residence, on a charge of stealing $1900 and three diamond rings. The young man was tried and was found not guilty. Immediately his counsel brought suit in his behalf against Mrs. French for malicious prosecution and defamation of character. Damages were placed at $50,000.

Bell Proclaimed Strike's End

Holyoke, Mass., June 15.—The paper makers' strike was formally declared off last night, and the city hall bell was rung to spread the news through the city. Both sides have made some concessions. The tour workers held a mass meeting last night, at which the agreement presented by the grievance committee was accepted. The mills will begin operations again Monday. The stationary firemen will meet today, and favorable results are expected from that quarter also.

Police Official's Sudden Death

Lowell, Mass., June 15.—George R. Davis, superintendent of the Lowell police force, expired suddenly at his desk at police headquarters, yesterday afternoon. Aside from complaining of neuralgia in his head during the past few days, Mr. Davis appeared to be in his usual health. He was appointed to the force in 1876, and in 1895, when the office of superintendent of police was created, he was appointed to the position. He was born in 1855.

Costly Fire at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., June 15.—The Empire theatre was gutted by fire late last night, causing a loss of $85,000 on the building, fully insured, and losses to occupants amounting to about $10,000, partly insured. It is not known how the fire started. The building inspector had warned firemen not to enter this building in case of fire, so it was very hard for the firemen to fight the flames and the building could not be saved.

Wreck on the Consolidated

Attleboro, Mass., June 15.—A heavy freight train consisting of 60 cars drawn by two locomotives broke in two yesterday on the Consolidated road, and the rear section, in colliding with the forward end, completely wrecked the middle portion of the train, causing a loss of probably $25,000. No one was injured.

Fire Settles a Dispute

New Haven, Conn., June 15.—The corset factory of Otteneheimer Bros. was closed last night for an indefinite period. A meeting of the creditors has been called, and it is hoped that arrangements will be made so that business can be resumed. About 300 hands are employed in the factory.

Youthful Incendiaries Confess

Boston, June 15.—After a long police inquiry, eight boys were arrested in Charlestown yesterday, charged with numerous instances of incendiarism. According to the police they have confessed to nearly a dozen fires. The boys are 13 years old or under.

Succumbed to Smallpox

Worcester, Mass., June 15.—Dr. William J. Campbell, house physician at the city hospital, died last night from smallpox, which he contracted while attending Albert Guillet. Dr. Campbell was a native of Marlboro. Guillet has recovered.

OLD FERRYBOAT SUNK

But Few Passengers Thought to Have Escaped

WILD RUSH FOR LIFE BELTS

But Few Were Able to Get Them on, and One Report Has It That Over a Hundred Passengers Were Lost—Blame for Accident Not Placed

New York, June 15.—The wooden side-wheeler Northfield, which has been in the service of the Staten Island Ferry company for the past 38 years, was rammed last night just off the Staten Island ferry slip by the steel hulled propeller Mauch Chunk. The Northfield sank shortly after the accident, and it is feared that many of the passengers were drowned.

The Mauch Chunk, which was badly damaged, after landing her two dozen passengers, proceeded under her own steam to Cummington channel, where she was laid up for repairs. Over 100 of the passengers on the sunken Northfield were dragged out of the water.

Captain Gully of the tugboat Mutual, who saw the collision, says that immediately afterwards between 25 and 30 of the passengers leaped into the water, and that he is sure over 100 of the Northfield's passengers were drowned.

The captains of the other tugboats, however, are inclined to think that the disaster was not so serious. Thus far no dead bodies have been recovered, and at the slack of the tide a diver will make an effort to explore the cabins of the ferryboat.

While the Northfield, in accordance with the federal regulations, was well supplied with life preservers, not more than two dozen of the endangered passengers were able to get the life belts on, and a wild panic followed when the passengers realized their danger. Many were rescued, however, by the boats that came in numbers to the rescue.

Crocker—Noyes.

The residence of Mrs. Irving E. Noyes of Putnam street, East Weymouth, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday evening, when her daughter, Miss Elsie Persis was united in marriage to Mr. Fred Monroe Crocker, only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Crocker of Braintree. Promptly at 8 o'clock as the strains of the wedding march echoed through the rooms, the bridal party appeared and advanced to the corner of the parlor, which had been transformed into a bank of palms and cut flowers, when the marriage ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Francis A. Poole. The bride was tastily and becomingly gowned in white swiss muslin, with ribbon and lace decorations and tulle veil. The maid of honor, Miss Sadie Osgood was prettily gowned in pink and the bridesmaids, Misses Bailey and Salisbury, in white. Mr. Chester Main of Weymouth, a personal friend of the groom served as best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony an informal reception was held and a dainty lunch served. Guests were present from Braintree, Weymouth, Boston, Hingham and vicinity. At a late hour Mr. and Mrs. Crocker departed on a short wedding trip and will be at home to their friends on Front street, East Braintree, after Aug 6th.

UNDERGROUND WORK

Tunnelling on Adams Street for the Sewer.

Down in a sewer trench, from thirty to forty feet below the surface, is where a large gang of men are at work on the Metropolitan sewer tunnel on Adams street, near the residence of Hon. William N. Eaton. The surface of the street gives no indication of the large hole underneath, except the large pile of rocks that lines the street. The shaft sunk here is down from thirty to forty feet. From the bottom of the shaft the tunnel is being worked in both directions. The shaft toward Quincy is completed for over 300 feet and that toward Milton for 125 feet. The digging on the Milton end is comparatively easy, as it is gravel. That on the Quincy end is more difficult, as it goes through a ledge of rock.

The impression naturally is that it would be wet and damp under ground, but it is not. The only wet is the mud under foot and at the end where the digging is progressing, as here the water drips down through the earth. The dimensions of the sewer are 10 by 12 feet, and are large enough to drive a team through.

The work progresses as follows: A tunnel is excavated for forty feet, the material taken out is put on a car, which is run on tracks to the shaft, where it is hoisted to the surface by an elevator. The lower half of the brick work is then put in and later the arch is built.

The tunnel is lighted by gasoline lamps, and fresh air is provided by a compressor, so that it is far more comfortable here than on the surface.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS.

A Norfolk County Branch Organized This Week.

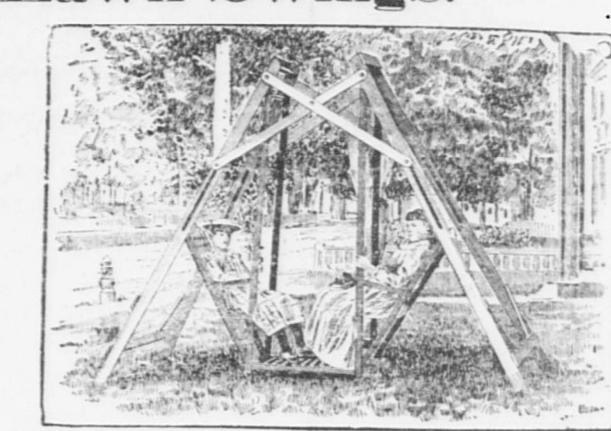

Sunday afternoon last, the clerks of the Hyde Park, Quincy, Dedham and Norwood post-offices, all second class offices met in the Hyde Park post-office and organized a Norfolk County branch to the State Association of post-office clerks.

James T. Donahue, president of the association, a clerk in the Boston office and chairman of the organization committee of the National Association, and Mr. S. E. Luce, also a clerk in the Boston office, and secretary of the State Association, were present to meet the county clerks and to direct them in the work of organization. Both of these officials gave encouraging reports of the condition of the State and National Association, and the work being done to procure national legislation favorable to the clerks, especially the most desired classification bill and eight hour law.

Mr. J. A. Cary of the Quincy office was elected chairman of the meeting, Miss Katherine M. Kennedy of the Hyde Park office secretary. It was voted, unanimously, to organize a branch of the state association; and a committee nominated the following list of officers which was accepted. President, Mr. J. A. Cary of Quincy, vice president, Mr. George II. Walter of Hyde Park, secretary, Miss Katherine M. Kennedy of Hyde Park, treasurer, Miss C. H. Richardson of Dedham.

It was voted to meet with the State Association at the convention to be held in Worcester, June 27. After the work of organization was completed the postmaster entertained the company with seasonable refreshments. The next meeting of the Norfolk County branch will be held at Dedham, September 22.—Hyde Park Gazette.

PASTOR ORDAINED.

Rev. F. R. Griffin Becomes a Braintree Clergyman.

Thursday evening in Cochato club hall a congregation of nearly 300 people gathered to witness the ordination of Frederick Robertson Griffin and his installation as pastor of All Souls' church of Braintree. Miss Pray presided at the piano and opened the services with a voluntary. Chairman of the Parish committee Mr. F. O. Ellis then made the following statement:

My duty on this occasion is simply to indicate, very briefly, the successive steps in the growth of All Soul's church which have led up to this perfected organization and to the culminating event of tonight. In the spring of 1900 Sunday services were begun.

The following summer was marked by the efficient work of a faithful and painstaking Committee on Organization whose efforts was formed in the early fall an organization, incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth.

The dawn of the 20th century found the young church safely through the experimental stage and firmly established, with regular Sunday morning services and a flourishing Sunday school.

In the first month of the new year at its regular annual meeting the church voted unanimously to invite the Rev. Frederick R. Griffin to become its pastor.

The call was accepted and in May Mr. Griffin began his services and at the same time became a citizen of the town of Braintree.

Now, in June, you come, friends, to help us in the ceremonies of the ordination and installation of our pastor. His life-work begins with the infancy of this church. Both are coincident with the morn of the 20th century. Both are fervid with youth and vigor. The rich legacy of the past is their inspiration for the future. The time is auspicious, the event is auspicious, both are full of promise.

May the fulfillment of that promise in the years to come be so gracious, so bountiful, that we shall look back to this occasion, glad that we could have a part in the joining together of this man and this church in the intimate and tender relation of pastor and people.

All pipes where the smoke does not pass through water in time become foul. To thoroughly cleanse this pipe it is only necessary to have a bowl of hot water or a cup of alcohol if preferred, remove the mouthpiece and attach in its stead the pump which accompanies the pipe. A few strokes of the pump are sufficient to wash out the stem in a satisfactory manner, leaving it practically as clean and fresh as when it was new.

Introductory prayer was then offered by Rev. Edward Hale followed by scripture reading by Rev. Merrill C. Ward of Hingham. Mr. Ward concluded by inviting the congregation to sing four verses to the tune of "All Saints."

O God, whose presence glows in all,
Within, around us, and above!
Thy word we bless; Thy name we call,
Whose word is Truth, whose name is Love.

The sermon was given by Rev. Richard A. Griffin of Northampton father of the pastor installed. Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, President of the Unitarian Association, followed with prayer and announced a hymn sung to the tune "Refugee."

DUET. Lord, who dost the voices bless Crying in the wilderness,
And the lovely gifts increase
'T the messengers of peace.

CONG. Thou whose temple is with men,
Show us Thy true priest again.

The duet was rendered by Miss Arnold and Miss Perry.

The "Charge to the Pastor" by Rev. James Ells was quite lengthy and interesting. Rev. Charles F. Dole with well chosen words extended the "Right hand of Fellowship."

Rev. Frank O. Hall's "Address to the People," was excellent and it was quite evident that his remarks were highly appreciated. He said that he had known Mr. Griffin for some time and knew that the young man was fitted to lead this new movement. Unless we believe the church was a good thing we should not have called a pastor, if we believe it a good thing any little boy in the street would tell us what to do. The difference between a live church and a dead one depended mainly in the use of the pronouns we and they. If something needs doing the active church says, we ought to do it, not they ought to do it. Mr. Hall's coaching stories were pertinent and will be long remembered.

NEW PIPE FOR SMOKERS.

Aluminum Tubing Utilized to Eliminate the "Burn."

Smokers, especially those who use the pipe, will be interested in a new invention by Frederick W. Flint, night editor of the Chicago Record-Herald. It is a pipe of novel design that promises to give smokers the unalloyed joys of elysium. My Lady Nicotine will become a more fascinating enchantress than ever before, for there will be no venom to endanger the health. The new pipe eliminates the baneful poison from the smoke, and the lover of the weed will be able to indulge in his pleasure without fear of a tobacco heart or of a circulation saturated with nicotine. No longer need the tongue be burned, for the new pipe robs the weed of its sting long before the whiffing stage is reached. Experts in the pipe business say Mr. Flint has worked out an idea that may cause a revolution in the trade.

The secret of the pipe is in its stem, which is ingeniously contrived to intercept the nicotine and increase the smoker's enjoyment as well as to promote his health. The stem consists of a series of small aluminum tubes, connected at each end with chambers so constructed as to form one continuous smoke passage from the bowl to the mouthpiece. In principle the pipe is akin to a steam radiator, except that the steam in the radiator warms the air in the room, while in the pipe the air cools the smoke in the tubes. It is impossible for a person to burn his tongue while smoking this pipe.

Another important feature in this connection is the fact that while the smoke is being cooled all the moisture in the smoke is condensed and deposited on the surface of the tubes. This settles in the large chambers at the lower end of the stem. When these chambers are nearly full, the smoke in passing from one tube to another causes the nicotine to make a bubbling sound, warning the smoker that it is time to remove the tube section from the lower plug and shake out the nicotine. This having been done and the plug replaced, smoking can be resumed without fear of getting a flow of nicotine into the mouth, an unpleasant experience common in using the ordinary pipe.

All pipes where the smoke does not pass through water in time become foul. To thoroughly cleanse this pipe it is only necessary to have a bowl of hot water or a cup of alcohol if preferred, remove the mouthpiece and attach in its stead the pump which accompanies the pipe. A few strokes of the pump are sufficient to wash out the stem in a satisfactory manner, leaving it practically as clean and fresh as when it was new.

SMALL F, PLEASE, SAYS WU
The Chinese Minister Tells Us How to Spell His Name.

"Please use a small 'F' in spelling my name."

This is in effect the appeal which Minister Wu, the duly accredited representative of his imperial Chinese majesty in this country, has sent to every printer in the United States, says the Philadelphia Press. Heretofore they have been spelling his last name with a capital "F," but it was not until a few days ago, when he sent a courteous note to the agents of the Southern Industrial convention in Philadelphia requesting that they print his name "Wu Ting-fang" and not "Wu Ting Fang," that the error was discovered.

Agent Kauffman, to whom the letter was sent, at once began an investigation and discovered that the change from "upper case 'F'" to "lower case" makes all the difference in the world to the polished Chinaman. The "fang" at the end of his name is simply a small descriptive part of the title and not the full surname, as many wrongly suppose. Besides, the change in the type means considerable from a Chinese diplomatic standpoint.

MORGAN'S NEW BANK.

Anglo-American With $1,000,000.00
Capital May Be Created.

It is reported in London that J. Pierpont Morgan is engaged in arranging for the establishment of a great Anglo-American bank, with a capital of $1,000,000, according to the New York World's correspondent. It is proposed to abolish all of the principle financial agencies and banks already engaged in Anglo-American business.

The proposed institution, it is said, is intended to be the principal agency for the already vast and rapidly growing banking transactions between Europe and America. Mr. Morgan is understood to have associated with him in the stupendous undertaking not only the principal capitalists who aided in the organization of the billion dollar steel trust, but also the Rothschilds.

It is said that Mr. Morgan has had in mind for a considerable period the creation of a single great institution which would dominate not only the banking business passing to and fro between America and Europe, but would practically dictate the financial operations of the world.

KINZNA Viaduct to Be Surpassed.

French engineers are about to begin the construction of a viaduct which, it is claimed, will be thrown higher into the air than the lofty causeway in the Shans or Laos mountains in southeastern Asia or than any other building of the kind in the world. This will be known as the viaduct of Fades and is to be dug over the valley of the Sioule, which the Orleans railway line crosses between Montlucon, in the Allier, and Clermont-Ferrand, in the Puy-de-Dome, says the London Telegraph. The construction is to be of steel, and the cost is estimated at £12,000.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Business Reported to Be Generally In a Flourishing Condition

New York, June 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Confirmation by the agricultural bureau of recent private estimates of the wheat crop has given to business a tone of greater confidence. Retail operations both east and west are larger and distribution of merchandise by the wholesale trade is increasing in dry goods and boots and shoes. A slightly easier market in iron reflects conditions noticed for several weeks past. The labor situation is generally mending with the appreciation of the fact that in some directions manufacturers would be glad of a temporary shutdown of works. Railroad earnings for the first week of June show 163 per cent gain over last year, and 20 percent over 1899.

Seasonable weather has somewhat around the dry goods market. There is not yet such activity that dealers are overwhelmed; but the various divisions of manufacture are fairly occupied and heavy supplies of print cloth at Fall River have decreased. Forwardings of footwear from Boston have averaged over 100,000 cases weekly for some time, and shops are well engaged. Fall contracts are beginning to receive attention. Prices are steady.

The defense introduced medical testimony to the effect that there was a slight blood stain on the left sleeve of Graffam's coat, but none on his trousers, vest or shirt.

Graffam testified that he was 26 years of age, and had earned his own living since he was 10 years old. He worked at the Mosher place some months in 1888, and again in 1889, in which year his mother died. After that he worked for several farmers in Gorham and made several trips to sea. He had never returned to the Mosher house after leaving it in 1889, and never had any trouble with Clifford Mosher or with his mother. He knew nothing about the money in the possession of the Mosher family, nor where it was kept. He testified that while he was in state prison he frequently saw Kelley and had considered a conversation with him, but denied that he even mentioned the Mosher family to Kelley during his state prison term. He said he left Thomaston Oct. 16, and received $5 and a suit of clothes. He spent one night in Portland and then went to Boston, where he began to search for work. He secured employment through an agency, and went to Haverhill, where he worked raising poles for an electric railroad. Dec. 10, he left Haverhill and went to Portland, and worked until Jan. 5 in the new dry dock at Kittery, Me. Jan. 5 he received a letter from his wife stating that she was ill in Portland, and asking him to come to Portland, and he did so.

He left Portland Monday night, reached Boston Tuesday morning and went to Hopedale, where he applied for work at the Hopedale Ice company's office. He was told to report the following morning. He did so, but the ice was covered with water and he was not hired. He then returned to Boston and slept at the Salvation Army barracks Thursday and Friday nights, and spent his time along the water front. Saturday morning he went to the Elmwood hotel and hired a room for three days, paying $1.50 in advance. He remained at the Elmwood until Tuesday morning, when he went to Hopedale again and secured employment with the Draper Iron Foundry company, where he worked until arrested.

Graffam denied that he had ever seen Hanks; said that he was not in Gorham on the night of Jan. 12, and denied that he had any part in the killing of Clifford Mosher.

The rest of the afternoon session was taken up by a rigid cross-examination, conducted by Attorney General Seiders, in which Graffam stuck to his story in every particular, and delivered his answers without hesitation and often in a defiant tone.

It is expected that all of the evidence will be in today.

THE BLEEDING CURE.

A RELIC OF THE MEDICAL METHODS OF A CENTURY AGO.

The Barbarous Practice of "Cupping" Suffering Humanity Still Has Its Adherents—The Operation a Somewhat Delicate One.

William Faversham, ex-leading man of the Empire theater stock company of this city, will experience opposition of the most direct and severe nature at the very opening of his career as a star next season. The play selected for his stellar exploitation is entitled "A Royal Rival" and is by Gerald Du Maurier, son of the author of "Trilby." Mr. Faversham's opening will occur at the Criterion theater at the same time that a little farther down Broadway Mr. James K. Hatchett will produce "Don Caesar's Return" by Victor Mapes. Both of these swashbuckling, romantic melodramas are taken from the old, reliable "Don Caesar De Bazan," which seems to indicate that the "Muskeeters" craze, which was at its full height a couple of years ago, has not yet fully abated. Strange to say, the same man, Mr. Lewis Waller, who was responsible for this insanity two years ago, may again be held chargeable for it. He was to have come to this country next year in "A Royal Rival," the English rights of which he still holds, but Mr. Charles Frohman, Mr. Faversham's manager, by diplomatic promises to star Mr. Waller in the United States a little later under more favorable auspices, succeeded in securing the play for the ex-leading man of the Empire.

The cry comes, But that was a century ago! In sharp contrast stands the wonderful advances made by modern surgery. Thankfully it may be said that such is the truth. But sometimes customs die hard, and today the doctrine of "cupping" has devotees as faithful as those who gave up their life sustaining fluid in Washington's time. This is a startling statement. The writer would have been skeptical if he had not learned its truth himself.

In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries this gawky form of treatment was the work of the barber. That guild has maintained its prerogative into the twentieth century. In a certain little side street in New York, crushed between two towering brick buildings, stands a timid story and a half frame house. The suggestive striped pole which emblazons the art of the dweller within juts over the walk. In the window hangs a sign bearing the word "Cupping." If today were set back to 1700, the pole alone would tell the story. Times, they say, have changed, and so the sign.

The barber is a German. He was much surprised at the question asked. Everybody knew that cupping was a necessity, especially in the spring, he said.

Sometimes, he added, he was so busy that little time remained for his shaving and hair cutting of customers.

"Ach, yes," said the barber, "it keeps me a busy man. How strange you say that you thought it no longer was practiced. People come here morning, noon and night every day, but mostly do they come here in the spring and fall. It is then that the blood needs drawing off. If you have a pain in your head, you come to me. I take a pain in my little cup, burn the air in it out, push down my little knives just behind your ear on the neck, and when the cup is full I take it away. If your headache is not better yet, I take another cup, so be it that the bleeding stop not, upon the other side. Maybe your back pains; I cut you a little on the side. Your arm pains; I draw the blood from your wrist."

The barber bared his arm. The skin was crossed with tiny, pale nicks, like those one sees on the wrist of a moribund victim.

"Twelve is the number of cups I draw at one sitting," the barber said.

"It is a bad pain that will not go away. Then, if you come again the next day with the pain, I draw off more until the ache has disappeared completely."

The cups look like shiny glasses with the stems removed. The knife, or lancet, is arranged like a name stamp. Pressure on a spring plunger drives the little blades, which are arranged in pairs or triplets, into the skin. It is here that the skill of the operator comes into play. When the incisions are made in the neck too violently, a tap on the plunger might mean the severing or wounding of an artery. Pressure too light would not let the blood flow fast enough. The barber must have a trained touch.

Upon the condition of the cup much depends. The air is exhausted by means of a tiny alcohol flame. This makes a vacuum. The cup is pressed on lightly, but firmly. The blood rushes under the skin beneath its rim; then, like a flash, the little knives are pushed down, and the bleeding begins.

The operator never takes more than 12 cups at one sitting. That would mean perhaps a half pint of blood.

This system of bleeding for human ailments harks back to the earliest times. All through the middle ages it was the healing balm for the suffering of mankind. The ancients firmly believed that the loss of blood in this manner drew from their systems the "noxious humors" which afflicted them.

The advent of the modern school of medicine and surgery did away with the process as a universal therapeutic measure.

It was not until the nineteenth century was nearly half completed, however, that physicians abandoned it as a practice.—New York Tribune.

A Trait of the Sex.

A traveling man who had been absent on a long trip just returned, and his 4-year-old daughter would not at first come near him. Every time he approached her she ran away. The father finally sat down on the floor, and picking up some toy dishes, asked his daughter to come and play party with him.

This had the desired effect, and the child came and played with her parent, who asked her why she didn't come to him before.

"Oh, papa," replied the youngster, "I'm so sorry!"—Pittsburg Press.

Mortgagor's Sale.

By Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage held by John C. Cobb, of Boston, Massachusetts, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Susan D. Pratt, late of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth (said administrator gave said Mortgage deed by virtue of a license granted to him on the fourteenth day of February, A. D., 1900, by the Probate Court of Norfolk, County of Norfolk, Chapter 1, Morris of Reading, Massachusetts, dated February 15, 1900, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 865, folio 55, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage deed, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises on WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1901, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the property and estate described and conveyed by said mortgagee, namely—

During the past three years, in fact, nearly 75 per cent of all the locomotives going to Japan have been built by the Schenectady Locomotive works, which is conclusive evidence of the superiority of the American design and build. We are receiving very favorable reports of the operation of our engines in Japan. They are used on all the prominent roads in Japan, including the imperial government road. When the emperor took a trip over the length of the road, of the seven locomotives selected five were of Schenectady Locomotive works build, which is pretty good evidence that they have confidence in American built locomotives.

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated on Appleton Street in that part of Quincy called North Quincy, and being lot 53 as shown on plan recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book of Plans No. 5, plan 199, bounded easterly by Appleton Street, northerly by lot 50 (70) feet; easterly by lot numbered 55 on plan one hundred thirty eight and 2-10 (182) feet; westerly by lot numbered 51 on plan one hundred thirty-five and 2-10 (155) feet; and southerly by land formerly of Billings seventy and 6-10 (70) feet containing 35-1/2 square feet of land more or less.

Sal-ponies will be sold subject to any unpaid taxes or unsatisfied public liens. Three hundred dollars to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance upon tender of the deed. Further terms at the sale.

OUR ENGINES ABROAD.

Railway Experts Here Defend American Machines.

NOT INFERIOR TO ENGLISH MAKE.

Forty Locomotives, Against Which Sir Ernest Paget Reports, Are Not Standards of American Work, Says
A. J. Pittkin—Limitations as to Dimensions Hampered the Builders.

British. The English engineers simply won't be just with an American engine. The main differences in the construction of British and American engines are well known. The American engine is the very simplest that can be devised, so as to make repairs easy. The single bar frame, as the foundation of the American engine is called, enables the builder to make a simple machine. The English engine is built with a double bar frame, which necessitates the putting of the cylinders inside and causes a complex construction. Their crank axles have caused a number of bad accidents.

It is asserted that the American builders had a 'free hand' in the matter of design and pattern in the case of the Baldwin and Schenectady engines. They did not, however. The engines had to be built so as to fit the 'spread' between platforms on the Midland road, and that was one disadvantage. Another disadvantage was the requirement as to the height of the locomotives. The smokestack on the ordinary British locomotive is about 12 inches shorter than those of most of the American locomotives, and that makes a great difference in an engine's power. The dome and the cab must also be kept down on the English roads.

"The statements made by these gentlemen are undoubtedly true, but they are misleading as to the comparative merits of the American engine and the British locomotive, for the conditions of railway operation in England are entirely different from those obtaining in the United States. In England train loads are light and locomotives are not, as a rule, worked anywhere near to their maximum capacity."

"As a real test of the value of American locomotives as compared with the British it is well known that, based on the tons of freight moved per mile, the American locomotive in American train service will show much less cost than the British locomotive in service on the Midland railway in the three items mentioned by Mr. Johnson—viz, repairs, oil and fuel. On the contrary, were British locomotives placed on the leading roads in America they would prove totally inadequate for the service required and too costly in service to compete with American locomotives."

"In building locomotives for the Midland railway the American builders were confined to certain limitations as to dimensions to meet the requirements of the road, consequently the American locomotives on the Midland railway should not be considered as standards of American practice."

In discussing the subject Mr. Sinclair referred to a timely article in his own magazine for this month, which was written by Mr. C. Rous-Marten, the English expert. Referring to Mr. Johnson's first report, quoted above, Mr. Rous-Marten says that from private observation and questioning among the Midland railway engine drivers he gathered that the American locomotives did as much actual work as a British engine of similar proportions would do.

YEAR IN BUDDHIST TEMPLE

Dr. Laufer to Go to China to Study the Religion and Customs.

The American Museum of Natural History is about to send an expedition into China to study the life and customs of the Chinese and to collect ethnological specimens, which will be exhibited in New York city. The work will take at least three years and will be most thoroughly done. At the time when China was the center of the world's interest the museum felt the lack of a Chinese exhibit. A wealthy citizen of New York city heard of the museum's needs in this direction and has supplied the funds necessary to carry on the work. His name will not be made public at present. The work will be along lines similar to that now being carried on by the museum in Siberia, Korea and other countries.

A feature of the expedition will be a careful study of Buddhism, and to that end Dr. B. Laufer of New York city will spend a year in a Buddhist temple in Peking. He will live with the priests and witness as many of their religious ceremonies as possible. Dr. Laufer was a member of the Jesup north Pacific expedition sent out by the museum and was in Siberia from 1888 until 1900. He said recently to a New York Tribune reporter:

"I have just finished working up material gathered during two years of investigation in Siberia and will sail from San Francisco for China later this month. I shall spend the first few months in Shanghai, studying the people of the coast and their customs. Then I shall go to Peking to take up the study of Buddhism. I hope to spend a year in a Buddhist temple near the capital. I expect to live the life of the priests and learn from them the details of their strange religion. BRAINTREE.

The boys of the Braintree Social Circle gave their second entertainment for the benefit of the Boston Floating Hospital, at the Town hall last evening. The house was not so large as it should have been, considering the object and quality of the entertainment. The whole affair was conducted in a manner that would have been a credit to any organization in the land. It was run from start to finish without a hitch or break, and the entire advertised program carried out.

The Union Congregational church of Braintree and Weymouth observed Children's day last Sunday and the services were very interesting. Rev. Robert H. Cochran of Ware, N. H., gave a short talk to the children. Vesper services were held in the evening the singing by the choir being particularly good. Mr. Cochran's address on "Character Building" was deep and impressive. The church and parish committees are unanimous in extending a call to Rev. Mr. Cochran to become the pastor of this church.

Yesterday, Mrs. Mary L. Hollis quietly observed her eightieth birthday, at her home on Union street. She was the recipient of remembrances from friends and relatives in Braintree, Weymouth and Attleboro. Among those to visit her on this occasion was her great grandson, Master Ralph Cushing Hollis.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace French of Franklin street were pleasantly surprised at their home on Tuesday night by a large party of their friends. The occasion being their tin wedding anniversary.

Miss Tiny Eddy of Weymouth was happily surprised by her many friends of this town in Kelley's hall, Wednesday evening. Miss Eddy was presented with a gold watch, and refreshments were served during the evening.

The Union Firemen had a playout Thursday evening with the "old tub" (but ever good) and when the stream was measured solid water had been played 212 feet 8 inches. A vote was taken later at a meeting to attend the South Weymouth muster today.

This morning at 2:20 a general alarm was pulled in from box 4: for a fire at the Hampton house. The firemen from each precinct with their trucks arrived at the fire with promptness and their good work saved the hotel. It is thought that the fire caught in the upper story near the chimney. The damage will amount to $1,500, which is covered by insurance. There were over thirty guests at the hotel who safely escaped.

Monday and Wednesday evening services were held in the Sacred Heart church in connection with the Pope's Jubilee which is being celebrated the world over. A large number from the village were present. A solid loaded car came from South Weymouth. They will be continued for two weeks more.

The observance of flag day was held in G. A. R. hall, last evening, under the charge of Post 87, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, and Antietam camp. There was fine entertainment, consisting of piano solos, cornet solos vocal solos, reading and phonograph selections. A light collation was enjoyed.

The special officers doing duty on the small pox case are discharged today.

Dr. Ernest Bent and family went to Providence via electrics Thursday to visit relatives.

Miss Alberta Le Baron who has filled the position as leading soprano at the First church closes her engagement to morrow. She has filled the position most acceptably and the many friends she has made regret exceedingly that she will not again be heard at the church. Her pleasing voice has been greatly enjoyed by all who have heard her.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE

Is the Fate Which Awaits
Edward Graffam

MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE

The Verdict Found by the Jury—Prisoner Lost His Courage When Decision Was Announced—Accomplice Will Get Lighter Sentence

Portland, Me., June 18.—"Guilty of the first degree," was the verdict returned by the jury in the Graffam murder case last night, after two hours and 10 minutes' deliberation.

For the first time since the trial began, the defendant for a moment lost control of himself when he heard his doom pronounced. For more than a week he has sat in the court room apparently as little concerned in the proceedings as any of the hundreds of spectators, but when he heard the verdict that meant for him nothing but a succession of years behind the sombre walls of the state prison, his lips faltered, his limbs trembled and his eyes filled with tears. This exhibition of weakness lasted only a moment, however, and then Graffam assumed the same cool, collected and almost defiant attitude that has characterized him since his first appearance in court.

As soon as the verdict had been rendered, Charles A. Tregle, the prisoner's counsel, filed a motion for an arrest of judgment, but, although the motion was granted, it is doubtful if Graffam profits in the least by it beyond the fact that it may delay for a few days his ultimate departure to Thomaston to serve out a life sentence.

It was 5:20 p. m. when the jury passed out of the court room to the apartment set aside for their use on the floor above. For some time the throng in the courtroom retained their seats, expecting an early verdict, but as an hour went by and nothing was heard from the jury the crowd commenced to thin out. At 7:30 p. m. one of the deputy sheriffs in charge of the jury entered the judge's office, and a few moments later Judge Bonney and the attorneys came out and entered the court room. The jurors, in answer to the clerk, rendered the verdict which will send Edward Graffam to state prison to spend the remainder of his life.

In excusing the jury, Judge Bonney commended them for the zeal they had displayed in the case, and for the faithful manner in which they had executed the trust reposed in them. In conclusion he stated that he considered, in view of the evidence, that their verdict was both just and righteous. When adjournment was announced the crowds surged forward and surrounded both the jury and the attorneys for the state. Relatives of Clifford Mosher and many residents of Gorham shook hands with the jurors and congratulated them on the verdict.

After the first scene was over, Edward Graffam sat in his chair silent and unmoved, deserted by all save his counsel. An instant later a pair of handcuffs snapped on his wrist, and he was led away to jail.

William Hinds will appear in court today, and it is believed the state will accept a plea of manslaughter from him, and that he will plead guilty and take a state prison sentence for a term of years.

A WONDERFUL COUNTRY

Section of Africa Where Big Game
Ignores Human Beings

London, June 18.—Sir Harry H. Johnston, special commissioner for the Uganda protectorate, has returned to London after an absence of two years. He brings stories of Uganda, rivaling Henry M. Stanley's description of "Darkest Africa." Sir Harry says that the country surrounding Moat-talgon is totally depopulated as a result of inter-tribal wars, and is consequently marvellously stocked with big game that as tame as English park deer. Zebras and antelopes can be approached to within 10 yards, and there is no sport in killing them. Elephants and rhinoceros are also abundant, and, according to Sir Harry, lions in Uganda are too busy eating hartebeest to notice a passing caravan. The prehistoric giraffe has been discovered in this country by the commissioner, who proposes to maintain the region referred to as a national park.

Body of Geo. W. Park Found in River.

Thought to Have Been Thrown Into Water

After His Money and Valuables
Had Been Stolen.

There is considerable mystery surrounding the death of George W. Park, whose body was found by three young men Saturday afternoon floating in Neponset river near the railroad bridge. On the forehead was a deep gash, fully an inch long, and the right eye was badly swollen and discolored as if from a heavy blow.

When searched, papers were brought to light which identified the body as that of George W. Park of Quincy. It was later learned that he was 60 years of age and lived on Penns hill with his wife. He has lived in Quincy about 20 years and has kept a few cows and did a vegetable business. He is reported to be worth considerable money.

The last seen of Mr. Park alive was Monday when he went to City Hall to pay a water bill. He visited City Hall as he intended and then disappeared.

No money was found in his pockets although he is reported to be one who usually carried quite a sum of money. His family say that he had but $10 with him when he left home. It was thought he might have drawn money from the bank but inquiry at the banks on Monday showed that he had not done so.

During the day of his disappearance he is said to have expressed a desire to visit his brother John, who lives in Woburn. He did not go there, however, and the first the latter heard of his brother was to receive a letter from Mrs. Park inquiring if her husband was there. Efforts were made by the Quincy police on Sunday to trace him but were unsuccessful.

It was however learned that he was accustomed to buy goods in the liquor store of D. F. McGarry, 43 Federal street, Boston. This clue was traced up Monday. It was found that Park was in the bar room Monday evening. He did not drink anything but treated some friends. He then had a long black pocketbook and considerable money. When he left McGarry's he said he was going to take the 8:28 train for home.

In this he must have changed his mind for it is said that a motorman on the Neponset line of electric cars remembers bringing him late in the evening. It is also said that parties along the Neponset river heard loud cries for help late Monday night but such cries are frequent in that section and no particular notice was paid to them.

The long black pocketbook was not found in his clothing when the body was found.

It was also learned that when he paid his bill at City Hall he had considerable money with him. He was given a receipt, but the receipt has not come to light.

The Quincy police hold to the theory that Park went to Boston and was on his way home in the electrics. That he arrived in Neponset and then fell in with a gang of toughs who robbed him and that during the scuffle he fell overboard or that he was intentionally thrown into the water.

According to the report of the medical examiner, Park was alive when he went into the water. Chief Hayden and Inspector McKay have been working on the case from the Quincy end and they are of the opinion that Park arrived in Neponset too late for the last Quincy car and that he started to walk home and was met on the Quincy end of the bridge by a gang of toughs who attempted to rob him and that they succeeded and then threw him overboard.

Mr. Park leaves a widow, but no children. There are 2 brothers living and also two sisters. A brother from Grafton, Vt., arrived Monday.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Suppose the Independence carries off the honors from the Constitution and Columbia in the Newport races next month; what then? Suppose the Constitution and Columbia in the New- port races carry off the honors from the Independence; what then? While my wishes are with the Independence, I cannot allow them to warp my judgment.

Comparisons of the two designs, lead me to believe the Constitution the better and ought to win; therefore you will find me on this side of the fence, and not like most writers on top, ready to jump to the winning side, whichever may win. The question of charters can be indefinitely postponed.

Bumpus—Hood.

A wedding of interest to Boston and Quincy occurred today at Hotel Bellevue, Boston, when Rev. Arthur L. Bumpus, son of Judge E. C. Bumpus of Quincy, and Miss Cora C. Hood, daughter of Rev. Mr. Hood of Boston, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Atkinson of the Church of the Ascension, in the presence of the immediate families only, on account of the recent death of the groom's brother.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After taking the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

ANOTHER CASE.

Bessie McLeod, Who Was in Quarantine, Has Small Pox.

Quincy has another case of smallpox on its hands in the person of Bessie McLeod, who has been under quarantine for the past two weeks with the McLeod family in the cottage near the pest house.

Up to the time that Macbeth was discovered to be sick with the disease, the girl had been employed as a domestic in the family of Charles Wilson. It was with this girl that Macbeth was keeping company and to whom it is said he was engaged. They were frequently together and on Thursday, May 29, the day that Dr. McMellan discovered that Macbeth had the smallpox, she was with him. That night she attempted to return to the Wilson family but they refused to let her in and she went back to her lover. When the McLeod family were taken to the cottage under quarantine she went with them.

The Board of Health were congratulating themselves that Macbeth was the only one who would have the disease and intended to release the girl and the others from quarantine today. Monday it was learned that the girl had been ailing for a day or two and upon being called out was found to be broken out on her face. She claimed the scabs on her face were nothing but cold sores. Cold sores however do not appear under the eyes or in the palms of the hands.

The breaking out of sores in the palm of the hand is said to be a sure sign of the smallpox, and the experts who were called in later in the day said there was no question but what the girl had the disease.

The pupils of the Woodward Institute have presented Miss Small, the principal, a seal leather travelling case.

Mr. Benjamin Johnson and wife and granddaughter expect to leave this week for their annual visit to Rangeley lake.

The engagement is announced of Miss Effie Earle of Englewood, N.J., and Mr. Israel Damon, Harvard, '99, of Quincy.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tar, who died in Chelsea on Monday was a great grandson of Mrs. James Mears of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Hewson returned this morning from a two weeks' visit in Maine, where they have been enjoying trout fishing.

The Board of Health say that the McLeod girl has the disease in a very light form. When the first case made its appearance she was vaccinated with the others, and it has been a case of fight between the disease and the virus. The disease had been inoculated, however, before she was vaccinated.

Today the McLeod family and the two men who are with them will be moved to the house in the rear of the almshouse recently occupied by the Clark family and the girl will be furnished with a nurse and kept where she is.

As these parties have been exposed to the disease for the past two weeks the city will be lucky if it escapes without more cases.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Emma Hollanshee Goodwin of Lexington, formerly of Braintree, to Mr. Edward C. Graves of Boston and Beach Bluff.

If this breezy weather and clear skies last until Saturday next, the ladies' day reunion of the Q. Y. C. will rival the many recent social events in our fashionable calendar.

Dr. C. O. Young, formerly a member of the Quincy Board of Health, who has been absent from Quincy for a few years, arrived in Boston on Friday from London. Saturday he visited friends in Quincy.

The juniors of the Woodward institute entertained the seniors at the school building on Friday evening, June 14. The hall was beautifully decorated. Games and music were enjoyed also refreshments by Hendrie.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Faxon of Fitchburg, were in a trolley saloon on the Gardner, Westminster & Fitchburg street railway Sunday night, the former sustaining a sprained knee and the latter a sprained ankle. Mr. Faxon was the man to Milton and swore out the warrant against him in court the next morning.

It is rumored that Mayor Hall is to take up the matter, and that Miller will proceed against Qualey in a civil suit for false arrest.

The work of Bjorklund in the box for Quincy was superb up to the seventh inning when he let down and allowed the home team to score 4 runs. Donohue then relieved him and did fine work not allowing a hit and shutting the home team out. For Quincy the best work was done by Pitts, Pirovano, Duffy, Martell, Morales and Drown excelled for Weymouth.

ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL

Argument of Counsel For Roland B. Molineux

SAYS LOWER COURT ERRED

In Admitting Evidence Concerning the Death of Barnet—Recorder, Trial Judge and District Attorney's Staff Come In For Censure

Buffalo, June 18.—The court of appeals yesterday heard the first argument for a new trial for Roland B. Molineux, the young New York clubman, athlete and chemist, under sentence of death for poisoning Mrs. Katherine J. Adams in December, 1893, who was the unintended victim of a plot devised by the use of the American malice to take the life of Harry Cornish, manager of athletic sports.

Judges Parker, Vann, Bartlett, Gray, O'Brien, Haigh and Werner, grave in the gowns of black, sat upon the bench to hear the famous cause, and down at the counsels' table were former United States Senator Hill, who holds the brief of the people, and John G. Milburn, president of the Pan-American exposition, who espoused the cause of the young prisoner at Sing Sing. With Hill sat Assistant District Attorney Le Barber of New York, and grouped about Milburn were Messrs. Battie and Weeks, who defended Molineux at his trial; General Molineux, father of the prisoner, and Dr. N. Carvalho, handwriting expert, who advised the defense.

Many more than the court room would hold crowded into the corridors to hear the story of the almost fascinating crime linked with the double mystery of the death of Henry C. Barnett, and the officers of the court barred the outer doors and admitted the favored ones by a rear entrance.

Milburn, for the appellant, talked during the entire session of the court, gaining a hearing at 10:30 o'clock, when a civil case closed, and speaking until 2 o'clock, when the court arose for the day. He has another hour to speak, it being agreed that each side should have four hours. Senator Hill sat through the entire speech without an interruption that called him to his feet.

Milburn's address of 31 1/2 hours' duration was directed largely to the alleged error of the lower court in admitting evidence as to the death of Henry C. Barnett, and he spared neither recorder, the trial judge, for his rulings on evidence, nor the district attorney's staff for its methods in securing the admission of evidence. He spent nearly two hours in a review of the known facts, pregnant with doubt and mystery, and sought to show what he described as the flimsy fabric upon which the entire case rested.

He ridiculed the idea that the Cornish theory of revenge and the Barnett theory of jealousy could be reconciled, and disclaiming a desire to cast suspicion in any direction, advanced the opinion that the man who poisoned Mrs. Adams had two accomplices, one the man who bought the bottle holder at Newark, and the other the man who at the same hour hired the Koch letter box. He denied that the trouble at the Knickerbocker club was sufficient for Molineux to desire the life of Cornish, or that there was anything in the relations of Molineux, Barnet and Blanche Cheseborough that warranted a suspicion of a rival to the point of a desire to kill a rival on the part of Molineux.

He drew attention to the failure to identify Molineux as the man who hired the Koch letter box. He also denominated the introduction of evidence as to the relations of Molineux with Blanche Cheseborough before their marriage.

Fraudulent Conversion Charged
New York, June 18.—Early in 1898, when William C. Walker was assistant treasurer and secretary of the United Security Life Insurance and Trust company, he pleaded guilty of embezzling $6369 from the company, and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. He was pardoned Dec. 22, 1898. The American Security company of this city had to pay the $6369. It has begun suit for fraudulent conversion, and Walker was arrested yesterday.

Death of Actor Aldrich
Boston, June 18.—Dr. M. E. Webb was robbed of a fine diamond scarf pin while watching the Charlestown parade yesterday. Inspector Wise and Officer Appleton had been following a suspect, and saw him pick the pin, so they caught him. He gave the name of Harry Fleming of New York.

Newport, Vt., June 18.—August Pelthier, aged 25, was frightfully injured and nearly disembowled by a slug saw at Prouty & Miller's mill yesterday. There is no hope for his recovery.

ITALIAN'S READY STILETTO

Used Upon a Boston Policeman Who Attempted to Arrest Him

Boston, June 18.—Savino Baoga, an Italian organ grinder, last night stabbed Policeman Jeremiah O'Brien, who was attempting to arrest him in City square, Charlestown. O'Brien was taken to a hospital, where it was found the wound had penetrated his liver. An operation was performed which seemed to be successful, and it is expected that he will recover.

The stabbing was the consequence of a previous attack made by Baoga's partner on another man. Baoga and Nikolai Ottavio were playing their hurdy gurdy in front of Bryan Kelly's house, near City square. Kelly threw a cent to them from the window. Ottavio invited Kelly to come outside. Kelly did so, whereupon it is alleged Ottavio drew a stiletto and stabbed him in the thigh. Kelly was not badly hurt. He ran over to police station 15, which was close by, and reported the affair.

Two officers were sent out to catch Baoga. O'Brien was one of them. He ran and caught Baoga, who pulled a stiletto 7 1/2 inches long and stuck it into his policeman. He was caught after running a few steps. The organ which Baoga had taken with him when he ran from Kelly's house, stood at one side. Ottavio took it and started across the Charlestown bridge. He was pursued by an officer in a carriage. He abandoned the organ, but was caught on the other side of the river.

Charlestown's Big Time
Boston, June 18.—In great and glorious style the 126th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill was written on the page of history in Charlestown yesterday. The crowds were great, the hospitality of boundless measure, the noise a hurly-burly from the stroke of midnight until all enthusiasm had been exhausted, and the parades the greatest creation of art yet gotten together in Boston. Charlestown was a crush of people, for the new "L" road poured thousands into it every hour. There were a large number of minor mishaps.

Naval Gunner's Mishap
West Ferry, N. H., June 18.—Nelson L. Belle Isle, who has charge of the battery on the U. S. S. Machias at the Boston navy yard, fell beneath a train here yesterday and had both legs cut off. He was taken to a hospital at Manchester. Belle Isle was aboard the Brooklyn in the Santiago fight, and was later gun captain on the Massachusetts, and again on the Detroit in China.

Milburn's Address
Hagerstown, Md., June 18.—Mrs. Jacob Dillingham has found among some old papers in a trunk at her home, near Williamsport, a copy of the last dispatch written by Stonewall Jackson to General Lee before the battle of Chancellorsville. The dispatch is dated May 2, 1863, 3 o'clock p. m., and states that the enemy has made a stand at Chancellorsville, and expresses the belief that a "kind providence will bless us with success." The dispatch is signed "T. S. Jackson." Mrs. Dillingham's house was occupied as a hospital during the war.

MAD MULLAH REPULSED

Lost Five Hundred Men In One Engagement With the British

London, June 18.—A dispatch to the foreign office from the consul general of Somaliland says that the Mad Mullah expedition had heavy fighting May 28.

The fighting column of mounted infantry, under Captain Marwether, struck the Mullah's supply camp during a night march, and captured 5000 head of cattle, killed one important chief and captured another, covered 100 miles, fought a sharp engagement and returned to its base all in 24 hours.

The main force of the British, under Colonel Swaine, departed for Eldab June 2, leaving Captain MacNeill with 300 men to guard Ziriba. Swaine's column advanced against the Mullah's base. In the meantime the Mullah, with 3000 followers, attacked Ziriba three times. He was finally driven off by McNeill, with a loss of 500 men. The British in Ziriba had 10 men killed and nine wounded.

The Mullah is now cut off from his base, and a decisive action is imminent.

HAZEN S. PINGREE DEAD

Son Was Alone With Him
When the End Came

ACQUIRED NATIONAL FAME

By the Inauguration of Many Municipal Reforms While Mayor of Detroit—Was Twice Governor of Michigan—Came From Maine Stock

London, June 19.—Ex-Governor H. S. Pingree of Michigan died here last night at 11:35. His son was the only person present at the time of his death. The attending doctor left Mr. Pingree's bedside about 11:15, promising to return shortly. H. S. Pingree, Jr., who has been watching at his father's side for four days, noticed a sudden change in his father's condition. He had hardly reached the patient's bedside when his father died peacefully, without warning and without speaking one word.

Governor Crane criticizes the section relating to the removal of conduits, pipes, wires and other electrical and gas apparatus underground. The governor declares that the bill is objectionable for the further reason that it is in violation of the spirit of the statutes designed to prevent stock-watering, laws whose wisdom he sees so far confirmed by experience that all attempts to modify or repeal them have failed.

Smallpox in New England

Waterville, Me., June 19.—Great concern prevails here on account of the discovery of a case of smallpox in a large boarding-house in the center of the city. The house has been quarantined and is guarded by police, as the inmates threaten to leave.

Lewiston, Me., June 19.—Five new cases of smallpox were discovered in No. 11 Androscoggin block last evening, and the patients were removed to the pest house.

Manville, R. I., June 19.—Another case of smallpox was discovered at Manville last night, making the seventh case so far discovered.

Two Men Crushed to Death

Springfield, Mass., June 19.—Two unknown men were crushed to death under heavy iron beams on a car between Albany and this city last night. The men were found on the car when the train arrived in this city early this morning. The beams had been piled along the sides of the cars and the men had evidently laid down to sleep between the two piles, and somewhere, when the train was switching, the iron had tipped over and killed the men.

Governor Pingree.

Hazen Senter Pingree was born at Defiance, Me., in 1840. In 1862 he enlisted in the First Massachusetts heavy artillery, and served until the end of the war, when he located in Detroit and embarked in the manufacture of shoes.

In 1889 the Republican party nominated Mr. Pingree for mayor of Detroit, and he was elected by 2000 majority. He was re-elected in 1891-93-95 by increased majorities each time. In 1896 Mr. Pingree was elected governor of Michigan by about 63,000 plurality. He was re-elected governor in 1898 by about 100,000 plurality, and served out his term, which expired in 1900. Last March he started on the trip to South Africa, which resulted in his death in London.

Ex-Governor Pingree, while he was mayor, accomplished many municipal reforms, among others forcing the gas company to lower their rates 50 cents per 1000 feet; establishing the public lighting plant; organizing the Detroit railway on a 3-cent fare basis; lowering telephone rates, and breaking up a number of sewer and paving combinations. His potato patch scheme for the relief of the poor was extensively copied. While governor, Mr. Pingree devoted his energies toward securing the passage of a law taxing railroads and other corporation property on an ad valorem basis, instead of specifically on their earnings.

Hoe Machinists to Return

New York, June 19.—The 750 men involved in the strike at the works of R. Hoe & Co., printing press manufacturers, will return to work tomorrow. It is understood that the men return with the agreement of a 9-hour day.

Instantly Killed by a Fall

Boston, June 19.—William H. Duncan, 50 years old, while putting in window screens at a house on St. James street yesterday, fell from a third-story window, and was instantly killed.

Fire in Paper Mill

Bradford, Vt., June 19.—The mill of the Bradford Paper company is on fire. There is no wind, so the blaze will be confined to the mill property. The loss will be considerable.

Woman Badly Burned

Holyoke, Mass., June 19.—Mrs. Ellen Connor was badly burned yesterday, her dress catching fire while she was lighting her kitchen fire. She was removed to a hospital, and is in a critical condition.

Italians Throw Up Work

Waterville, Me., June 19.—Twenty-one of the Italians that have been working on the tracks of the Maine Central quit work yesterday, and returned to Boston. But 11 of the foreigners remain. Otherwise the strike situation is unchanged.

They may as well expect to run a steam engine without water as to find an active, energetic man with a torpid liver and you may know that his liver is torpid when he does not relish his food or feels dull and languid. In other words, often has he had and sometimes disappears. A few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will restore his liver to its normal function and make him feel like a new man. Prices 25 cents. Samples free at all druggists.

POINTS CRITICISED

Governor Crane Vetoes the Boston Elevated Subway Measure

Boston, June 19.—Governor Crane sent in his veto of the Washington-street subway bill yesterday. Discussion on the matter was postponed until today.

Comment flew fast and furious when the members reached the corridors or as they remained in groups to talk over the matter. The consensus of opinion was that the message was so broad, that it "shot so many holes in the bill as to render it no difficult task for wavering members to consider that in voting to sustain the governor they would be acting in the interest of the public welfare." The governor touches the matter of the referendum with rather a light hand, but elaborates many other points in instructive detail. His opinion is that the Boston Elevated Railway company could not be held to the payment of more than $6,000,000 for the construction of the subway, and that the city would be liable for any excess of cost above that figure, is held by some to be argument enough for the rejection of the bill.

Governor Crane criticizes the section relating to the removal of conduits, pipes, wires and other electrical and gas apparatus underground. The governor declares that the bill is objectionable for the further reason that it is in violation of the spirit of the statutes designed to prevent stock-watering, laws whose wisdom he sees so far confirmed by experience that all attempts to modify or repeal them have failed.

Chief Watts States

Chief Watts states that there is nothing learned as yet as to Blondin's present whereabouts. The trunk and bicycle located in New York have not been called for. The trunk will be opened by Boston inspectors in New York, but it is doubtful if anything is learned from that. Chief Watts does not believe that Blondin is in New York, and thinks that the trunk and bicycle were sent there to throw the police from their track.

New York detectives say that Blondin, under the name of Joseph Marran, went to 692 Third avenue last Wednesday and talked with the landlady about renting a room. He did not appear satisfied, and said he would call again. A young woman in the house recognized him from a description she had read in a newspaper, and told the landlady, who laughed at her, and prevented her from calling a policeman.

On Friday Blondin called and said that he had secured a room elsewhere. He asked that a trunk and a bicycle coming to the house for him be cared for. It was learned that Blondin called at 690 Third avenue and talked with a Mrs. Monahan about renting a room. The last seen of him was on Friday.

Captain Titus of the detective bureau said he was very sorry that the facts in connection with the flight of Blondin to New York had become public through the newspapers.

Captain Titus said that he had no clews to the whereabouts of Blondin other than the fact that he had ordered his baggage and bicycle sent to New York to the Fall River baggage room. "We should have caught Blondin, though, either at the general delivery window of the postoffice or at the pier, if the matter had been kept quiet," he said.

A dispatch from Lowell says that Joseph Nichols says that he talked and drank with Blondin in that city yesterday morning. He says that he

BIG ROWING REGATTA

Yale-Harvard, Poughkeepsie and Henley Meets Looming Up.

QUAKER EIGHT AMERICA'S BEST.

Pennsylvania's Henley Crew Speediest Aggregation Ever Sent to England—Race With Dublin University on Killarney Lakes.

The rowing season is approaching its climax. Preparations for the stellar events are now narrowing down, and it is possible to get a line on the probable showing of the various crews that are to participate in the big regattas.

The first of the very important rowing meets occurs June 27 at New Lon-

The Dorcas Society give a lawn party at the Universalist grounds Friday, this week.

Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., will hold a special meeting on Friday evening for work.

The preparatory gun for review of the Quincy Yacht club on Saturday will be fired at 2:45.

Rev. W. Sherman Thompson, formerly of Quincy Point, has accepted a call to the Franklin Street Congregational church at Somerville.

Children's Sunday was observed last Sunday at the West Quincy Methodist church. The church was very prettily decorated with flowers and all of the services were largely attended. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. John Peterson, preached an interesting sermon to the young people and in the evening there was a pleasing concert by the Sunday school.

Miss Sadie N. Pawsey entertained the members of the Journal Outlook club, R. N. D., with invited guests at her home at Rock Island, with Mrs. A. H. Humphrey as champion on Saturday afternoon from 2 until 5.

Games were played and cake and ice cream were served. About twenty-five enjoyed the hospitality of the Pawsey and enjoyed themselves to their hearts content.

Hall-Eaton.

There was a quiet but pretty wedding Tuesday evening at the residence of Hon. and Mrs. William N. Eaton of Adams street, when their daughter Miss Edith was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph H. Hall of Milton hill.

The Rev. E. C. Butler of the First church officiated. The couple were attended by Miss Grace Eaton as maid of honor and Mr. Charles H. Wheelock as best man. The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with tucked mouseline and lace applique, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, and the maid of honor wore white muslin trimmed with lace. A reception followed the ceremony. The rooms were prettily decorated with daisies and cut flowers.

Music during the evening was furnished by Peters' orchestra.

The ushers were Mr. Charles H. Wheelock of Dorchester, Mr. C. Eaton Pierce of Quincy, and Mr. E. S. Hurd of Milton.

W. GARDNER, NO. 7, HENLEY CREW,

don, Conn. Yale and Harvard eights will then battle royally for the supremacy. Yale seems to have the better chance for winning. Her crew has been rowing with the same line up for a considerable length of time. Harvard, on the contrary, has had to change the arrangement of the oarsmen in the varsity eight on several recent occasions.

The great Poughkeepsie regatta will be rowed July 2. Six colleges have entered crews. They are Cornell, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Columbia, George town and Syracuse. Cornell, Wisconsin and Columbia will probably divide the honors. Pennsylvania has sent her best men to England to race at Henley. This leaves the Poughkeepsie eight very weak. Much care, however, has been taken with the freshman and four oared crews, and the Quakers expect to capture both events.

Cornell's eight is rowing in rare form, and it should win out. Courtney is one of the best coaches in the United States and with fairly good material should succeed in making a victorious eight now that Pennsylvania's varsity crew stands practically no chance. Pennsylvania won the last three inter-collegiate races. In two of these contests the Quakers lowered the record for the distance.

Wisconsin always rows a good race. The Badgers have plenty of determination and stamina, two important factors in deciding boat races. Columbia looks unusually good to the knowing ones. The wearers of the blue and white, under Edward Hanlan's tutelage, have rounded into fine form.

The Henley regatta occurs on the Thames course July 3, 4, 5. Besides the English and American rowers, there will compete the well known Belgian eight that contested last year.

The crack university of Pennsylvania crew that will represent the United States at Henley is probably the fastest aggregation of spoon wielders ever produced here. The Henley eight broke the record for the international race shortly before leaving for Liverpool.

Head Coach Ellis Ward went to England with the Philadelphia oarsmen.

His brother, Josh Ward, is taking care of the three Poughkeepsie crews during his absence.

The personnel of the Henley crew is as follows: Zane, bow; Eisenbrey, No. 2; Kuhnenmech, No. 3; Crowther, No. 4; Flckew (captain), No. 5; Allyn, No. 6; W. Gardiner, No. 7; J. Gardiner, stroke.

J. and W. Gardiner are the mainstays of the boat. They fill the most important seats, and as both are veterans in the eight oared racing shell they should exert a mighty influence.

Directly after the Henley regatta the Americans will go to Ireland, where they are to race the eight of Dublin university. The contest is arranged for July 13 and will be rowed on the lakes of Killarney. This is the first time an American university has been invited to send a crew to Ireland.

BATTLE FOR MOLINEUX

Continued by His Counsel Before Court of Appeals

GOFF'S POLICY ATTACKED

Charged With Favoritism Toward the Prosecution—State Begins Argument and Declares That Revenge and Jealousy Were Motives for Crime

Buffalo, June 19.—The final direct verbal plea for another chance before a jury for Rofaud B. Molineux, the alleged poisoner of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams and Henry C. Barnet, and the first half of the arraignment of the people in resistance, were heard by the court of appeals yesterday.

John G. Milburn, champion of the cause of Molineux, spoke from 10 o'clock until 11:40, and was succeeded by David B. Hill, who held the attention of the court until it arose for the day, at 2 o'clock, in an address in opposition to the retrial of the case. Hill will close today, and, with a brief reply for the appellant, the case will be submitted to the judgment of the court.

It was a day of oratory, stirred at times to the thrilling point with touches of invective. Milburn's close was vigorous. He began with a second attack upon the admissibility of the Barnet evidence, and closed with a direct attack upon Recorder Goff's policy throughout the trial. He charged the latter with favoritism toward Assistant District Attorney Osborne, whose methods also questioned, and prejudice against Attorney Bartow S. Weeks, and to support his contention read the stenographic notes of the recorder's examination of Mary Melando, and Nicholas Heckman. He dramatically described the examination of Mary Melando, and denied that the recorder had a right to mention her credit to her or admit several portions of her testimony as evidence.

Senator Hill, fresh from the leash of nearly two days' silence, was equally vigorous. He plunged into a review of the case, which was an argument tending to show the guilt of the defendant. He strongly defended the course of Recorder Goff and Mr. Osborne, and amply justified the theory and policy of the prosecution in their entirety.

Starting with the theories of the people as to the killing of Mrs. Adams and Barnet, he followed them through their lines of reasoning, and contended for their stability and acceptance. He insisted that the people had the right to show how Barnet died, and insisted that a complete reconciliation of the two cases was possible.

He avowed that the prosecution was within its right in showing the relations of Molineux and his wife prior to their marriage, and asserted that it was the people who had suffered when the recorder ordered the evidence stricken out. He said Mrs. Molineux had called her marriage a romance; he called it a tragedy.

Mr. Hill took up successively the various mysterious letters written under the name of Cornish and Barnet, upon the blue paper creased with inter-laced creases, and forcefully adjusting them in their places in the theory of the prosecution, dramatically proclaimed the alleged guilt of the prisoner and insisted that the state had conclusively proven its charge. He dwelt upon the description of himself given by the writer of the Marsden blank or the Harpster letter, and reading the acknowledged note of Molineux to the Burns Medical company, said that it was the connecting link in the whole series of letters. He defended Harry Cornish against suspicion or insinuation, and asserted the reliability of the mass of handwriting testimony offered by the state.

Reviewing the trouble at the Knickerbocker club, and connecting with it Cornish's denunciation of Molineux and the Harpster incident, he proclaimed revenge as the motive of the plot to kill Cornish, and then pictured jealousy as the motive in the Barnet case. He pronounced the weight of evidence against the accused as overwhelming, and said that no defense had been made because none was possible. He charged that the defense feared an examination of its handwriting expert, David Carvalho, and therefore kept him off the stand. He insisted that the prosecution had gone into the case honestly and with a desire to do its simple duty; that there had been no pre-judgment, and that the trial had been a fair one. Mr. Hill did not touch the disputed law points, and will go into them today.

Danger Period Has Passed

Washington, June 19.—Drs. Johnson and Rixey held a consultation at the White House yesterday, at the conclusion of which Dr. Johnson pronounced Mrs. McKinley out of danger and convalescing. He said there may be, of course, a recurrence of her trouble, but that the present danger is past.

Lynched In Broad Daylight

New Orleans, June 19.—Abe Barrett,

a negro who assaulted a white girl at Gulfport, was captured yesterday and lynched. He confessed, and was strung to a tree in broad daylight.

THE SHOOTING OF KELLER

Defense Barred From Relating Circumstances Leading Up to It

New Jersey City, June 19.—The trial of Thomas G. Barker for the shooting of Rev. John Keller at Arlington proved an interesting one yesterday. It was full of objections by counsel and clearing, cold and sharp rulings by the presiding judge. Both principals went on the stand during the day.

Mr. Keller told his story straightforwardly. The story of Barker was not told and may never be on the witness stand. Under the rulings of the court, he was allowed to say that the defense must abandon the line of contention it had prepared to follow. The court held that Barker cannot testify to his own state of mind on the morning of the shooting, or, as Prosecutor Erwin put it, "testify to his own insanity." The object of the defense was to introduce the alleged conversation between Barker and his wife, which, it is claimed, led to the shooting. Mr. Van Winkle and Mr. Wall, counsel for Barker, struggled hard to get something that would leave an opening for this. They fought hard and long, but at each tack were met with defeat. They went straight at the question and sought to bring in the whole story, bold and plainly, but at the end Barker was withdrawn from the stand without having added anything to the known facts of the case, and practically without testifying to anything material. He was withdrawn temporarily, but unless some basis is laid for his testimony he may not be recalled.

Following quick and fast upon this defeat came another, when Dr. Evans of the Morris Plains asylum was practically debarred from testifying, and had to be withdrawn. Dr. Evans was to testify to what might in the case, under given circumstances, but the circumstances had to be established by the doctor had to step aside for the call of a foundation laid for his testimony. The court rose as soon as Dr. Evans was withdrawn.

Mr. Keller showed the jury his scared face, and blinded and injured eyes. He insisted that the shot which entered his head was fired from behind. He said he had spoken to no one and, inferentially, that there had been no quarrel.

Tried to Swear Man's Life Away

Camden, Ark., June 19.—Tom Watson, with his wife, swore that the negro Will Bassett had committed an assault on Mrs. Watson, was taken out by a committee of citizens of Camden last night and given 500 lashes. The affidavit of Watson and his wife was the means of Bussey having been sentenced to hang, but about three weeks ago Mrs. Watson confessed that she had sworn falsely against Bussey. On learning this, Governor Davis suspended the sentence imposed on Bussey.

Mr. Fletcher showed the jury his scared face, and blinded and injured eyes. He insisted that the shot which entered his head was fired from behind. He said he had spoken to no one and, inferentially, that there had been no quarrel.

More Trouble For China

London, June 19.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, cabling under date of June 18, says that a Chinese military graduate named Lin Lo Siang has collected a large force of Boxers and disbanded soldiers, and has induced the inhabitants of the numerous walled villages and towns in the southwestern part of Chi-Lo province to unite in opposing the collection of taxes for the war indemnity. It is reported that Lin Lo Siang and his followers have already defeated the imperial troops in several encounters. This movement threatens to spread.

Note Leads to Tragedy

Tampa, Fla., June 19.—Sheriff Lester

has arrived here from Fannie Kilgore, daughter of Hon. W. C. G. Kilgore, as a prisoner. Her arrest was caused by the death of Mrs. Emma Hatfield. On June 8, Mrs. Hatfield found a note in Miss Kilgore's room intended for her husband. She accused Miss Kilgore of writing the note, and reprimanded her for doing so. Words followed, and it is alleged that the young woman made a furious assault upon Mrs. Hatfield. Mrs. Hatfield became critically ill and died Sunday.

How Boers Will Punish

Molteno, June 19.—Kritzinger and Fonne, the Boer commanders, are placarding Cape Colony with a proclamation to the effect that any persons reporting the whereabouts of any Boer command will be fined $50, or, in default, will be compelled to accompany the command on foot for three months.

According to the best information, there are about 2500 armed Boers in Cape Colony, and they continue to secure a few recruits.

Insular Taxation Sufficient

San Juan, June 19.—Governor Allen

is satisfied that the present system of insular taxation produces sufficient revenue for Porto Rico's needs, and that, consequently, the island maintains its self without the use of customs duties on trade with the United States.

Governor Allen has decided to call the Porto Rican assembly in extra session for the sole purpose of passing a resolution to this effect.

Big Race May Be Brought About

New York, June 19.—An American magazine has cabled to Sir Thomas Lipton, and written to Thomas W. Lawson and W. D. Duncan, offering to provide a gold cup, valued at $5000, to be competed for after the cup races, under the auspices of some well-known yacht club.

Sir Thomas has cabled in reply that he will send his American representative, Mr. Barrie, to see the editor of the magazine.

Mr. Lawson has signified his willingness to enter the independence in such a contest previous to July 6. Mr. Duncan's reply has not yet been received.

SHE THEN KILLS HERSELF

Deed Was Evidently Premeditated, as She Lay in Wait for Victim on Roadway Where She Knew He Would Pass on His Bicycle

Walpole, Mass., June 20.—Annie Veitze, a German girl of 20 years, last evening attempted to kill Harvey C. Blanchard, who had formerly been attentive to her, then sent a bullet into her own brain, killing herself instantly. Blanchard is suffering from two bullet wounds, one in the nose and the other through the breast, but it is believed he will recover.

Witnesses of the affair gave a general alarm, and men started through the woods in pursuit of the stranger. At a late hour a man was arrested, but he appears to tell a straight story. The incident created great excitement, and the search will be resumed today if the man already detained is not identified by Miss Veitze.

Miss Veitze lived in that section of Dedham known as Islington, with her mother and brother, her father being dead, and she had known Blanchard for more than a year, the latter being employed as a blacksmith at East Walpole. About a year ago Miss Veitze came to East Walpole, where she worked for a few weeks as a waitress in a restaurant.

During that time, and for a while after she left East Walpole, Blanchard paid her much attention. He discontinued his attentions to her recently and it is said the girl had since that time been exceedingly jealous of him.

Last yesterday afternoon Miss Veitze came from her home in Islington to East Walpole on an electric car, and, after various events seemed to prove, for the expressed purpose of taking Blanchard's life.

The latter was in the habit of returning from work on his bicycle to East Walpole, where he boarded and lodged.

Miss Veitze was well acquainted with this fact, and proceeding down the road about three-quarters of a mile, after leaving the electric, she awaited his coming.

There are several houses in the vicinity, the nearest to the scene of the shooting being that occupied by Andrew Urquhart.

A few minutes after 6 o'clock Blanchard made his appearance upon his bicycle, and as he neared the spot where the young woman was awaiting him, she drew a 22-calibre revolver from her pocket and fired full in his face, the bullet striking him in the nose. He pitched from his wheel, and a moment later a second shot penetrated his breast bone. Then, thinking she had accomplished what she desired, Miss Veitze turned the weapon upon herself and sent a bullet crashing through her right temple, dying almost instantly.

There was no witness to the firing of the first shot except the girl and her victim, but Mrs. Urquhart, who had been startled by the first shot, ran to investigate, and was just in time to see the girl as she fired the two succeeding shots. Mrs. Urquhart at once gave the alarm.

Blanchard is 24 years old, and is known as a steady, industrious mechanic, who has been in the employ of F. W. Bird & Sons for two years past. It is impossible to get any statement from him, as in his weak condition his physicians refuse to allow him to talk even if he were disposed to do so.

Explosives Wrought Havoc

New York, June 20.—The village of Shadyside, N. J., was shaken by a series of explosions yesterday which took place at the works of the Barrett Manufacturing company, as the result of a fire. Several of the buildings owned by the company were blown to atoms, and most of the houses in the village nearby were more or less seriously damaged by flying metal and brick.

The explosions were caused by 25 high pressure ammonia tanks bursting from the intense heat.

Lieutenant In Police Court

New York, June 20.—Lieutenant Edward H. Martin, who was dismissed from the regular army for a shortage in his cantine accounts, was rearraigned in police court yesterday, and was held in $3000 bail for a trial on a charge of forgery and passing worthless checks.

TWO MEN LYNNED

Shreveport, La., June 20.—Frank Smith and F. D. McLand, held at Benton for complicity in the murder of John G. Foster, were taken out by a mob last night and strung up to a tree. Both negroes made statements before death denying that they had anything to do with the killing. Smith, who was at the head of the "Church of God" movement in that section, died praying. McLand was silent as he was swung up.

DR. MORGAN IN AMERICA

New York, June 20.—On the steamship Teutonic, which arrived last evening from Liverpool, was Rev. Campbell Morgan and family. Dr. Morgan comes to remain about six years. While he will not carry on the work of the late Rev. Dwight L. Moody, he will do evangelical work and Bible teaching for the Northfield, Mass., Extension society.

You may as well expect to run a steam engine without water as to find an active, energetic man with a torpid liver and you may know that his liver is torpid when he does not relish his food or feels dull and languid after eating, often has headache and sometimes dizziness. A few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will restore his liver to its normal functions, renew his vitality, improve his digestion and make him feel like a new man. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all druggists.

The Russian plague commission has declared Egypt, with the exception of Port Said, and the Suez canal district, to be infected territory.

WOMAN WITH REVOLVER

Prevents Serious Assault Upon Another Woman at Lebanon, N. H. Lebanon, N. H., June 20.—The police and a large posse of citizens have searched the woods for a man, who, if caught, will be charged with assault upon Miss Frances Finn, a professional nurse, at the residence of Mrs. Henry F. Knapp.

Miss Finn was sitting on the house porch yesterday afternoon when a man stepped in front of the house and spoke insultingly to her. She resented what he said, and he seized her and attempted to force her into the house. Miss Finn's screams brought Mrs. Knapp from her upstairs apartments, but the man by that time had dragged Miss Finn to the rear of the house.

As Mrs. Knapp appeared at the door the man ran for the woods nearby. Mrs. Knapp, however, during the man's run through the yard, fired five shots at him from a revolver she had brought downstairs. Mrs. Knapp is sure that at least one of the bullets hit the runner.

Witnesses of the affair gave a general alarm, and men started through the woods in pursuit of the stranger. At a late hour a man was arrested, but he appears to tell a straight story. The incident created great excitement, and the search will be resumed today if the man already detained is not identified by Miss Finn.

OVER PUBLIC ROAD

Mrs. Blodin's Body May Have Been Carried to Chelmsford Boston, June 20.—The police are planning to follow out the theory that Blodin carried the body of his murdered wife in a trunk all the way over the public road from this city to Chelmsford. It is expected that Boston officers will take teams and drive over the road from Boston to the spot where the body was discovered and question the police who live along the route, with a view to ascertaining if they can tell anything which will show that Blodin passed over the road with a team during the 11 hours from Saturday night, April 27, until Sunday morning, April 28, when his whereabouts are unknown.

Blodin's trunk was opened in New York yesterday by the Boston police representatives. Inspector McClelland and Detectives Rhodes and Neal. Two knives were discovered in the trunk with blood or rust, no one could tell which, on them. Besides there were a coat, a vest, a shirt, a pair of bicycle trousers and a marriage certificate. The Boston police retained these articles.

Legislature Adjourns

Boston, June 20.—The Massachusetts legislature was prorogued at 9:30 o'clock last night until the second Tuesday in November, when it will meet in special session to consider the report of the special committee of 50 appointed to revise the statutes during the summer vacation.

During the closing hours of the session there was little business of importance transacted after the vote sustaining the governor's veto of the Washington street subway bill.

Steamer Uganda Overdue

St. John's, June 20.—Steamer Uganda, which left Liverpool June 4 for St. John's and Halifax, is overdue. The steamer should have made the passage in eight days, and it is feared that some accident has befallen her. The rate of insurance on the ship has been advanced.

TRUST OF MURDERERSMight Organize If Courts Swerve From Path of Duty*THE GUILT OF MOLINEUX

Has Been Clearly Established, In the Opinion of Counsel For the People, Who Says Prisoner Has No Defense to Offer—Case Now In Judges' Hands

Buffalo, June 20.—The fate of Roland B. Molineux, convicted of murder, as the poisoner of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams at New York in December, 1898, is in the keeping of the seven judges of the court of appeals, who, for three days past, have been listening to the arguments for and against a new trial.

The appeal was finally submitted at 1:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the decision will not be announced until some months hence, when the court sits at Albany for the fall term.

The strange crime with its complicated plot and manifold mystery retains a strong hold upon popular interest, and the crowd that sought admission to the court room yesterday was large and more determined than ever.

Excited men fought for places near the glass doors where they might see the actions if they missed the words, of the closing scenes of the notable argument, and the bailiffs had to resort to force to restrain them.

The principal speaker was former United States Senator Hill, advocate of the cause of the people, who still had over three hours of his allotted time left when court opened at 10 o'clock.

He spoke until 11:15, and John G. Milburn, attorney for Molineux, was heard for 20 minutes in concise reply.

Mr. Hill was again forceful and eloquent, and devoted his best efforts to convincing the court of the alleged guilt of the accused. He declared that the question of guilt was the main issue in the case, and warned the court not to heed a plea that dealt in technicality, and urged objections to acts and rulings that had not substantially affected the rights of the accused.

If the courts were to thus swerved from the path of duty he suggested that the murderers might organize a trust and all enjoy freedom.

Mrs. Barker was expected to break down and become hysterical on the stand, but a clever woman has seldom occupied the chair.

Both witnesses were not at all weakened under cross-examination. Mr. Keller sat through it all without betraying the slightest emotion. Great stress was laid upon the fact that Mr. Keller had borrowed money from Mrs. Barker, and their counsel sought to show this was not the cause of the shooting.

In a dissertation on the law as to the admission of testimony as to another crime, and the use of conceded and disputed writing for the purposes of comparison, he led the court down a long line of authorities and decisions all aimed at sustaining the use of the Barnett evidence, and the policy of the lower court toward the exhibits of handwriting at the trial. In this admirably told story of the law, he made frequent reference to the famous Tichborne case in England, tracing a similarity in the admission of certain writings to prove perjury on the part of the claimant, and in the policy of objection and obstruction on the part of the defense.

In finally summing up he reviewed the points previously made by him, and step by step, traced out the main features of theory of the people. He reviewed the forged correspondence with the patent medicine dealers, and proclaimed Molineux as the author of the letters, the enemy of Harry Cornish and Henry C. Barnet, the compounder of the rare cyanide of mercury used in both crimes, and the man who mailed the fatal potion that killed Mrs. Adams. He dwelt lengthily upon the failure of the prisoner to offer a defense, and reiterated his assertion that he had none to offer.

Mr. Milburn's reply was largely devoted to an answer to personal criticism and particularly to Mr. Hill's illusion to the fact that throughout his speech he had not once expressed his personal conviction of the innocence of the man for whom he pleaded, but its strongest feature was the indication of three points of weakness in the cause of the people.

He drew attention to the fact that the claim that Henry C. Barnet had received poison rested solely upon the hearsay testimony of Dr. Douglass, who swore that Barnet said the poisoned Kintow powder came to him by mail. That fact unestablished or broken down, and the chain of circumstantial evidence was parted. He also directed attention to the facts that Molineux had not bought the bottle holder, and had not been identified as the man who hired the Koch letter box, without which it was impossible to fix guilt upon him.

He again asserted that seven-eighths of the record was made up of testimony that was entirely incompetent and inadequate.

A conspicuous figure during the argument was General Molineux, the aged father of the prisoner, whose face told of the strain that the always spirited, and at times bitter, review of the case had been to him.

There was no comment at the close, and as attorneys and spectators left their chairs, Chief Justice Parker called the next day.

Both Mr. Hill and Mr. Milburn were surrounded by admiring friends, who professed enthusiasm, congratulations for their notable efforts.

BARKER'S TESTIMONYContracts That Given by Keller on the Witness Stand

New York, June 20.—The fate of Thomas G. Barker will be left with the jury before today closes, according to present prospects. The defense had practically finished when the court rose yesterday, and it is not thought Prosecutor Erwin will take long in rebuttal. The defense yesterday put Barker and his wife on the stand, and they told their story.

Although the record does not show it, Mr. Van Winkle, counsel for Barker, got some of the alleged assault matter before the jury in one way and another. The witnesses answered so promptly that Mr. Erwin's objections gained a shade late. In this way the "outrage" was referred to several times during the day. The state had it stretched out each time, but the impression went to the jury. It was quick, sharp fighting, and the witnesses were a little too much for the prosecutor. The moment Mr. Van Winkle or Mr. Wall asked a question it was answered like a flash. Judge Blair cautioned the witnesses not to answer so quickly, but after an answer or so they returned to the old practice.

BRILLIANT AND GAY.

RECEPTION OF THE CLASS OF 1901 OF WOODWARD INSTITUTE.THE COURT RECORD OF HIS CONVICTION
FOR LIQUOR SELLING.

The reception of the Class of 1901 was the most brilliant ever given at the Woodward Institute for Girls and was the society event of the season. It was very largely attended and the ladies generally were beautifully gowned.

The reception was from eight until nine thirty, the class being represented in the receiving party by their president, Miss Eunice Day Nutting; the valedictorian, Miss Mary Webb Dinegan; Miss Annie Henderson Graham and Miss Abigail Baxter Waldron. First in line however, was Miss Small, the principal who was gowned in a rich white silk with spangle trimmings.

The party received in the east corner which was banked with green. The Junior class acted as ushers. The guests included most of the prominent people of the city: Mayor Hall and city officials, the clergy, Supt. Partin of the public schools and teachers of Quincy schools. But young people, friends of the graduates predominated especially after the dancing commenced at nine thirty. Richardson's orchestra the same as in recent years, furnished delightful music during the reception and for the dancing.

In the upper rooms there was an extensive exhibit of drawings by the pupils which was greatly admired. Lemonade and punch was served in different rooms by pupils of the third class who also decorated the upper rooms. The music room was particularly attractive with its couches, bright colored sofa pillows and cosy corners.

Good Afternoon.

It would not be class day at Harvard without a little rain.

If every battleship constructed continues to break the speed record, as they have done for some time, we shall eventually have something very swift in that line.

Ward One is backing up the Mayor in his ideas of economy, all three Councilmen voting to sustain his last veto. The combination is too much, however, for Ward One.

The conditions which accompany the order permitting the street railway to double track Hancock street, are reasonable and the company is fortunate to get the valuable franchise so easily.

Maj. Gen. John C. Bates, who has recently returned from the Philippines, said of the condition of the army: "Our troops are in excellent condition. We had no more sickness than would naturally expect from a tropical climate, and I think no more than we would have if our troops were stationed in the Gulf State here."

Drift of Opinion.

—Trolley cars in Greece ought to move easily and swiftly.—Taunton Gazette.

The notes of correspondents in the Massachusetts crop report for May are unanimous in one conclusion—that farm help all through this section of the State, is very scarce and good help hard to find. The pay runs from $18 to $20 a month with board and $1.50 a day without board and yet the inclination of the young man of today is toward other pursuits even though they may not be as healthful or as profitable.—Brockton Enterprise.

Not Disowned.

Jordan L. Mott, 3d, of New York, who secretly married Miss Caroline Pitkin of Braintree, April 20, firmly denies the report in a New York paper that he has been disinherited and disowned by his millionaire parents, who have sailed for Europe. To show that there is no ill feeling, he says: My parents were in Boston only last Tuesday, the day before they sailed for Europe, and my wife and I, together with my wife's parents, dined with them. My future was talked over in the most amicable way and both my wife and myself were urged to join them in Europe for a summer tour, a little later.

Stone Sawing.

A report comes from Nashua, N. H., that the Stone Sawing Machine and Quarry Co., with a capital of $250,000 has leased the buildings formerly occupied by the Vale mills in that city and will begin its work within a short time. Joseph Labine of Nashua is the president and J. S. Young is the treasurer. The officials of the company state that they expect to revolutionize the present method of cutting granite and marble blocks with their new machinery.

How to Avoid Trouble.

Now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over, and if procured now may save you a trip to town in the night or in your busiest season. Strikers Sure of Winning.

Winnipeg, Man., June 21.—The strike of the trackmen on the Canadian Pacific railway continues to assume larger proportions. The officials have issued a circular warning all who do not return to work at once that their places will be filled by the company. The strikers, however, are confident of winning.

WEIGHTMAN LICENSE.

THE COURT RECORD OF HIS CONVICTION
FOR LIQUOR SELLING.

Henry H. Faxon, who believes there are altogether too many common victualler licenses granted, is disappointed because the City Council should deliberate in the face of a conviction renew the license of William W. Weightman of Temple street, as it did on Wednesday evening.

Objection was made before the Committee on Licenses and also in Council, and the statement was made that he had been convicted, but nevertheless the license was granted. Mr. Faxon is confident this action would not have been taken if the years and mays had been ordered and furnishes the following record of conviction:

The case was No. 565 of 1900 in the Superior court at Dedham—Commonwealth vs. William W. Weightman.

Search for liquors on complaint of Thomas F. Ferguson and Patrick J. Bradley. Issued Aug. 4, 1900. Returned Aug. 4, 1900. Liquors seized —About one-fourth gallons of wine in two one quart bottles; About twelve one-half gallons of lager beer in one hundred bottles and two beer glasses. Notice issued Aug. 6, 1900, returnable Aug. 24, 1900. Aug. 24, 1900, Liquors and vessels forfeited. Aug. 24, 1900, Warrant of delivery issued. Aug. 24, 1900, Warrant of delivery returned.

In the upper rooms there was an extensive exhibit of drawings by the pupils which was greatly admired. Lemonade and punch was served in different rooms by pupils of the third class who also decorated the upper rooms. The music room was particularly attractive with its couches, bright colored sofa pillows and cosy corners.

MILTON.

The lawn party Monday afternoon and evening under the auspices of St. Catherine's guild of the Mission of Our Saviour church was very largely attended and was very successful. Tables for the sale of refreshments and fancy articles are arranged about the grounds and a hurdy gurdy furnished music for dancing. In the evening the grounds were prettily decorated with flowers. In the morning the pastor, Rev. A. H. Mulhix, preached a sermon to young people and baptised nineteen. Sunday evening there was a concert by the young people.

A violin recital by the pupils of Joseph E. Lanigan, followed by the operetta "Jack the Giant Killer" will be given next week in Associate's hall.

The engine house at East Milton is being painted.

Ladies' night was observed by the Unity club on Wednesday evening. There was dancing and refreshments. A hurdy gurdy furnished music.

The first set in the tennis tournament at the Quincy club courts was played Monday between William Churchill and George Richardson. The set was won by the former.

The sewer trench on the west side of the railroad on Adams street has been opened as far as the railroad crossing.

Rings Presented.

Miss Sarah Summers was surprised at her home, 57 Rodman street, Thursday evening, June 13 by a large number of her schoolmates who wished to present her a beautiful finger ring as a token of esteem and wish her good luck on her intended journey to Barre. The ring was presented by Annie Norrie. Annie Grand also presented Mary Summers with a beautiful finger ring which was given by her parents. During the evening games were played and refreshments served.

Those present were Isabella McLeod, Florence McDonald, Maggie Morrison, Mary Morrison, Annie Grant, Lulu Hadden, Jennie Cummings, Nellie Cummings, Margaret McKenzie Evelyn Lowe, Mamie Warmington, Jennie McLennan, Alice Findlay, Susan Tyler, Irma Moodie, Katie Favero, Henrietta Moeser, Minnie Moeser, Evelyn McLeod, Lillian Bianchi, Sadie McLeod, Anna Norrie, Nellie Norrie Grace McKenzie, Mildred McLeod, Nellie Smith.

And on the twentieth day of September A. D. 1900 it is considered and ordered by the Court that the said William W. Weightman be punished by a fine of fifty dollars to the use of the City of Quincy and that he stand committed until said sentence be completed with.

From which sentence the said William W. Weightman appeals to the Superior Court for the transaction of criminal business to be held at Dedham within and for the County of Norfolk on the first Monday of October. There was a report of the good work of the club. Games were enjoyed and refreshments served.

HANNA OUT FOR FORAKER

Urge Sacrifice of Personal Interests
For Good of the Party—Notice to the Opposition That Republicans Are Preparing for Campaign of 1903

Cleveland, June 21.—Contrary to general expectations, harmony prevailed at the Republican county convention yesterday. Senator Hanna made a strong speech in favor of peace between the two factions of the party.

"Seldom has there been any campaign," he said, "of such importance as last year, bearing on questions of such moment, and this year it is the same. It will have a great bearing on the president's work, and we should uphold him. This year we elect a legislature to choose a successor to Senator Foraker, and we should be united in the demand that he be sent back. The legislature that chooses his successor will also redistrict Ohio, and on this hangs the fate of at least five members of Ohio's congressional delegation."

"The acts of the party in this country and state this fall are of importance to the administration. Its acts are to say to the administration that the Republicans of this state upheld the hands of the president by giving him our aid to a majority in the next house of representatives. Personal interests ought to be sacrificed for the good of the party. The Republican party must continue to hold the respect of a majority of the people of the United States."

"It is needless to tell what the Republican party has done for the people for the past few years. It is not necessary to place Mr. McKinley in the first rank of presidents. He is not only president, but a fellow citizen and friend. If anything would please him it would be that this talk of harmony is not superficial. For myself, such a wish comes from the bottom of my heart."

"The Republican party has honored me beyond my merits. In 1896 I felt on the turn of events hung the prosperity and the success of the country. New issues had been raised, and many honest Republicans were led astray.

"No argument is so strong as an object lesson. The Republican party promised the country if McKinley was elected on the St. Louis platform all promises of prosperity would be fulfilled. They were fulfilled. The renewed confidence of the people came with the fulfillment. Let us give notice to the opposition in Ohio and in the United States that the Republican ranks are filling up and preparing for the battle of 1903. Let this be the notice to the state and the United States."

The nominations subsequently made were pretty evenly divided between the two factions of the party.

STATE PRISON FOR LIFE

Graffam Receives Sentence and Has a Talk With a Reporter

Portland, Me., June 21.—Judge Bonney of the superior court returned from Hebron yesterday, and Edward Graffam, who on Monday was convicted of the murder of Clifford Mosher of Gorham, made a formal appearance in court. His counsel withdrew the motion for an arrest of judgment, and Graffam was sentenced to state prison for life.

Graffam said to a reporter: "I am feeling as well as a man could under the circumstances. A life sentence is a long time to serve, but it has got to come, and I might as well make the best of it. But I want to say that the verdict was based more on prejudice than on the evidence. I realize that I made my big mistake when I talked with Deputy Sheriff Plummer, who arrested me. If I had not said anything about being in the Elmwood House, Boston, on the night of the murder, I could have kept the prosecuting lawyers guessing until I came on the stand."

"The officers seem to fear that you may do some injury to the negro, Hands, if you get a chance," the reporter suggested.

"They need not be afraid of that," the prisoner replied. "I know that in state prison a man gets used better if he attends to his work and makes no trouble. I don't intend to lessen my liberties for the sake of harming that negro, even if he did lie about me."

"Kelley lied, too, but I haven't any desire to harm him. When you hear anything about me at Thomaston it will be that I am living up to the rules and giving the authorities no trouble."

Woman's Club Leaves Federation
Boston, June 21.—The Woman's Charitable club, one of the best-known and most influential organizations of women in the state, has quitted the General Federation of Women's clubs. This action was voted at a meeting held yesterday, after a lengthy and spirited discussion. There was an attempt made to show that the action was due to a drawing of the color line, but the action was taken distinctly for financial reasons, said its promoters.

Not Responsible For His Actions
Lebanon, N. H., June 21.—Eugene Mulligan was surrendered to the police by his father, he having confessed to the attempted assault upon Miss Frances Finn, a professional nurse, at the home of Mrs. Knapp. The young man has shown signs of an unsound mind for some years. He was examined by two physicians, who certified to his insanity, and Justice Cole ordered his commitment to a hospital.

"No argument is so strong as an object lesson. The Republican party promised the country if McKinley was elected on the St. Louis platform all promises of prosperity would be fulfilled. They were fulfilled. The renewed confidence of the people came with the fulfillment. Let us give notice to the opposition in Ohio and in the United States that the Republican ranks are filling up and preparing for the battle of 1903. GENERAL SUMMARY.

We are very slightly changed
From the semipines who ranged India's prehistoric clay.
Whose drew the longest bow
Bent his leather down, you know,
As we run men down today.

"Dowd," the first of all the race,
Met the mammoth face to face
On the lake or in the cave,
Stole the steedless camel,
At the quarry others slew,
Died—and took the sheep grave.

When they scratched the relined bone,
Some one made the sketch his own,
Flashed it from the artist; then,
Even in those early days,
Won a simple victory's praise
Through the toll of other men.

Here they hewed the sphinx veins
Favoritism governed kissings,
Even as it does in this age.

Who shall doubt the secret hid Under Cheops' pyramid
Was that the contractor did Cheaps out of several millions
Or that Joseph's widow rise
To competitor of supplies
Was a fraud of monstrous size
On King Pharaoh's smart civilians?

Thus the artless songs I sing
Do not deal with anything
Now or never said before,
As it was in the beginning,
Is today official沉没
And shall be forevermore.—Rudyard Kipling.

THE LOSS OF THE HUAFIA

By M. Quad.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

It is now 20 years since the marine tragedy at Valdivia, a port in Chile, and the mystery surrounding the affair is not much clearer than it was the day after it occurred. At midnight one dark and rainy night a Spanish man-of-war named the Huafa and carrying a crew of 400 men entered the bay at slow speed, intending to anchor within half a mile of the wharfs. Of a sudden she was almost lifted out of the waters and canted over on her beam ends, and something was felt to scrape along her whole side and keel. There was instant alarm throughout the whole ship, but before a single man of the watch below could reach the deck the Huafa turned turtle and went down in 60 feet of water. The suction carried down all who were on deck, and of that whole crew only 14 men escaped with their lives, and among them was not one single officer. They were all agreed that the bows of the ship were suddenly lifted to an angle of 45 degrees and that after a few seconds she was twisted to port, and they heard the snapping and crashing of wood and iron.

It was at first believed that the Huafa had struck and run upon a submerged wreck, but after a vain search for

ONE OF HER BOATS WAS FOUND FLOATING such an obstruction the idea was abandoned. Had no one been left alive it would have been set down to a boiler explosion, but the testimony of the 14 survivors was against such an accident. All were agreed that there was no explosion of any sort and that the propeller was still revolving as she settled down. As the unfortunate craft had cost about $3,000,000 and this was the first trip, the Spanish government went in for the most thorough investigation. The depth of water was not beyond the divers, and a buoy was set to mark the spot as near as might be until men could go down. It was two weeks later before the divers were ready, and then a second mystery was at hand. The Huafa was not to be found under or in the neighborhood of the buoy. For the first time in the history of the port it was learned that there was a stiff current running along the bottom of the bay, entering from the north and going clear around it to sweep out to sea on the south side. The surface of the bay was only disturbed by wind and tide, and even as far down as 40 feet no current could be felt, but the last 10 feet of water before touching bottom had the rush of a mill race. When this fact was made clear to the searchers, they extended the field of their operations. The current ran strongest as the tide flowed in and directly in opposition. The Huafa had come in on almost a full tide, and the current would therefore drift her along the north side of the bay, or so it was reasoned. As a matter of fact, however, the north shore was searched without finding any trace of her. Then a search of the south shore followed, and then they hoped to find the sunken craft in some eddy near the center. It was five months before the divers declared that the bottom was clear of wreck of any sort.

Now came the question of what had become of the man-of-war. It did not seem possible that such a mass of wood and iron, with the weight of her guns and stores and unfortunate crew added, could be drifted any distance along the bottom, especially as the bottom was plentifully sprinkled with great rocks. There was no other way to account for her disappearance, however. The current had bumped her along the bottom for a distance of three miles and had then taken her out to sea. Just off the entrance of the port the water deepens to 200 feet, and it was concluded that she had been carried into this basin to be buried under the ooze. The commission of Inquiry closed its labors much more bogged at the finish than at the start, and it was not believed that anything further would ever be heard of the craft. Nothing ever has been directly, but many things have come to light to still further tangle the mystery surrounding her. A year and a half later and as far to the south as the mouth of the gulf of Conocochee one of her boats was found floating. Its gripe had rotated from the davits and freed it. This did not prove the position of the lost Huafa, but it satisfied many minds that she must be drifting southward. Three months later some of her boxes were drifted ashore on the islands, 400 miles to the south, and six weeks after this find and still to the south some of her cabin furniture was picked up by a whaler. This flotsam was without barnacles, proving that it had not long been adrift. It was concluded from this that the Huafa was still creeping along the bottom, the strength of the current, and the last find made almost settled the question. A second boat and more wreckage were washed ashore almost as far down as Cape Horn, and in the bottom of the boat were six inches of liquid mud. This must have accumulated as she floated or crept along the bottom of the sea, and the chances are that the boat did not drift above 20 miles after rising to the surface.

As to the accident in the bay, it is generally believed that the vessel struck a large whale which had entered out of curiosity and that in his pain and fright the giant fish had hove her up and then flung her on her side, but as no whale had ever been seen in the bay there is room for doubt. Wreck or whale or whatever it may have been, it was the cause of one of the gloomiest tragedies of the sea, and no one can imagine that ill-fated craft slowly creeping down around the God forsaken point of land which men call Cape Horn without a sigh of pity for the skeleton crew that mans its iron decks.

Gobelin Tapestry.

So important are their artistic merit and historic value that no history of tapestry is complete that does not include a description of their design and execution. For more than 200 years the existence of the papal manufacturer of tapestries was unknown to the modern world. Documents relating to its origin and productions were buried and forgotten in the mass of manuscript in the famous Barberini library until a very recent date, when they were unearthed by Eugène Muntz, director of the National Ecole des Beaux Arts at Paris. In the popular mind all tapestries are associated with the Gobelin factories of France.

Curious to relate, not a yard of tapestry was ever woven by a member of the Gobelin family. Immortality came to them from the fact that in the middle of the fifteenth century the founder of the family established a dyehouse which became famous and brought the proprietors fortune. Descendants shrewdly transported skilled tapestry weavers from Flanders, whose work they directed and marketed until tapestry and Gobelin became then, as now, synonymous throughout the world—Donaloc's.

No Chance in History.

Mazzini said that he did not believe that chance existed in history. "A cause must necessarily underlie every event, although for the moment it may appear as the result of apparently accidental circumstances. An Alexander, a Caesar, a Napoleon, are not the results of accident, but the inevitable product of the time and nation from which they spring. It was not Caesar who destroyed the Roman republic. The republic was dead before Caesar came. Sulla, Marius, Catiline, preceded and foreshadowed Caesar, but he, gifted with keener insight and greater genius, snatched the power from them and concentrated it in his own hands."

"For there was no doubt that he was fitter to rule than all the others put together. At the same time, supposing he had appeared 150 years earlier, he would not have succeeded in destroying the republic. When he came the life had already gone out of it, and even Caesar's death could not restore that."

Cured Her Sore Throat.

A lady who was visiting at the house of a friend when attacked thus describes the unique manner in which she relieved a serious case of sore throat: "I awoke one morning with my throat so sore and swelled internally that I could scarcely swallow. I did not like to trouble any one, yet felt that I must do something for it. I had read that the fumes from burning sulphur were good for diphtheria, and a similar remedy flashed across my mind. I lit a match and inhaled the first sulphurous smoke from it. Of course it made me cough, but it relieved the smarting in my throat instantly. While dressing I tried two others and went down to breakfast hoarse, but the soreness was gone."—London Telegraph.

Sleep and Dreams.

A German physician says: "The fact is women require a larger amount of sleep than men. The nervous excitability of the female constitution is generally greater than is the case with the stronger sex, and a woman's sleep is consequently lighter. Her dreams are more vivid and leave a more lasting impression on the memory. Women addicted to dreaming usually sleep an hour longer than those who do not dream, for dreams induce weariness. Any one who sleeps without dreaming rises on the morrow refreshed from his couch, which is otherwise not the case."

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 23—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Toric.—How temperance would help transform the earth.—Rev. xxi, 1-7. (A temperance meeting.)

There is scarcely a phase of life that would not be transformed by temperance—temperance in all things, in words, in deeds, but especially temperance in alcoholic drinks and a temperance that would mean abstinence, so far as alcohol as a beverage is concerned. The state would be purified of one of its most blighting curses. The homes of millions would be transformed, and countless multitudes of individuals would have their lives changed from despair to hope, from darkness to light, from midnight sorrow to noonday joy. The contemplation of such a picture only helps us to realize what a curse and blight intemperance is.

If all men were sober, if there were no drunkards in the world, surely this old world would be a new world to millions. Truly in myriads of cases from this cause there "would be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying nor any more pain." For former things—death, tears, heartaches, separations, blighted hopes, ruined homes, wrecked lives—would be no more, and all things would be made new. The desert would blossom like the rose.

That such a condition would follow universal sobriety is easily proved by the fact that intemperance causes a vast amount of the sorrow and unhappiness of the world. Its evil influence is seen in the state. It ruins statesmen, leads to the corruption of legislators and produces many of the vicious laws that find their way upon our statute books. Its curse is a blight upon society. Social life everywhere is corrupted and degraded as a result of intemperance in alcoholic drinks. Its damning shadow falls darkest of all perhaps upon the home. It turns the husband into a demon and the father to a brutal tyrant. It clothes in rags and feeds with crusts. It produces widows and orphans and conditions that are often worse than widowhood and orphanage. It wrecks and ruins individual lives and crushes hopes for time and for eternity. What a demon! What a curse! And yet to think that it is permitted under the law and made light of by many who profess to have the best interests of mankind at heart!

The awful conditions that result from intemperance and the happy conditions that would follow the dethronement of King Alcohol should inspire every Christian Endeavorer to toil on against this great foe of the state, society, the home and the individual. Temperance is right, and right must prevail. The new heaven and the new earth are coming, and with them will come relief from the curses of drink and the joys of their absence.

BIBLE READINGS.

Rev. x, 9, 10; Isa. v, 11; Joel i, 5; Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 20, 21, 29-35; Rom. xii, 12-14; I Cor. vi, 10; Gal. v, 19-26; I Pet. iv, 1-5; Rev. xxii, 12-15.

DELIVERANCE FROM SIN.

Deliverance from sin means the transformation of life, the awakening or renewal of holy purpose, the control of pure, high, noble motive. The Scriptures express the fact felicitously when they speak of the converted person as a new man. He seems so to himself. He appears so to others. Life takes on a new and brighter aspect. He makes a fresh beginning and goes forth in a new spirit along the path of daily duty, which, however familiar, has become new all at once in its appearance, its opportunities and its responsibilities. He feels that he never before understood aright what it means to be one of God's children and active in God's world. Deliverance from sin has not placed him where sin cannot assail him, but has given him such additional power of resistance and victory that he no longer feels helpless before it.—Congregationalist.

HONOR THE SON OF MAN.

In the power of His fellowship we cease to be contemptible. By the heart of His great love for us we can be warmed into love for our poor brethren. In the might of His forgiveness we, too, can forgive. Look to Him when you are tempted to despise your fellows. Look upon the face of His agony when men break your heart. Recall His unconquerable pity when bitterness and wrath and harsh judgment clamor in you for utterance. You cannot deride or wound or hate those for love of whom He died. Recall the pure dignity of His manhood, the beauty of His human days. And, in order that still you may be able with a full conviction to honor all men, honor the Son of Man, honor Jesus Christ.—Church Standard.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE YOUNG.

The pastor of a congregation is not the only man who occupies a position of responsibility. Write the names of all the children in your own or in other homes who are being influenced by your walk and conversation and then say whether your position is a responsible one or not. There are dozens of little eyes watching your life and conduct, and their lives are going to be influenced by you, whether you will or not. In the interest of their welfare see that you walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise.—United Presbyterian.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. For what are men better than sheep or goats that nourish a blind life within the brain. If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer, Both for themselves and those who call them friends? For so the whole round world is every hour Bound by gold chains around the feet of God.—Tennyson.

MASTER A. E. J. COLLINS.

Dates amateur up to that time possessed the unique record of 485 not out. Young Collins batted seven hours, his rate of scoring, therefore, averaging about 90 runs an hour.—Strand.

FOUND THE WATER SALTED.

A 5-year-old youngster was enjoying his first dip at the sea beach when he suddenly slipped, ducked and came up sputtering. He made a wry face and demanded in surprise: "Auntie, who salted that water?"

A VERY YOUNG COMPOSER.

Bruce Campbell of Ossawatomie, Kan., 15 years of age, composes marches and two steps that would be a credit to a man who makes a business of composing music.

BARKER FOUND GUILTY

Jury Decided the Question on the First Ballot

HIS BAIL IS DOUBLED

Pending Final Disposition of the Case —Court Charged Jurors That Even Outrage Was No Justification For Assault—Prisoner Disappointed

Jersey City, N. J., June 22.—The jury which tried Thomas G. Barker of Arlington for shooting, with intent to kill, Rev. John Keller of the same town, fled out of court yesterday afternoon, took one ballot, and returned with a verdict of guilty. In the charge of the judge the jury were told that they must set aside all else and decide only whether Barker, with intent to kill, fired at Keller.

Barker is once more an inmate of the county jail. He must remain there until $10,000 bail is furnished. His old bail was $5,000. Before him stands a possible seven years' imprisonment and a possible fine of $2,000.

Mrs. Barker was not in the court room to hear the verdict. She was in another part of the court house. In fact there were very few present, for the crowd scattered to get a breath of fresh air, not supposing the jury would come in within an hour at least. When Mrs. Barker was told that the case had gone against her husband, she showed considerable emotion, but did not collapse, as was feared. Mr. Keller was also absent, and showed no emotion when told of the verdict. Barker himself took the decree of the jury without faltering.

He had expected an acquittal, although his friends had told him that a disagreement was the best he might expect. He based his hopes upon the strength of his counsel, who advanced the "unwritten law" that a man has a right to kill in defense or in revenge where his wife's sanctity is assailed. Whatever effect this line of pleading may have had upon the jury was swept away by the cold charge of the judge. The court charged the jury that "the story of the alleged outrage, or the outrage itself, if true, was no justification of the defendant's assault."

The court explained he had admitted the fact that Barker had been told of an assault, not because that had anything to do with the case, but because it was for the jury to determine if the telling of the story had anything to do with making the defendant criminally irresponsible. If they believed the defendant was at the time of the shooting they must convict.

In his closing argument, Prosecutor Erwin himself referred to the alleged assault. He asked the jurors if the woman's course was the natural one. She had kept her alleged secret for 18 months. Even after that long time her husband first heard the story, not from her, but from a man. He characterized the story as improbable, saying Mrs. Barker, if the story was true, would, in the natural course, have told her husband of it at once, and, failing that, would have made a confidant of a woman.

The jury took but one ballot, but it was divided into two parts. The first was unanimously for guilty. Then ballots were cast as to the degree, and again it was a unit for the highest degree charged.

Mr. Keller, as soon as the trial was completed, issued a brief statement in which he absolutely denied the truth of the allegations that have been made and published by Mrs. Barker.

Barker will probably be sentenced on Thursday next, and then his counsel will file the papers in an appeal to the supreme court.

Barker, in an interview, said: "I did not expect such a verdict. It seemed to me there was a reasonable doubt. I believe that no 12 men would convict me after hearing my wife's story. I believe that the supreme court will give me a new trial, and that then my wife's story will be told."

Got Light Sentences

New York, June 22.—William Allen and Jens Fraudenthal, cashier and manager, respectively, of the Mission restaurant on the Bowery, who were found guilty of assault in the third degree, as the result of a trial on the charge of murdering Charles E. Gale, because he did not have 6 cents to pay for a meal, were yesterday sentenced to one year each in the penitentiary.

Germany Increases Her Claim

Berlin, June 22.—It is officially admitted that Germany desires to increase her claim of indemnity against China from £12,000,000 to £14,000,000, because the first figure does not include expenses borne by Germany in China from May to July.

For Neglect of Duty

New York, June 22.—The grand jury yesterday indicted Police Captain John D. Herlihy, who was in charge of the Eldridge street station during a recent anti-vice crusade, for neglect of duty.

MET INSTANT DEATH

Clarence Rollins Received Many Thousand Volts of Electricity

Lynn, Mass., June 22.—Clarence H. Rollins of Bangor, Me., aged 21, was instantly killed by an electric shock at the General Electric works in West Lynn, where he was taking a course of instruction in electrical engineering. Rollins graduated from the Maine state university in June, 1900, coming to Lynn later in the year to take a student's course at the electrical works.

Late yesterday afternoon he got upon a platform where several high potential transformers were located to put a belt upon a small motor pulley. Six or eight wires, some carrying a potentiality of 2000 volts, and others as high as 8000 volts, run to the transformers in a cluster, and Rollins, in climbing down, after completing his work, in some manner came in contact with them, receiving the full force of the current through his body.

He fell to the floor, and, although Professor Thomson and others in the factory worked a long time endeavoring to restore him to consciousness, their efforts were unavailing, and it is probable that death was instantaneous. The wires were all insulated, but the tremendous potentiality rendered the insulation of little avail.

Medical Examiner Pinkham rendered decision in accordance with the facts stated above.

"Cold Fingered Girl" Caught

Boston, June 22.—Ruth Moore, colored, aged 27, one of the sleekest "cold fingered girls" that ever operated in this country, was brought to Boston yesterday by Inspector Gaddis. It was only by a determined fight before the governor of Illinois that she was finally turned over to Gaddis. She was arrested in Boston on May 12 and jumped her bail the following day. She is known to the police of many cities.

Barker is once more an inmate of the county jail. He must remain there until $10,000 bail is furnished. His old bail was $5,000. Before him stands a possible seven years' imprisonment and a possible fine of $2,000.

Independence Sailors Drilled

Boston, June 22.—The crew of the Independence were given their first thorough drill yesterday during a six hour spin in the bay, and showed considerable activity in setting and taking in light sails. The wind, however, was not strong, so that the work was not as hard as would have been the case in a good breeze.

The court explained he had admitted the fact that Barker had been told of an assault, not because that had anything to do with the case, but because it was for the jury to determine if the telling of the story had anything to do with making the defendant criminally irresponsible. If they believed the defendant was at the time of the shooting they must convict.

The Dedham Transcript is attempting to defeat the nomination of a Quincy man for County Commissioner by prejudicing all the other towns in the county against this city. If there is any truth at all in the combination plan outlined below we have not heard of it and if one man did suggest it, there is no reason for boycotting this city, and defrauding her of a nomination which rightly belongs to her. The Transcript says:

"It is learned that a few of the politicians of Quincy have been trying to form a combination with the town of Brookline to capture both of the nominations for County Commissioner—Quincy to take the three year term, and Brookline, the one year term. The death of Capt. Wadsworth, who had one year to serve from January, 1902, causes a vacancy which will be filled by the voters at the November election. In addition to this, Mr. Blanchard's term expires this year, and the others will also be called upon to vote for a Commissioner for full term of three years. Mr. Blanchard, the present chairman of the Board, is a candidate, and should be, and we believe will be, renominated. He has proved competent, trustworthy and watchful of the interest of the whole County. His experience and knowledge of County affairs make him a valuable man on the Board, and the County cannot afford to let him be put aside at this time, for this would mean two new men. The duties of County Commissioner, which are many, peculiar and varied, require time and study to become familiar with. With a vacancy existing, which must be filled by an inexperienced man, it would be folly to make a further change, and most unbusinesslike when we have a man with the requisite knowledge and the ability to use the same for the benefit of the County. It is hardly necessary to add that the citizens of Brookline are too honorable to trade in the manner indicated, and in the end will be gainers by depending upon their own merit and the good sense of the County."

We have no criticism of Commissioner Blanchard, unless it be that he was opposed to filling the vacancy this year caused by the death of Commissioner Wadsworth of Milton. It is the intention of the law that there shall be three county commissioners, and a simple way is provided for the filling of vacancies,—an election by the remaining members and the Norfolk county clerk of courts. The three men are together at Dedham at least once a week and usually oftener. It was early in the year when the vacancy occurred, and not one-half of the year has yet passed, and yet Messrs. Blanchard and Hewins decide that they will do all the business without help or interference. Suppose one or both of these commissioners should pass away this summer, complications might arise.

If the vacancy had been promptly filled there would be no danger of breaking in two new men next year. Quincy, however, will be satisfied if there is one new man, if he hails from the "City of Presidents."

We do not know that the Brookline politicians have shown themselves any more honorable than Quincy or Norfolk county gentlemen in general. It looks as though Dedham was holding out a little bait for Brookline, and that there might be trading there to prevent the election of a Quincy man to fill the vacancy.

Serious complications are likely to arise because the City council persisted in appropriating every dollar of the estimated receipts of 1901, and as the Mayor told them, in excess of the limit allowed by law. In the budget the amount of water receipts set aside for the Metropolitan water assessment was $13,983.00, but the assessment as announced today is $22,004.38. The Sewer assessment is also $1,153.03 in excess of the amount set aside, and a State Highway repair tax to add.

These $7,000 or $8,000 additional must be taken from the receipts, and probably park assessments for two years. As the city is limited in the amount it can levy, there may be a pinch in appropriations somewhere.

New Braintree, Mass., observed Wednesday the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary in its history. Was old Braintree invited?

A CREW OF THREE

Started Last Night on the Cadillac For Detroit.

The yacht Cadillac built by the Hanley Construction Co. for a syndicate of Detroit gentlemen headed by John Shaw, to compete in the trials to select a defender for the Canada's cup and the championship of the Great Lakes, left at 5 o'clock last night for her destination. She went under her own sail and was in charge of Capt. Joe Turner, the skipper of the Harbinger in her races with the Beatrice. Mr. Hanley, the designer of the Cadillac, also accompanies her. The third man in the party is Joseph L. Gardner. The boat was provisioned for her long voyage, and carried a cook stove and mattress.

It was intended to try the boat in Massachusetts waters but she was delayed somewhat in building and as her owners were anxious to receive her as soon as possible this was given up.

The Cadillac is the only centerboard boat among those built to compete in the trial races, and her work will be watched with interest inasmuch as Hanley's design for a defender for the American cup called for a centerboard boat.

Nearly 200 people attended the graduation exercises at the Penniman school house. The program from start to finish was exceptionally good. Little Miss Almaira Fuller was flower girl. Gold and white were the class colors; the motto "Do ye next thing."

A large audience consisting of the relatives and friends of the graduating class gathered in the school hall Friday evening to listen to the program which had been prepared for the occasion. The continued case of Augustus Blanden, for larceny of $5 at Quincy, was again continued until July 20.

UP-TO-DATE PLANT

Started by Electric Light and Power Company.

Fully 150 Percent More Capacity Than Now.

Being on Water Front Will be More Economical.

Started Last Night on the Cadillac For Detroit.

Work was commenced this week on the foundation of the new power station to be erected by the Quincy Electric Light and Power Co. on Town river at the foot of Field street. The lot is admirably adapted for the purpose, having a frontage of 200 feet on Town river and near the centre of the city.

The building is to be 80 by 104 feet, of brick and iron, with Quincy granite foundations, and substantially fire proof.

It will contain two rooms, one for the boilers and the other for the engines and dynamos. On one end of the engine room is a seven foot bay, so that the switch board when erected will be flush with the main wall. The stack is twelve feet square at the base and 12 feet tall.

The installation of the plant will consist of two boilers of 200-horse power each, of the water tube type, with room for another set of the same capacity. The engines are to be of the Cross compound condensing type, two in number, one of 250-horse power and one of 450 horse power. There will also be room for another engine of 750 horse power when required.

The three types of dynamos used in the present station will be replaced by a single system, the three phase, the current being generated by two machines having a capacity respectively of 150 and 300 kilowatts or equivalent to a total of 9,000 sixteen candle power incandescent lamps. The dynamos are connected direct to the shaft. This installation will give double the capacity of the present plant on Quincy avenue, with sufficient reserve at all times.

Besides increasing the efficiency of its service, the wharf facilities will enable the company to purchase the coal by cargo, which will be discharged at its wharf.

It is confidently expected by the management that the new plant will be in operation by Nov. 1st next.

The Professional Conversationist.

A woman recently advertised her services for "cheering the nervous and lonesome." There are few employments, new or old, to which women do not aspire, and this is clearly the latest idea in the development of evolutionary womanhood. Moreover, it is perhaps not so absurd as it looks. There are times when we all want cheering up, when it is a great relief for some one with a fund of high spirits to come in and entertain us with amusing anecdotes and reminiscences. But we are not all privileged to have a friend who is bright and cheerful and able to visit us when we are worried and depressed or perchance recovering from a tedious illness. Therefore this woman comes forward, as she would no doubt say, to "fill the long felt want"—that of the professional conversationist, who will entertain us when desired at so much per hour.

An Objectionable Appointment

Pekin, June 22.—The emperor has appointed Na Tung to be Chinese minister to Japan. THE SOCIAL REALM.

Mr. Stephen C. Whorf spent a few days the first of the week with his mother, Mrs. Betsey K. Whorf, of Provincetown.

Mr. Charles A. Howland returned from abroad last week bringing with him his daughter, Mrs. Lister and her little daughter, Olive, of London for a visit. Mrs. Lister has been heartily welcomed by her Quincy friends and is enjoying all the pleasures of her former home.

Miss Mabel P. Blanchard, daughter of County Commissioner Thomas Blanchard of Stoughton and Mr. John Willard Phinney were married at noon Wednesday at the bride's home. The bridesmaid was Miss Marie W. Eastman, of Ashmont, and the groom's brother, Mr. Frank F. Phinney was best man. A large reception followed the ceremony.

Miss Clara Leavitt Baxter of Greenleaf street is home from Vassar college.

Miss Carrie E. Small was in Plymouth yesterday attending the funeral of a dear friend. Miss Small is to continue her residence on Merrymount road much to the gratification of her many Quincy friends.

E. Francis Lincoln and family of Holbrook are at their cottage on Great Hill.

All the young society people and yachtsmen are enjoying ladies day of the Quincy Yacht club. If the weather permits there is to be a sail followed by refreshments and dancing in the evening.

Hon. and Mrs. Henry A. Belcher of Randolph opened their summer home at Sandwich, this week.

Rev. William A. Jones of the Church of the Unity of Randolph, well known to many Quincy people, is to preach at First church tomorrow morning.

The annual meeting of the Alumnae of the Woodward Institute for Girls will be held tonight. It will be confined exclusively to graduates of the school who will be given a reception by Miss Small.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Hicks of Grandview avenue have returned from a short trip to Marblehead.

At the home of Mr. John Jardine, Pleasant street, Milton, was solemnized on Wednesday evening the marriage of his daughter, Miss Beckwith C. Jardine and Mr. Arthur S. Richards of Randolph avenue. The parents of the groom gave the young people a reception on Thursday evening.

A pianoforte recital by the Wollaston pupils of Miss Jean Willard was given at the home of Mrs. John Barbour, Grand View avenue, on Thursday afternoon. The pupils were assisted by the Misses Stickney of Boston, who played on the violin and 'cello. An informal reception to Miss Willard followed the exercises.

Again Denied.

The police deny emphatically that any attempt was made Friday by one of the men under quarantine to escape, and think that the neighbors who saw a man run across the fields followed by an officer must have had a defective vision.

My little son had an attack of whooping cough and was threatened with pneumonia; but for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy we would have had a serious time of it. It also saved him from several severe attacks of croup.—H. J. STRICKLAND, editor, World-Herald, Fair Haven, Wash. For sale by all druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

To Purify Water.

To avoid infection from typhoid fever germs in drinking water during summer journeys or in country hotels or boarding houses Mrs. Ellen H. Richards of the domestic science department of the Boston Institute of Technology advises her pupils to carry with them small vials of crystals of permanganate of potash. This, she says, should be added in small quantities to the glass of drinking water in hotels, on railroads, at the spring, well, etc. The water, after the germicide has done its work, will be of a pinkish color.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs.

Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tenacious hold.

KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cold loose, lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

TALK OF THE TURF MENThe Great American Derby to Be Run June 22.GARRY HERMANN'S CONDITION.*Father Bill's Promising Young Jockey—James R. Keene's Son of Domino Greatest Three-year-old of the Time.Horsemen all over the country are talking about the great 3-year-old champion that the running turf season of 1901 has uncovered. Commando, James R. Keene's great son of Domino and Emma C., is the acknowledged equine hero of the year. Commando is beyond doubt the ablest 3-year-old that has been seen in a decade.The Keene horse showed up strongly during the first part of the season.
Many predictions as to his future were made, but all have fallen short. When Commando recently picked up 122 pounds at Gravesend, N. Y., and covered the circular mile on a heavy track in 1:39 2/5, he performed a feat without parallel in American turf history. Had he been at all hard pressed Commando would have made this mark at least two seconds lower, for he had plenty of power in reserve when he went under the wire. Commando will undoubtedly rank with Salvator and Longstreet before his racing career is ended.Conroy, the winner of the Brooklyn

CHECKERS-CHESS.

A Weekly Problem a New Feature of Saturday Ledger.

Hereafter checkers and chess problems will be a regular feature of the Saturday eight-page Ledger, alternating each week. The solutions will be given the following week. Today it is problem No. 8 (chess) white to play and mate in four moves:

Castle Square Theatre.

In the "comedy of temperament," as Hadden Chambers calls his "Tyranny of Tears," the patrons of the Castle Square Theatre will be sure of a pleasing entertainment during the coming week. Including of this play in the summer season's repertoire by the Castle Square Theatre management is another evidence of the enterprise which is constantly shown in the direction of this play house and adds another to the long list of popular successes which have been produced for the first time at popular prices. "The Tyranny of Tears" illustrates the power of emotional woman over man, and shows in a most amusing way the folly of jealousy and unreasonable suspicion between husbands and wives. The story of the play is told in the lightest spirit and with sprightly, cleverly planned dialogue, while the characters introduced belong to familiar types in social life.

The coming week's production at the Castle Square will include: John Craig, Charles Mackay John T. Craven, Linda Morison, Eva Taylor, Leonora Ginto, Caroline Frances Cooke.

A production of "One of Our Girls" is to follow on Monday, July 1, and the patrons of the Monday matinees will receive souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

In a recent speech Admiral Schley in speaking of Admiral Sampson is reported to have said, "He is a gallant officer and a good man." This generous statement will add much, doubtless, to the favorable opinion entertained for Sampson, but it exalts the man who uttered it in a ten-fold greater degree in the public mind.

BRAINTREE.

By the small gathering of about thirty of the voters and tax payers of Braintree at the hearing held in the lower Town hall, Tuesday afternoon, it is quite evident that there is little opposition to the desires of the Old Colony Street Railway Co.

Since the fire in the Hampton house South Braintree last Saturday morning we have gathered several interesting facts. Mr. W. W. Adams of Quincy, state inspector of fires, gives the opinion that electric wires set the fire. This is the first fire in Braintree caused by electric light wire.

A special vesper service of song will be given in South church, tomorrow night, by a large chorus choir and a male quartet. The chorus has been preparing for the service a number of weeks and a fine musical program will be presented.

Mr. Phinny of Boston has been secured as tenor soloist, and as this is to be the last vesper service of the season, it is hoped that a large number will be present. The chorus has been under the leadership of Mr. Johnson of Boston.

Another well known citizen of South Braintree, John W. Burnham, died at his home on Holbrook avenue, late yesterday afternoon, in his forty-ninth year. His illness has been brief, and his death was unexpected by his many friends. In departing he leaves a devoted wife and two brothers, Henry G., and Prescott. Mr. Burnham has been employed on railroad over thirty years. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 1:30.

Miss M. L. Rogers entertained her pupils from the Southwest school, Thursday morning, at her home on Mt. Vernon avenue.

Little Pauline Orcutt in grade one at the Pond school was the only scholar who did not receive an absent mark during the year.

The employees of the Williams Kneel & Co. and D. B. Closson & Co. shoe factory will play a game of base ball this afternoon at 2:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Bangs have sold their house on South Braintree heights and moved to the home of their son, C. H. Bangs, Town street.

Edward T. Newcomb, while chopping wood at the home of Edwin F. Porter last Wednesday, was hit over the left eye with a flying stick. Dr. Brett dressed his wound.

Oaks A. Bridgman was installed as Receiver at the regular meeting of Blue Hill Lodge A. O. U. W., last Wednesday evening. Deputy Jones of Campello was present.

C. M. Allen fell from a freight car at Milton Monday and received a severe fracture of his shoulder and his arm. He was taken to the Boston City Hospital for treatment. He is now able to about.

Captain Miller and family arrived in town last Tuesday. They brought with them the remains of little Amasa, infant son of George and Maggie Miller, which was interred in the family lot in Pond cemetery.

I. Wendall Gammons has resigned as president of the Braintree club. Mr. Gammons is a well known newspaper man and his business is such that he could not attend properly to the club duties. His successor will be chosen at the next meeting of the club in July. Since Mr. Gammons has been in office the club has gained rapidly.

The Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy occupied the pulpit at the Union Congregational church, last Sunday morning.

Rev. Melvin S. Nash, pastor of the Universalist church, Weymouth, will preach tomorrow on "Christian Timidity."

Rumor has it that the Actives of the Universalists are to challenge the Union Vets to play for a purse of money at an early date.

The barge Woolbury from Perth Amboy, N. Y., with 1200 tons of coal, has been unloading this week at J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

The Union Vets had a grand jollification on their return from the muster Saturday and kept open house for their many friends. They brought home with them the second prize of $50. Ex-President Thomas A. Kelley has attended every muster in which the Union has participated for years, but was not able to attend this muster on account of illness in his family.

The exhibition of Sloyd work and drawing Wednesday afternoon was well worthy of a visit to the school and proved that much time and patience had been expended in perfecting the work. Surely Miss Daley as Sloyd and Mr. Sperry as drawing teacher should feel very much gratified in the result of their labors and praise should be given them for their success in their work.

Mrs. E. Stanwood Hollis won the candle pin prize at the Cochato club, Braintree, on the Seventeenth, with the following three string total: 99, 75, 75—249.

JACK CHINN IS TEETOTAL.

NOT DRINK FOR THREE MONTHS—NEVER AGAIN—QUIT TO OBLIGE HIS WIFE.

The Hon. John P. Chinn, otherwise known as Jack Chinn, at one time a member of the Goebel state central committee for the Eighth congressional district of Kentucky, arrived at the Hoffman House the other night, says the New York Sun. Colonel Chinn is of bowie knife fame, a turfman, race horse starter and Silver Democratic politician. Colonel Chinn always stops at the Hoffman House when he is in town. When Goebel was shot in Frankfort, he fell into the arms of Jack Chinn, who was walking by his side.

Colonel Chinn deplored at the time the use of a bullet. He had frequently given open expression to the opinion that except under extraordinary circumstances where attack or defense must necessarily be made from a distance a gun or a pistol is the weapon of a coward and that a knife is the true emblem of gentlemanly courage. He has the shoulders of an ox. He is one of the most picturesque products of Kentucky life and one of the best known characters on the American turf. He carries a stick on which are 14 notches, described as representing the fate of enemies he has met with the bowie knife.

"Seltzer," said Colonel Chinn when this time came to acknowledge the hospitality, and, while all the others took what they wanted, he told this little story, which he said there was no objection to print:

"All the trouble I ever had in my life came through whisky. In my early days I started with beer, and at various stages of the game I tackled champagne, and then we went on to brandy and whisky, and sometimes it would take a week or two to straighten your humble servant out. Three months ago a little lady down in Kentucky (my wife, if you please, gentlemen) suggested that I had had about all the fun that was necessary in this life, and she asked me not to drink any more. I have regarded her wishes ever since, and I shall never take another drink as long as I am alive. Let all the boys have all the fun they can get out of whisky. There's nothing in it."

There wasn't a man in the crowd who insisted upon his taking anything more than seltzer water.

NEW INDUSTRIAL TOWN.

Indiana Harbor Name of the New Steel Center.

Indiana Harbor is to be the name of a new industrial town on the shore of Lake Michigan just north of East Chicago, says the New York Times. It is to be built and developed as rapidly as the wealthy men back of it can press the work. The Lake Michigan Land company, the Calumet Canal and Improvement company and H. C. Frick, formerly of the Carnegie steel industries, are the principal investors. Their plans have been held in abeyance for several years in an effort they made to get the state of Indiana to build a canal to connect the Calumet river and lake.

Mr. Frick bought 300 acres of land fronting on the lake three years ago. At that time he was having his disagreement with Mr. Carnegie which led to his retirement from the company. The Inland Steel company has 50 acres on the line of the proposed canal and promises to build there a steel plant to cost $1,500,000, of which amount $1,000,000 is to be spent this year.

The Lake Shore road has agreed to build a passenger station at the Harbor to cost $15,000. The Lake Michigan company has 1,300 acres and the Calumet company 5,000 acres of land. Roads are being laid out on it, drainage systems are being put in, and waterworks and electric light plants come next. Four hundred houses are to be built in the new town. All of the eastern trunk lines pass through this territory. The Belt line is convenient, and in addition to excellent freight facilities it is promised there will be a passenger service of only 43 minutes from down town Chicago to the new town.

FALL OF RAIN

Causes Havoc In Elk-horn Mining District

From Five to Six Hundred Lives Probably Lost

May Be Several Days Before Full Particulars Are Known

Much Damage In Ohio

Roanoke, Va., June 24.—An awful flood and cloudburst swept over the Elk-horn coal region in West Virginia. This territory is near the Virginia line, and is about 125 miles west of Roanoke, and some 25 miles west of Bluefields, W. Va.

More than 30 miles of the railroad track of the Norfolk and Western railroad is gone, and reports are still coming to the general offices of this system in Roanoke reporting washouts on the various sections of lines in the flooded districts. One of the breaks in the track will require at least 1000 laborers and several days' work to repair it.

The railroad yards at Vivian, a small town in West Virginia, were completely destroyed, and it is reported most of the town was washed away. North Fork Junction and a few other smaller towns suffered greatly.

Saturday night is pay night in the coal fields, and it is supposed that the coal miners had flocked into the towns in the district to do their trading, and there is no telling how many of them were caught in the flood and drowned. It is stated that the greatest damage so far as known is at Keystone, W. Va., which is only one mile distant from North Fork and about 30 miles west of Bluefields.

Telegraph officials say that the lines are useless between Kenova, W. Va., and Bluefields, a distance of 200 miles. It may be several days before the telegraph lines will be restored sufficiently between these two points to obtain a full report of damage done in that territory. It is stated, however, that every building but one in Keystone was demolished or carried away by the water, and that was a barroom, which stands on a high hill. The normal population of Keystone is about 2000 souls, and there is no telling how many miners had gone into the town Saturday night to swell the population. It is estimated that 200 lives alone were lost at Keystone.

The flood seems to have extended over a vast area of mountain country, and the hundreds of mountain streams, becoming swollen, only served to swell the Elkhorn river until it had assumed large proportions and carried destruction in its wake. Railroad ties, small buildings of all descriptions, telegraph poles, huge boulders and every imaginable moveable thing that came within the sweep of this mighty torrent of maddened waters, went down the mountainous district in a seething, roaring mass of debris. Dead bodies could be seen floating along the valley by those who had gained a place of safety on the high hills.

All day Saturday the rain fell in sheets, and it was evident that if it did not cease there would be a flood and great destruction must result from it, but it was not until darkness had enveloped the coal regions that the great catastrophe was upon the country, and was making a clean sweep of the valley for miles around.

The total loss of life will probably reach 500 or 600, and possibly this number will be swelled when fuller details are obtainable. The telegraphic offices, railroad officials and telephone offices are visited by many eager people, all awaiting some message as to the fate of their relatives or friends.

The Norfolk and Western railroad general offices in Roanoke admit that at least 200 lives have been lost, the town of Keystone destroyed and millions of dollars' worth of property destroyed. It is not known how far back into the mountains the storm extended, and it will be days and perhaps weeks before all the storm stricken country is heard from. The flood has not only damaged the Elkhorn valley, but it is stated that everyone of the 33 Flat Top coal operations or plants has suffered to some extent. Great damage is also reported to have resulted in the Clinch valley section, which extends south from Graham, Va. No lives, however, are reported to have been lost along this valley.

Bodies are being recovered many miles down the stream, where they were washed ashore. When it is considered that the Elkhorn river is so small that it barely furnishes enough water to flush coke ovens when in its normal condition, some idea of the extent of the downpour of rain can be formed. The railroad company now estimates the damage to its tracks between Bluefield and Vivian at over $500,000. There is at least 100 miles of track bordering the river that cannot be heard from, as there is no means of communication intact. Communication has been established as far west as Ennis, this being through about one-fourth of the stretch in the district. Latest reports say that the lower end of the coal fields between Vivian and Gray suffered severely. Fully $1,000,000 damage has been done to coal and lumber interests.

At least 100 freight cars, standing on the road, collapsed, rolled into the flood and are destroyed. Freight trains in transit were overtaken by the flood and some cars washed from the tracks.

Five Killed In Pennsylvania

Pittsburg, June 24.—The storm which broke over Allegheny county on Saturday carried with it deaths by drowning and deaths by electric shock, floods that caused much damage and wind that created terror and havoc. Every part of the country suffered. The rain was very heavy, the wind strong and often the lightning seemed to be playing right overhead. Five persons were killed.

ADELBERT HAY'S DEATH

Brings Gloom to Commencement Week at Yale

FELL FROM HOTEL WINDOW

Circumstances Leading to Accident Will Probably Never Be Known—Secretary Hay is Prostrated, Requiring the Services of Physicians

New Haven, June 24.—Adelbert Stone Hay, consul to Pretoria during the most stirring and momentous stages of the Boer war, the oldest son of Secretary of State Hay, and one of the youngest, as well as the most prominent of the sons of Yale, met a tragic death in this city at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

The manner of the death, its victim, and the fact that the tragedy occurred on the very eve of Yale's commencement, by which the young man, by virtue of his class office, was to have been a leader—these sad conditions have cast an unmistakable gloom over the gladdest of Yale seasons.

Dr. Hinman and Dr. Peters had set out from the island, after seeing the predicament of the yacht and its occupants, and after some difficulty they brought them to land. Medical aid was summoned for Mr. Sloan, but life had been extinct some time before this measure could be taken.

Thomas Sloan was born at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1837. When the Civil war broke out he was one of the first from his town to volunteer, was made captain of a battery and served in this capacity through the war. In 1869 Captain Sloan secured employment with the National Express company in New York, and rose to the position of treasurer, which berth he held until a year ago.

Non-Unionists Roughly Handled

Columbia, S. C., June 24.—The Southern railway shops in this city were attacked by a mob of strikers yesterday. The strikers were after the non-union laborers, and attacked a car in which 20 were sleeping. A man on guard fired both barrels of his gun into the crowd, receiving himself a bullet in his forehead, but the skull was not penetrated. None of the non-unionists was wounded, but they were pretty roughly handled. They were marched several miles and ordered to travel north. Later in the day all but one of the men were brought back to the city by a force sent out from the shops.

Ministers Appear Satisfied

Pekin, June 24.—There has been no meeting of the ministers of the foreign powers here since last Tuesday, but the ministers themselves all profess satisfaction with the present course of events.

Seventeen Victims of Explosion

Paterson, N. J., June 24.—After digging in the ruins of Friday's explosion, work has ceased and it is now believed all the bodies have been recovered.

Frederick Boyle, 14 years old, died at Malden, Mass., of lockjaw, caused by receiving a bullet wound in his left hand.

Rev. Michael J. Burns, a retired pastor of the Roman Catholic church at Nashua, N. H., died at Portland, Me., of heart disease. He was 65 years old.

Rev. Charles A. Shatto, pastor of the Athol, Mass., M. E. church, died suddenly at his father's home in Weldon, O. He was born in Brookfield, O.

During a severe thunderstorm, Mrs. Richard E. Clark of Manchester, N. H., died from fright.

Unrest in Manchuria

London, June 24.—The Daily Mail publishes a dispatch concerning further disturbances at Kharbin in Manchuria. There are large bodies of Chinese troops in the neighborhood, and the railroad has been destroyed in several places.

The staid old Boston Advertiser is quite sensational in writing up a little assault case in which a Quiney man figured.

The new city bath house was patronized by sixty on Sunday. Had not the east wind suddenly sprung up many more would doubtless have used the house. It is understood that the Park Commissioners intend to dump a lot of sand on the beach.

NOT A LOST ART.

Oratory Still Lingers in One New England Academy.

The comments of the Boston Advertiser upon the Adams Academy gold medal exercises in this city yesterday are so outspoken and interesting that they are reproduced in full:

Adams Academy, alive to its great name, is doing a great work and here oratory is not one of the lost arts. True to the best traditions of the early New England academy, the work of the year ended yesterday with the annual prize examination.

Dr. William Everett, master of the academy, and a man of eloquence, invited friends of the academy to witness the work of his pupils, and when the youth "spoke their pieces" as the old phrase runs, in the stone temple here yesterday morning it was apparent that oratory, responding to the influence of Dr. Everett, yet lingers in one N. E. academy with all its original grace.

The gathering was such as might have attended the last day in the academy of long ago. There were friends of the masters, friends of the pupils, sisters, brothers, fathers, mothers and visitors at large, all in their Sunday best to hear the boys orate from the speeches of great masters of oratory.

It was not an elocutionary contest, often nowadays descending into an exhibitionary contest, it is not an exhibition where gestures were labeled, 1, 2, or 3, according as a Burke or a Webster might have spoken, it was not a spectacle of stiff mouting or great words.

It was not utterance measured by the rule and compass but the human voice with naturalness in its tone, conviction in its manner and feeling and fire in its depths. It was the old time eloquence without modern elocutionary tricks.

Every speaker by his intonation, his expression, felt what he said and spoke as he felt and this Cicero called oratory, and those who heard the efforts of Dr. Everett's young orators, rejoiced that here at least eloquence is found at a free expression of the man and not as a hothouse product.

As in days of old when "pieces were spoken," rewards of merit for attendance and scholarship, known in these days as gold approbation cards were awarded by Master Everett to the deserving in the academy, and in addition, prizes in the way of books were given from the master's own hand to those who had won special distinction in special lines of study.

It was an old-fashioned closing of a school, with all its beauty, and to make the occasion ever more in accordance with the traditions of the N. E. academy and school, which knew no graduation, no commencement Dr. Everett injected his own bright, witty and learned comments in the course of the exercises, and like the old-fashioned school master kept the thing going.

A word here and there from the erudite master, only went to emphasize the bold the pupils have on the master's hand and heart.

It was in 1876 that the first gold medal was awarded in this academy, to Josiah Quincy in sustaining the traditions of the Adams family, and from that day to this these qualities have been guides rather than the square and compass in developing the eloquent man.

It was after 11 o'clock when Master Everett introduced the first speaker, after explaining that orators were born and not made that it was the intention of the master to let his pupils display the eloquence in their nature, and let them speak as they felt.

The themes had been chosen with his approval, and the young orators threw themselves into the spirit of their subjects, which made them as creditable actors as orators. Between the speakers Master Everett interjected his playful words on the hard times the judges would have in choosing the winners the troubles they had met in choosing the prize winners in other lines than declamation, and in saying those nice pleasant things which the old-fashioned school master knew how to say and which Master Everett says even better than tradition.

In the giving out of the rewards of merit or gold approbation cards and in the presentation of the book prizes which came half down the programme, Master Everett took as much delight seemingly, as the pupils, and his smile was as bright and happy as theirs.

You may as well expect to run a steam engine without water as to find an active, energetic man with a torpid liver and you may know that his liver is torpid when he does not relish his food or feels dull and languid after eating, often has headache and sometimes dizziness. A few doses of Chamomile Tea and Liver Tablets will restore his liver to its normal functions, renew his vitality, improve his digestion and make him feel like a new man. Price, 25 cents. FORGERY CHARGED.

Supt. Reis of Weymouth Has Second Warrant to Face.

It is understood that a second warrant has been taken out against George J. Reis, superintendent of the Weymouth Water Works, for forgery. Supt. Reis was arraigned in the Quincy court Monday, for the larceny of $1800, and it is said that now the town loss will be nearer $4000, if not $5000.

In 1885 an arrangement was made whereby the superintendent should receive money for water services on certain days. This was done for the convenience of the townspeople. No bond was required of him for this service as he was supposed to turn the money received over to the town treasurer the next day.

"That chap has agoraphobia," said one of two men who had noted the movement.

"Has what?" asked the other.

"Agoraphobia. It means simply an abhorrence of open spaces, and it has a great many victims. Specialists in this sort of nervousness say it takes various forms, some of its subjects having an insurmountable dread of crossing from one side of the street to the other, while others have a disposition to go more than a few blocks from their home.

"Some dread to step across a puddle of water, like the man we just saw. Others dread descending into a well beyond a certain depth, and still others have a fear of getting too high in a building or an elevator. As a rule, these persons are acutely intellectual, so it is no mental disgrace to be a victim of agoraphobia, simply a misfortune that is commoner than most persons suppose."—New York Telegram.

A Celebrated Roman Eater.

Touching the matter of eating, the stories told by the old chroniclers and historians of the abnormal appetites of certain Roman and oriental men of note fairly stagger belief. Gibbon tells of Soliman, a caliph in the eighth century, who died of indigestion in his camp near Chalcis, in Syria, just as he was about to lead an army of Arabs against Constantinople. He had emptied two baskets of eggs and figs, which he swallowed alternately, and the repast was finished with marrow and sugar. In a pilgrimage to Mecca the same caliph had eaten with impunity at a single meal 70 pomegranates, a kid, 6 fowls and a huge quantity of the grapes of Tayef.

Such a statement would defy belief were not others of a similar character well avouched. Louis XIV could hardly boast of an appetite as ravenous as Soliman's, but he would eat at a sitting four platesfuls of different soups, a whole pheasant, a partridge, a plateful of salad, mutton hashed with garlic, two good sized slices of ham, a dish of pastry and finish with fruit and sweetmeats.

Fulfilling the Wishes of the Dead.

Old Lord Foylton, the Scotch Judge, died in 1727. Dr. Clerk, who attended his lordship to the last, calling on his patient the day he died, was admitted by the judge's old servant and clerk, David Reed. "How does my lord do?" inquired the doctor. "I houp he's well," responded the old man, whose voice and manner at once explained his meaning. With tears streaming down his face he conducted Dr. Clerk into a room where there were two dozen bottles of wine underneath the table.

Other gentlemen presently arrived, and, having partaken of a glass or two of wine while they listened to David's account of his master's last hours, they all rose to depart. "No, no, gentlemen; not so," said the old factotum. "It was the expressed wish of the deceased that I should fill ye a foul, and I must fulfill the will o' the dead." Dr. Clerk used to add when relating the story, "And indeed he did fulfill the will o' the dead, for before the end o' there was nae one of us able to bite his ain thoomb."

"If the city is to economize in any way, it certainly ought to find some other department with which to begin a curtailment of expenses. Our High school is fully repaying the city with good results for any outlay in its behalf. We cannot help feeling that it is thoughtlessness which allows these conditions to obtain. Surely, the city fathers, when made aware of the condition of affairs, will make an appropriation for an addition to our present school building."

Difficult Teamming.

The large land digger, which was used by the Fore River Co. to prepare the ground for the foundations for the ships, is now being moved to Houghs Neck, to be used by the Metropolitan sewer contractors. The arm of the crane and bucket were put on one team drawn by six horses; the other part weighing close on to 35 ton was put on another truck and drawn by 26 horses. Considerable difficulty was encountered and in many places it was necessary to use flat iron rails, as the streets were too soft to sustain the weight. It took all day yesterday to go from the gate on Howard avenue to the office. The top of the steam pipe and funnel are 25 feet high.

In the giving out of the rewards of merit or gold approbation cards and in the presentation of the book prizes which came half down the programme, Master Everett took as much delight seemingly, as the pupils, and his smile was as bright and happy as theirs.

It was after 11 o'clock when Master Everett introduced the first speaker, after explaining that orators were born and not made that it was the intention of the master to let his pupils display the eloquence in their nature, and let them speak as they felt.

The themes had been chosen with his approval, and the young orators threw themselves into the spirit of their subjects, which made them as creditable actors as orators. Between the speakers Master Everett interjected his playful words on the hard times the judges would have in choosing the winners the troubles they had met in choosing the prize winners in other lines than declamation, and in saying those nice pleasant things which the old-fashioned school master knew how to say and which Master Everett says even better than tradition.

Buttered Side Up.

One of the stories which Levi Hutchins, the old time clockmaker of Concord, N. H., delighted to tell related to the youth of Daniel Webster.

"One day," said the old man, "while I was taking breakfast at the tavern kept by Daniel's father, Daniel and his brother Ezekiel, who were little boys with dirty faces and snarly hair, came to the table and asked me for bread and butter."

"I complied with their request, little thinking that they would become very distinguished men. Daniel dropped his piece of bread on the sandy floor, and the buttered side of course was down. He looked at it a moment, then picked it up and showed it to me, saying:

"What a pity! Please give me a piece of bread buttered on both sides; then if I let it fall one of the buttered sides will be up!"

After reciting the prosperous condition of the country at the close of the Harrison administration, Mr. Foraker said that when the Democratic party took the helm, under President Cleveland, and "free trade was in the saddle" capital went into hiding, the mills stopped, the mines closed, commerce waned, the balance of trade turned against us, revenues declined and deficits multiplied until they amounted to hundreds of millions of dollars. The national credit became so impaired, he said, that a Democratic secretary of the treasury would not venture to offer a new issue of bonds for sale until he had organized a Wall street trust to guarantee a market.

Discussing the campaign of 1896, the speaker said the Democratic party "threw over its old leaders, nominated William J. Bryan, formed an alliance with the Populists, and, with free silver for a new issue, sought a array class against class, labor against capital, the poor against the rich, that it might retain power. It attacked everything and everybody, embodying in its platform all the heresies of Populism, Socialism, Communism and Anarchy. Property rights, vested interests, law, order—even the courts themselves—were assailed and placed in jeopardy."

The early life of the republic, Mr. Foraker said, was involved in the social and conservative, patriotic men rallied to the support of William McKinley, and by his election saved the country's honor and its institutions. "There is only one intelligent man in America," said Senator Foraker, "who does not now see that the defeat of Bryan in 1896 saved us from irretrievable disaster, and he edits The Commoner."

Speaking of the contentions of 1900, Mr. Foraker said that "once more the people sat in judgment. Their verdict was the triumphant re-election of William McKinley, and a total collapse of Democratic claims, pretensions and policies."

"Of the new questions which have arisen," continued the speaker, "how will the Democratic party deal with them? Does any Democrat know?"

What about a merchant marine, the Nicaragua canal, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines? These are stupendous problems. They are worthy of the highest and best thought of the greatest men of America. If we would continue our prosperity, we must uphold the policies that gave it to us. If we would maintain our national credit and preserve our financial honor, we must keep out of power the party that destroyed the one and threatened the other."

"When men talk about overthrowing the supreme court's decisions in the Porto Rico cases, they are striking also at the Philippines, and are raising issues that not only affect the vital character of our government, but also affect the wages of every man in the United States who earns his bread in the sweat of his face. It is just like the Democratic party to do, for during the last 50 years it has never conceded to the general government any disputed power, nor struck one lick for labor."

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says:

"After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will bear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists."

FORAKER'S CHARGE TO BUCKEYE STATE REPUBLICANS

NEW PROBLEMS BEFORE US

He Considers of Too Great Moment to Be Entrusted to Democrats—Wage Earners Will Be Benefited by Our Acquisitions in the Far East

Columbus, O., June 25.—The Republican state convention convened here yesterday afternoon, with a large attendance. Charles Foster, ex-secretary of the treasury, ex-governor, ex-congressman, and for many years a delegate-at-large to the national convention, was defeated for member of the state central committee, because of his opposition to Senator Hanna.

While the Hanna men captured all the committees they gave special attention to the committee on credentials, as well as to the state committee.

Senator Foraker was temporary chairman of the convention. He spoke as follows:

"Our approaching election will be the most important held this year in the United States. It will be distinctively national in both character and importance. The administration of Governor Nash stands absolutely without criticism. There is no issue with respect to it, and none can be made.

"The legislature chosen this year will be charged with the duty of electing a United States senator and redistricting the state for representatives in congress. If the next legislature should be Democratic reduced representation would be fastened upon us for the next 10 years, making a net loss to us of not less than 25 votes in congress for the next decade."

"It is this fact that gives the campaign upon which we are entering its national character, and thrusts upon us the discussion and consideration of national policies and national questions, and it is for this reason that every vote cast in our state next November will be a vote for or against the administration of William McKinley, just as certainly and emphatically as though he were again our candidate this year."

"It is this fact that gives the campaign upon which we are entering its national character, and thrusts upon us the discussion and consideration of national policies and national questions, and it is for this reason that every vote cast in our state next November will be a vote for or against the administration of William McKinley, just as certainly and emphatically as though he were again our candidate this year."

"We have unexampled prosperity, but a Democratic wave would blight it. We have added new lustre to our arms, and new glory to our flag, but an application of Democratic policies would tarnish the one and dim the other. We have expanded our limits, advanced our jurisdiction, and assumed new responsibilities, but Democratic ascendancy at this time would mean abandonment, retreat and national humiliation."

After reciting the prosperous condition of the country at the close of the Harrison administration, Mr. Foraker said that when the Democratic party took the helm, under President Cleveland, and "free trade was in the saddle" capital went into hiding, the mills stopped, the mines closed, commerce waned, the balance of trade turned against us, revenues declined and deficits multiplied until they amounted to hundreds of millions of dollars. Train Went Over Embankment

Pittsburg, June 25.—A passenger train was wrecked at Monaca last evening and at least two persons are dead and probably 30 hurt. The dead are J. W. Cunningham and Larry Black, both train hands. Two men taken to a hospital will die, but the train will run again, with other interests to be involved.

Stampede of Strikers Unlikely

Friendly, Pa., June 25.—With a strike of 2600 iron workers of the Reading Iron company, and 1000 employees of the Reading railway on its hands, the city is in a state of expectancy as to what the railroad shop hands will do when the time set by President Baer will expire for the shop hands to return or be discharged. The prospects are that the fight will be long drawn out, with other interests to be involved.

TALL CORN

doesn't come by accident. A fertile soil and careful cultivation are necessary to produce the towering stems and heavy ears.

Yet the farmer who understands that he can't have a healthy crop without a feeding and weeding, seems to think that he can have a healthy body without either care or culture. But the body is built up just as the corn is, by the combination of the seven chemical elements on which vitality depends. And what weeds are to the corn, diseases of the stomach and nutritive systems are to the body. They divert the necessary food supply from the proper channels, and the body becomes lean, sickly and ill-nourished.

The proper digestion and assimilation of food is a primary factor of health. By healing diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery increases the digestive assimilating power, stimulates the action of the blood making glands, and sends to every organ of the body the rich red-circulated blood on which physical vigor and vitality depend.

I took two bottles of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for stomach trouble. Mrs. Clarence Carnes, Esq., of Taylorstown, Loudon Co., Va., "If I did not feel so good, I would not take any more. I can eat now, anything. I am so well satisfied with it, I hardly know how to thank you for your wonderful medicine. I tried a whole lot of things before I wrote to you about your medicine, how it had cured his wife. I thought I would try a bottle of it. Am now glad that I do not have to pay what I would have done if it had not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the bowels and cure constipation.

An Eventful Trip from Quincy Neck

Quincy Druggist.A Reception Follows at Residence of Bride's Parents.

A great many Quincy people, friends of Mr. Edward James Murphy, the popular druggist, went to Boston this morning to be present at his wedding being united in marriage at ten o'clock at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross with Miss Mary Elizabeth Webber, daughter of ex-Chief and Mrs. Lewis Webber of Bond street, Boston. The ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Maurice Lynch, of Weymouth, cousin of the groom. James T. Whelan presided at the organ and was assisted by the choir of the Cathedral and friends of the bride.

In the bridal party were Miss Mary E. Keyes of Boston, as maid of honor; Miss Mae H. Cunningham of Brockton and Miss Catheryn C. Ready of Brighton as bridesmaids, and little Arline Murphy made a sweet little flower girl. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Albert A. Murphy of Quincy, and the ushers were: William J. Webber, Walter L. Webber, and Joseph A. Webber of Boston, brothers of the bride; Dr. W. T. McCarroll of Brockton; Francis Temple Parks and John J. Malley of Boston.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Lewis P. Webber, was beautifully gowned in white Liberty satin de chine trimmed with accordan plaited chiffon and Duchesse lace. She wore a veil of tulle and carried a bouquet of Bride roses. In the pictureque contrast was the maid of honor in pink Liberty silk, trimmed with Point lace. She wore a pink flower hat and carried a large bunch of sweet peas.

The bridesmaids were in pink mousseline de soie trimmed with point lace and wore large pink flower hats and also carried pink sweet peas. Little Miss Murphy was daintily in white accordan plaited Liberty silk and carried a basket of flowers tied with ribbon. The bride's attendants wore pins of pearls presented by the bride and the groom presented the ushers with gold shepherd's crook pins set with pearls.

Roses were used as decoration at the church, there being large bunches tied with ribbon at each pew. At the home of the bride where a reception was held immediately after the church ceremony tropical plants and cut flowers were used in profusion.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Webber, and the maid of honor and bridesmaids.

The happy couple leave tonight for New York, Atlantic city and Buffalo, and on their return are to make their home at 91 Independence avenue, this city, where they will receive friends after October first.

The cigars were the sequel, and the names of the teachers are safely in the keeping of Officer Goodhue.

The invention has been patented in all the leading countries.

Moonlight Sail.

The young lady clerks at City Hall were the guests Tuesday evening of Commodore Baker of the Wollaston Yacht club. The evening's programme included a sail in the harbor on "Capt. Burgess' racer," the "Theodora" and a return home in the moonlight. It was a delightful evening for a sail. A cool refreshing breeze prevailed, and it was not long before Boston lights were reached. The moon spread its bright rays over the water on the return and the scene was beautiful beyond description. Supper was served on board the yacht and the evening was one long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to have received and accepted the invitations for the sail.

Supt. Parlin Accepts.

A meeting of the clergymen comprising the board of directors of the Woodward Institute was held Tuesday afternoon. At this meeting it was announced that Supt. Parlin of the public schools would accept the position of superintendent of the school and he was then elected as the agent under the direction and control of the directors.

The matter of a new principal of the school was discussed at length, but no definite action taken.

NEW SUBMARINE BOATS.Novel Proposition Made to the Navy Department by Simon Lake.

The naval board of rear admirals gave a hearing recently to Simon Lake, the designer of a new submarine vessel, who has made a novel proposition to the navy department, which has now been taken under consideration, with likelihood of acceptance. Instead of trying to force his design on the navy by congressional enactment Mr. Lake has asked the advice and criticism of the department on his plans and specifications, with a view to beginning immediately the construction of a service boat at his own expense.

The obstruction caused by the feed cables, wires and branches of trees were successfully overcome by good judgment and careful manipulation. The sand holes and culverts were successfully passed over by the aid of channel irons, but even with the irons the load in some places sank into the ground about 2 feet. It is expected that on Washington street no difficulty will be encountered. That a great deal of interest is taken in the task is evinced by the attendance of a large and daily increasing number of spectators. The work is being done under the supervision of a superintendent of the Metropolitan Sewer Commission. The team and men are supplied by R. S. Brines & Co. of Boston. The load was lightened yesterday by taking out 5 ton of ballast and about 3 ton of water.

LATER—At noon it was at Chubuck street. Wires supporting the trolley are a source of danger, one rail road man was slightly shocked and knocked over. The digger is being taken to mosquito woods. The spectators number about 150.

A Good Smoke.

Tuesday for once at least Officer Goodhue smoked good cigars, and his friends who happened around smoked with him. The cigars came to him in a satin lined box and accompanying it was a note which read as follows:

"For Company's Sake: from the two midnight ramblers, to Officer Goodhue, and please think of us when smoking."

The story is a simple one, two young lady school teachers went to the beach last Sunday. They started for home in the evening. An accident delayed their train and when they arrived in Neponset it was past midnight and the electric lights in Quincy had long ceased to throw their bright rays and it was as dark as Egypt. Undaunted they started for home, using the middle of the street for safety. Near Squantum street they saw a shadow and commenced to run. That shadow was Officer Goodhue and he ran after them. He soon overtook them and as they were about to collapse they saw his brightly polished brass buttons. Then it was that they thanked "the Lord it was a police man."

The new apparatus consists of shutters, applied on the starboard and port sides, about one-fourth of a boat length from the stern. These can be opened and shut by means of a lever applied on the deck and placed so as to be easily maneuvered by the helmsman. The shutters consist of two quadrilateral steel plates, with special packing boxes in the so called shutter houses. Experiments showed that when the launch was going at full speed it could be stopped in 15 seconds at half a boat length by reversing and extending the shutters. Consul Nelson says the apparatus may be applied to any steamer. The invention has been patented in all the leading countries.

BOAT STOPPING DEVICE.Apparatus to Prevent Collisions Between Vessels.

A resident of Sweden, Count K. A. Posse, has invented a boat stopping apparatus which will prevent collision and facilitate the maneuvering of large vessels. Consul Nelson, at Bergen, says in a report to the state department that recent experiments have been made on a steam launch accommodating 160 persons, with an engine of 30 indicated horsepower, making nine knots an hour.

The new apparatus consists of shutters, applied on the starboard and port sides, about one-fourth of a boat length from the stern. These can be opened and shut by means of a lever applied on the deck and placed so as to be easily maneuvered by the helmsman. The shutters consist of two quadrilateral steel plates, with special packing boxes in the so called shutter houses. The Way the Boy Put It.

Different sermons may be preached from the same text, and there may be more or less of truth in each of them.

"Here is an account," said Mr. Morse, pointing to a paragraph in the evening paper, "of the way in which a boy was saved from drowning by a mastiff which belonged to his cousin. The boy ventured too near the edge of the treacherous bank, lost his footing and fell into the lake. The dog dashed in after him and succeeded in pulling him out."

"There," said Mrs. Morse, turning an accusing glance upon her 10-year-old son, "that shows how dangerous it is for a boy to go too near the water!"

"Why, mother," said the boy in sorrowful astonishment, "I thought father read it because it showed how perfect my safe I'd be wherever I went if you'd only let him buy me a big dog."

Mr. Morse coughed and became dimly absorbed in the quotations of mining stocks.

Too Much.

"You say you think your boy has too great an appetite?" said the physician to an anxious mother. "Do you realize how much a growing boy can eat?"

"I should think ought to if anybody does," returned the boy's parent.

"I'll just put the case to you, doctor."

"Where we were, up in the mountains, the waitress would come in and say to my boy, 'We have fried fish, steak, liver and bacon, baked and fried potatoes, rye biscuit, muffins and dry toast.'

"And that boy Ned would say, 'I'll take it all, please—and some eggs.'"

BOOMERS IN DISTRESS.Desolation on the Border of the Kiowa Reservation.

Thousands of people—men, women and children—camping on the border of the Kiowa-Comanche-Apache reservations in Oklahoma, awaiting the opening of that land to settlement, are in destitute circumstances, according to Dr. J. J. McKenna, who has just returned from the scene. Dr. McKenna, City, said:

"Twenty thousand men, women and children are massed on the border, and half of them are utterly destitute. At least 5,000 of them have been there a year and a half. They went with small sums of money and have made nothing since they arrived."

these principles in spite of the threats of reorganizers. Those who argue from the standpoint of expediency will not have influenced with the voters, because no one can say what is expedient. We may deserve to win and yet lose, but it still remains that to deserve to win is the surest road to success."

General Manager Johnson of the Norfolk and Western railroad was seen at North Fork Junction, where he is personally supervising the work, and he said the loss was much less than accounts heretofore given out. He said that if nothing unforeseen occurs his force of 3000 men will have the road open for traffic on a single track by tonight, and that freight trains would be running in two or three days. It is believed that the road will be put in its normal condition within two weeks.

Mr. Johnson says he will send local trains with supplies from Bluefield to Vivian today, and relieve any feeling that may exist. This statement seems remarkable when the condition at Keystone is considered, with a half mile of track gone and the river filling the old track space for several hundred yards.

The distance between Keystone and the point reached yesterday by local trains is 20 miles. This section is covered with debris and ruins, but only two bridges are gone.

General Boggs and Colonel Hudson of Governor White's staff visited the destruction yesterday. They went to Keystone to ascertain if the destitute needed help from the state. They were informed that Keystone would care for the destitute.

Many newspaper correspondents went into the center of the devastated district yesterday, and it was evident that the facts were not exaggerated so far as property loss is concerned.

The number of drowned is now placed at 60 persons. There has been some interruption to the wires between Ronoke and Bluefield, and only one wire has been in use. A telegram from Bluefield says there are no important developments there. Bluefield is the great shipping point for the Pocahontas coal coming east.

An explanation of the reports first cir-ulated that great masses of human bodies were to be seen floating around in the water is that a graveyard between

North Fork Junction and Keystone, which towns are about a mile apart, and at which point the storm was very severe, was washed away.

The loss to the coal operators will approximate $400,000, outside of the delay at the mines in loading, etc. The property loss by many private parties is very heavy and cannot be estimated at this time. It is thought it will reach the million dollar mark.

The people of the storm-swept section appear terrorized and their experience is so intense that they are really helpless as far as work is concerned.

In the section of severe thunderstorms each flash of lightning and peal of thunder is enough to cause panic.

The dead, as fast as found, are being buried and many times the spot is disturbed.

Professional Legislator Expelled

Melbourne, June 26.—Amid scenes of excitement in the crowded galleries the federal assembly yesterday expelled Mr.

Finlay, editor of a labor organ, for republishing in his paper the article from

The Irish World of Dublin, violently attacking King Edward, which caused the seizure of the last mentioned periodical.

Fatal Street Duel

Seattle, June 26.—John W. Considine,

a local gambler, and ex-Chief of Police

Meredith met on the street yesterday and began shooting at each other. Meredith was killed. Meredith was recently compelled to resign his office as chief of police, after trouble with Considine and other local gamblers.

Two Victims of Murderer

Ithaca, N. Y., June 26.—Donald Minton, 80 years old, who was assaulted by James Churchill, a week ago Sunday, died yesterday as a result of his injuries. Churchill assaulted and killed his wife at the same time. Minton

Drift of Opinion.

Last night the most elegant and costly automobile in Hartford was backed up into an alley-way near The Times office, and a ragged, dirty and very drunken tramp was gently lifted and pushed up to the richly upholstered seat. Two handsomely uniformed policemen kept watch over him, while a third guided the shining electric chariot away from the scene of the tramp's apotheosis. The drunken ones will possibly spend a part of the warm season in jail, but he has the consolation of knowing that as soon as he can achieve another case of helplessness

in the streets of Hartford he will be again hoisted with all his rigs

and his filth, into an electric equipage fit for a king, and given a free ride through our streets, receiving as much attention meanwhile as the most dis-distinguished stranger who ever passed through this town.—Hartford Times.

South Dakota is going to have humane treatment of animals, if it has it with a club. The legislature during the past session passed a law prescribing that "a system of humane treatment of animals, shall be taught in the schools, and that not less than ten minutes twice a week shall be devoted in all public schools to instruction in regard to the laws of the state on the subject and the presentation of such information as the board of education shall decree. Furthermore visitation is not to be permitted in connection with the study of physiology. It is doubtful if any number of statute laws with penalties attached or any amount of formal "instruction"

on the subject will serve to arouse the enthusiastic sympathy and support in behalf of the dumb animals that is resulting from the voluntary formation of Bands of Mercy among the school children in many states of the Union.

When the Band of Mercy movement strikes South Dakota the children will find it a pleasure to be kind to animals

—New Bedford Standard.

These island neighbors of ours that we have lately taken under our protecting wing may teach us a thing or two of value in return for what we shall do for them. Here is a delegation of five men from the convention of the Federal party in Porto Rico coming to Gov. Allen and offering to co-operate with the administration in any way for the benefit of the country expressing the belief that the time has come when petty quarrelling and bickering should cease and all Porto

Ricans unite in the support of the endeavor to secure honest government which it was recognized the United States was making. It is to be borne in mind that these Federalists were the political faction which have so strongly opposed Gov. Allen's administration, and, in fact, every move of the United States representatives. They were in the minority, and when they found they could accomplish nothing by direct action they resorted to the methods of obstruction and made themselves a drag upon the car of progress. They have come to their senses and see the foolishness of their purpose declaring that henceforth they will be helpers rather than hinderers.—Haver-

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

On Her Feet

All day long and racking with pain from her head to her heels. That is what many a self-supporting girl must experience. On those days each month, when in other circumstances she would go to bed, she might still be at the desk or counter and struggle through the day as best she may.

Headache, headache, and other pains caused by womanly diseases are perfectly cured by Dr. Piero's Favorite Prescription. It cures the cause of these pains. It establishes regularity, dries unfeeling brains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes women strong and look young and look good.

PAIN ALL GONE.

"I have taken Dr. Piero's Favorite Prescription with the greatest satisfaction. I am now fit for all sorts of work. Westmoreland Co., Penna. "Your Favorite Prescription has cured me of uterine trouble, which I had for many years, and now I am entirely trouble-free. I can honestly say I work a whole day and not get tired, and never taking Dr. Piero's medicine I always feel well. I suffered with headache all the time but have no headache now since taking your medicine. I have been cured of troubles that I suffered from for years, and the best part is the state will not cure me."

The Piero's Common Sense Medical Advice, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 25 cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. E. V. Piero, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mortgagee's Sale.

HAPPY GRADUATES

Forty-four Per Cent to Continue in School.

Our Grammar Graduates Number 356.

Music a Feature of Program--
Address by Prof. Perrin.

The annual graduation exercises of the grammar school were held Thursday afternoon at High School hall.
They were as usual of an interesting nature. The attendance was large and was only limited by the capacity of the hall. Parents like to see their children graduate and the heat of the day in no way acted as a bar to the attendance.
High school hall is peculiarly well adapted for exercises of this kind, as the open doors and windows on all sides make the free circulation of air possible and Thursday it was not uncomfortable.

It was but a little after the advertised hour when the sound of the drum caused all eyes to look toward the main entrance. To this stirring music the classes from the different buildings marched in and took the seats assigned them. Each school carried a silk banner which not only designated the school but assisted the audience in locating them seated.

This banner is a new idea and made a very pretty effect. It was a blue field with gold braid on the sides and deep gold fringe on the bottom. On the face of the banner in gold letters was the name of the school.

The program was as follows:

March; music by Mary L. Hunt, Q. H. S., 1901 and Hannah O. Litchfield, Q. H. S., 1903, pianists; Walter G. Field, Q. H. S., 1904,

Steam Power on Tracks.

The land dredger, which became stalled on Coddington street Wednesday night, will make the balance of its journey under its own steam.

Thursday the heavy machine was jacked up and a track placed under it. Today a short section of track was laid in front of the machine and it was moved along.

It was rather slow work, as it was necessary to keep changing the track from the rear to the front of the machine.

Still Hotter.

Today is another record breaker for heat, the temperature at noon being 98 degrees, or two degrees warmer than Thursday at the same hour. There is not as much air today as yesterday which makes it seem even warmer.

"Americans who go abroad must expect to be robbed right and left," said a young man who recently returned from a brief European tour. "One expects to be held up for all sorts of tips, but when the beggars follow you home you can't help feeling a sort of admiration for their ingenuity."

"I went over on one of the Red Star Line boats, and the first thing I did on landing at Antwerp was to go to the cable office and send a message to my mother announcing my safe arrival. I paid the toll and thought no more about it until I got home, when among my mail I found a letter from the Antwerp operator, addressed in care of my mother, saying that through an error he had not charged me enough for my cablegram sent on such and such a date, that he had been obliged to pay the difference out of his own pocket, and as his salary was very small and he had a large family and all that sort of thing he felt sure I would reimburse him."

"The amount was a trifling one, and I did send him a foreign money order. I have since learned from experienced travelers that I had been made the victim of a systematic form of robbery and that scarcely a cablegram is sent from the other side unless it is of a business nature that is not followed by some such plea from the European operator."

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, June 29.

Sun rises 4:10 a.m.; sets 7:25.

Moon sets 2:17 a.m.; rises 9:30 p.m.

A remarkable feature of the warm wave which has covered the country generally east of the Rocky mountains during the last few days has been the record-breaking temperatures which have been reported in extreme northern parts of the country. There are no present indications of a break in the warm weather. It will be fair in New England, except in eastern portions, where showers will occur. Along the coast fresh southwesterly winds will prevail.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein, for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will bear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

A RECEIVER IN CHARGE

Dawes' Prompt Action In Case of Seventh National Bank

LOANS REACHING $1,600,000

To a Stock Brokerage Firm Were Secured by Collateral Considered of a Doubtful Nature—Heavy Debit Balance at Clearing House

Washington, June 28.—Comptroller Dawes yesterday ordered the closing of the Seventh National bank of New York city, and appointed Forrest Raynor, national bank examiner, temporary receiver. Later the comptroller made the following statement:

"Comptroller Dawes stated that on Tuesday he received word from the national bank examiner that Henry Mar-quand Co., had recently become indebted in a sum approximating $1,600,- 000 to the Seventh National bank of New York, which was secured by collateral of a doubtful nature. Upon receipt Wednesday of further information regarding the nature of the collateral securing this loan, he sent a telegram to E. E. Thomas, president of the Seventh National bank, as follows:

"I have just received information from the national bank examiner that Henry Marquand & Co. have loans of large amount in your bank, approximating $1,600,000. Unless promptly and satisfactorily assured that this loan will be taken up and cash therefor put into the bank by Saturday night, June 29, I will appoint a receiver for the bank.
Please convey your board of directors and announce this to them."

"In explanation of the conditions imposed, the comptroller states that while advances had been made by the directors to the bank they had been made on the credit of good securities owned by the bank, but that no such advances affected the bank's solvency while the Henry Marquand paper remained. It was necessary, therefore, for him, in the performance of his duty, to promptly impose these conditions before further withdrawals of deposits were made.

The comptroller stated that the Mar-quand loan is partially secured, and it is hoped that the loss to depositors will not be large."

Postmaster Van Cott of New York city has been instructed to deposit the money order funds for the present in the sub-treasury at New York, and a new depository, to take the place of the suspended bank, will be determined on by the postmaster general. The postmaster is not permitted to let the money order balance in the bank exceed $300,- 000.

Causes Leading to Suspension

New York, June 28.—The Seventh National bank opened for business as usual yesterday, but at 10:45 the doors were closed by Cashier Adams, who reported that the bank had suspended.

The decision to close the bank was reached after a protracted conference in the directors' room, participated in by the new president, E. R. Thomas, ex-President Kimball, and several other members of the board.

Among the institutions having close business relations with the Seventh National bank is the stock brokerage firm of Marquand & Co.

At the clearing house the following statement was made: "This morning the Seventh National bank came in debtor $644,108.95. When it was found that the debt balance was so heavy the clearing house committee communicated with the officers of the bank, and the clearings were held back 30 minutes.
At 10:45 a. m., W. N. Cromwell, Edwin Gould and Mr. Thomas, president of the bank, came into the clearing house, and informed the committee that, in view of their heavy debit balance, and for other reasons, it was considered wise that the bank should temporarily suspend."

The Times says today that from sources having absolute knowledge of the facts, it was ascertained beyond peradventure that Samuel Thomas advanced the $983,000 to settle the debit balance of the Seventh National bank at the clearing house on Tuesday. It was also established that $200,000 was advanced by Edwin Gould to help the bank in the strait. What security the lenders secured could not be learned.
Ex-President Kimball, it was stated, owned 60 shares of the bank's stock.

Rejected Employers' Terms

Dayton, June 28.—In a report to the state department, Consul General Stowe, at Cape Town, advises United States manufacturers who send boots and shoes to South Africa not to attempt to duplicate the English products, as the latter has not the style and symmetry which characterizes the American article.

Strikers Shot by Troops

Rome, June 28.—During a conflict between Italian troops and the agricultural strikers at Ferrara, the soldiers fired a volley into the crowd, several of whom were killed. A Socialistic paper asserts that six of the strikers were killed and 20 wounded, but it is believed that these figures are exaggerated.

Rejected Employers' Terms

Dayton, June 28.—The Molders and Metal Polishers' union last night refused the final proposition of the National Cash Register company to its striking employees, and the company at once decided to operate the large concern as an open shop in the two departments affected.

Union Must Be Recognized

Reading, Pa., June 28.—The proposition of Frank C. Smith, vice president of the Reading Iron company, offering an increase of wages to the 2,900 striking iron workers and puddlers, to receive $4 a ton, will be rejected. The leaders say they will not accept the offer unless it involves the recognition of the union.

Irish Charged Partnership

London, June 28.—After a prolonged debate and considerable disorder, the house of commons in committee this morning adopted the coal tax by a majority of 86. The Irish members accuse the chairman of committee of participation in omitting to secure a proper hearing for the opponents of the act.

Weighty Problem to Come

Havana, June 28.—La Lucha, referring editorially to the annexation movement, warns its agitators to proceed slowly, saying that premature action will prove harmful to themselves and that their efforts should be saved for that time in the future when the problem of annexation comes up.

BULLET GLANCED

Patrick McCann Did Not Kill Wife,
but Succeeded as a Suicide

Worcester, Mass., June 28.—Patrick McCann, aged 54, a dyer in the employ of the Worcester Bleaching company, fired three shots at his wife in a restaurant where she is employed as cook, yesterday afternoon, and later shot himself in the right temple. McCann died at the city hospital later, and Mrs.
McCann had a bad, though not dangerous wound, on the top of her head, the bullet glancing and not penetrating the skull. Mrs. McCann had been living apart from her husband seven weeks, and had refused to go back to him, on account of his drinking habits.
Yesterday McCann apparently sought her out with the purpose of shooting her, as he had threatened to do, and opened fire upon her immediately she came in sight, but one of the three shots taken effecting.

Russell Is Very Feeble

Boston, June 28.—Former Congressman John E. Russell of Leicester, a Democrat of state and national reputation, returned home yesterday on the Ivernia from a two years' trip through Europe. His appearance has changed considerably on account of poor health during his absence. Being asked as to his health, Mr. Russell replied: "I am still pretty feeble, but am in practical the same condition as two years ago."
Mr. Russell is under strict orders from his medical advisers not to interest himself in anything of an exciting nature.

License Commissioners

Taunton, Mass., June 28.—Mayor
O'Hearn has served notice on the board of license commissioners that the chairs preferred against it have been removed from office. The board will go into court for a test case. The charges were that the board had granted licenses to persons complained of or convicted of violating the liquor law during the last year, and also of unlawfully issuing beer and druggists' licenses.

Union Men Serve Notice

Holyoke, Mass., June 28.—The paper manufacturers have received a formal notification from the iron workers that all of the plants in Holyoke and South Hadley Falls are expected to be unionized on or before July 8, at which time the recent agreement goes into effect.
The communication says that after that date no member of that lodge will work in a mill where non-union help is employed.

Umlian's Life Prolonged

Boston, June 28.—The executive council yesterday took up the petition that Francis Umlian, the Northampton murderer, be respite until the constitu-tionalities of the electrocution law could be settled. The council voted to recommend that the governor grant a respite, which was accordingly done. He had been sentenced to execution during the week beginning July 7.

To Be Left to Convention

Pawtucket, R. I., June 28.—At a semi-annual meeting of the Rhode Island Mulespinners' association, held in this city last night, the matter of securing a nine-hour day was given much consideration. It was voted to refer the matter for further consideration to the national convention to be held in October.

Part of Cargo Thrown Overboard

Pasque Island, Mass., June 28.—The schooner Hanna F. Carleton of Machias, Me., lumber laden, struck on Sow and Pig ledge yesterday. There was a dense fog at the time, and the vessel went on her side, being driven ashore. Six men were lost, and the crew were rescued by the crew of the W. S. Williams, one hundred and twenty-six (126) feet, of Haverhill, Mass.

Fourth of July

FREEDOM'S ANNIVERSARY.

Flutter the flags from school and steeple;
Thrill the air with the shouts of people,
Eager the day of their pride to greet.
Children hall it with gleeful voices,
Old men dash as its thunders break,
Telling aloud how the land rejoices
From the pine to the palm for freedom's sake.

Freedom, over the stormy waters,
Brought by a handful, faint and few,
Birthright now of our sons and daughters,
Hallowed by valor and long years through.
Freedom! Lord, let the four winds sing it!
Freedom! Soft let us breathe its name.
Far and wide let the strong bells ring it;
Wide and far be its lofty fame.

Lift we now a triumphant chorus;
God be praised both by great and small!
Ever his dear love watcheth o'er us;
Still his banner is over us all.
Through the desert he safely led us;
Into the promised land we came.
In our want and our griefs he fed us;
Ever, forever will we praise his name.

Dawn the day in summer splendor—
Day that dawned amid blood and tears,
Back in the time when no surrender
Brave men made unto coward fears.
To the last they fought for the nation's weal,
Who therefromward have this their glory—
Tempted and tried, they were true as steel.

SPOOK'S FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

"I don't know, Marsden, how we can ever worm any sort of a confession out of her," said Lawyer Darke, with an accent on the pronoun. "If any comes, it will be because she is start'd into telling it. A good scare, like a cyclone or an earthquake, might possibly do the business. No amount of persuasion or threats ever will, that's evident. Meanwhile I don't see what we can do for Miss Laura only to wait and try to conceive some new plan."

Speaking these words, Lawyer Darke descended the stairs of an old tenement, followed by Harry Marsden, and stepped out upon the hot pavement of the street.

It was the afternoon of July 3. On the stairs down which the two men had just descended crouched the small figure of a boy whose size indicated about the age of 7, but whose face said 12. The latter told the truth. The boy was emaciated to the last degree that one could hope to find him out of his bed, and his face was the color of chalk. His colorless lips were thin and delicate, and his eyes, large and burning, and sunk in dark shadows, looked spectral in the gloom of the dirt stairway hallway.

The lawyer's words concerning the cyclone and earthquake had been meaningless to the author of them, but they were not meaningless to Spook. He knew the story of the pretty, pale factory girl in the attic room, penned up with an old woman who did not hesitate to abuse her every day and many times a day—that is, he knew that the girl called the old woman "grandma" and that "grandma" claimed that that relationship existed between them; knew also that there had been late rumors afloat to the effect that Laura was not the old woman's granddaughter, that there was some money somewhere that ought to be Laura's and that the old woman could straighten things out if she would, but that this she refused to do. This much of a story had been roughly woven together in the neighborhood. How near to the truth it came none of the denizens actually knew, but Spook accepted it, gathered it carefully together and placed it in his mind as a sort of an environment about the words dropped by the lawyer.

Meantime Lawyer Darke went to his office to try and devise some new scheme for the benefit of his client, and the client, Harry Marsden, started for home. The real known facts from which these two hoped to develop a case of interest and good to all concerned were these:

About a year previous Harry Marsden had come into possession of a fortune from an uncle, one Joseph Marsden, who had died in England. The will had stated that Harry was made heir, as the nearest of kin known to be living, but that there was a possibility of the existence of a stepdaughter, the child of the uncle's wife by a former marriage; that if this girl could be found within the space of ten years half of the property was to be hers. The girl, the will continued, was born in 1874. At the age of 3 years, only a few months after the marriage of Joseph Marsden to the young widow, the child had suddenly disappeared, stolen from her bed in the night while the nurse slept soundly, and no clew had ever been obtained as to her fate.

The certificate of her birth had also been taken at the same time, for what reason was not known. The young mother had been frantic with grief, and her husband had employed the best detectives and spent money freely, all to no purpose. His wife died a year later. He continued the search as long as he lived at intervals and had his will drawn as described, with the additional testimony that one Harriet Carey had been a deadly and vindictive enemy of his wife and that he knew of no other person who would be likely to have stolen the child. The reasons were for this enmity he did not state. As for a description of the girl, he could only mention one marked peculiarity which would be certain to remain as she grew up, and that was that while one of her eyes was a deep violet blue the other was more of a dark gray. This was hardly noticeable unless one observed closely, but remained a distinguishable feature by which she might eventually be identified.

It did not seem very likely that after 18 years of search this discovery would ever be made. But handsome Harry Marsden, in the honesty of his heart and his love of justice, fervently hoped that it might have been left for him to bring the discovery to pass. Harry was 26 and, strange as it may appear, had never been in love. He declared that the reason was that he had never met his ideal, not considering that the matter of an ideal has nothing to do with the divine passion as experienced on this mundane sphere.

However, after he had received the inheritance before mentioned, he had come to wonder if a girl with a blue eye and a gray one could be beautiful. He had heard of the great beauty of his uncle's English wife and wondered if the daughter resembled her, always providing that she was living. After long deliberation he had come to the conclusion that the phenomenon of two colored eyes would prove rather a charm in a fair face than otherwise and had contracted the habit of looking carefully at every strange girl he met who might be about 20 years of age.

How he did eventually meet the girl need not be related here. It was one of those accidents—as we count the workings of never erring fate—that happened every day. The world is full of them. So Harry looked into the delicate face, saw one blue eye and one gray eye and saw his destiny.

Elated at the discovery (of the eyes, not knowing yet of the other), he at once saw his way clear to the end, or thought he did, but found obstacles in the path. Mrs. Carver declared that the fact of the peculiar eyes was only a coincidence, that the girl was the daughter of her son and that no one could prove that her name was other than Carver.

But fate was working in a manner of her own, and this brings us back to Spook, crouching on the stairs, perching, perchance plotting and planning, as boy never planned before. There was something in the air, a force revolving about, which must be captured, put in the form of a thought, developed into a suggestion and thence to the execution or act that would bring about a desired result, a result beneficial to Laura Carver.

A boy from the street threw a firecracker into the stairway. It fell close beside Spook. It hissed threateningly, then exploded triumphantly. A moment before he would not have heard it any more than he heard the noises of the street. But now his mind was at a point where the explosion came to him with terrible force, and he arose suddenly and made a motion across his eyes with his clawlike hand like the brushing away of cobwebs.

He looked down at the spot where the spent firecracker still glowed dully in the gloom; then he passed quickly down the stairs and into the street. He did not stop there, but hastened away out of the vicinity and up the street. He wanted some money. There was no money in that wretched place he called home, or if there was it was not for him. The drunken aunt who was supposed to care for him had no money to waste on Fourth of July fun for the boy. She had sold herself long ago for what she could get. She would sell the boy himself at the same price, only there was no buyer. That there was money in the world that would be long buy him from her and place him in the niche designed for him she did not dream. Neither did Spook. He only knew that with the explosion of the firecracker in the dark stairway something had come to him like the sudden opening and shutting of a door through which he had seen clearly to the end.

But he must have some money. Spook had never begged upon the street. His spectral face would have been an effectual one for the purpose, but there was something within him which absolutely refused to do the degrading act, and no amount of threats had forced him to it. But tonight he must have money. Not very much, but money, and goaded on by his affection for the beautiful Laura he laid aside all scruples so strangely imbedded in his mind, strange because of his environment and experience.

He paused where the light from an electric tower fell upon his thin, ragged form and on his phantom face, with its burning eyes. He put out his hand to the first well dressed passerby and said a little warily:

"Please give me some money. I want some fireworks."

The man paused and looked curiously at the child.

"So it isn't bread you want? It's fireworks? Well, you are honest, anyway. Here's half a dollar."

Spook was stupefied at his instant and tremendous success. He tried to grasp his gratitude, but the man had walked briskly away. So he crossed to a store where fireworks were sold and invested the whole amount in firecrackers, a few matches and one good sized Roman candle. With his treasures clasped closely in his arms and his heart wildly beating he hastened toward home. It was after 10 o'clock, and he congratulated himself on making his purchase before the store closed for the night.

The night seemed to grow hotter, the atmosphere more dense and suffocating. The old woman slept a little fitfully and dreamed bad dreams. Sometimes she turned and tossed and fancied that she saw a pale, beautiful woman's face, sharp with anguish at the loss of her only child.

The bells tolled 12. At the signal there was an uprising of sounds from the great city. Voices rose up in wild cries, gunshots snapped and crackled, and cannon reverberated heavily through the night. But these were without. They interested the people generally. They made no impression on the old woman individually. She slept on, until crash! rush! bang! roar! crash! and she awoke to find that the end of the world had come and that she was already in pandemonium. The place was filled with the smoke of powder. The crackling and crashing were terrific. The fearful noises came from everywhere—below, above, all about her. The smoke grew dense and enveloped her. It suffocated and choked her.

The pledge in its practical part is conservative. It does not pledge us to the impossible. It simply says, "I will strive to do." Striving is impossible to no one. Every one can strive. We may not always be able to do what Christ would have us do, but we can always strive to do it, and by God's grace we can usually do it. This clause leaves no room for the excuse that we cannot keep the pledge. We can keep it, for who is there that cannot strive to obey Christ?

The pledge in its practical part is comprehensive—"Whatever." Whatever is a broad, comprehensive word. It includes all the will of Christ, not a part or a fraction of it. Yet it is not too comprehensive. It is Christ's own expression—"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Many would gladly do a part of Christ's will, but not all of it. This, however, is not sufficient. It is all or nothing. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

The pledge in its practical part is Christine, "Whatever He would like to have me do." We pledge ourselves to strive to do that which Christ would have us do, not what we would like to do or what society or fashion or custom would like to have us do. We surrender our wills to the will of Christ. We declare that "it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." Our time, our talents, our possessions, are all laid at the feet of Christ. They are no longer to be used for ourselves as we would like to use them, but to be used for Christ as He would have us.

Our willingness thus to do "whatever He would like to have us do" is the test of our love to Christ. "If ye love Me," says Christ, "keep My commandments." Obedience is the test of love. "Obedience is better than sacrifice." Obedience founded upon faith and love is the open sesame to heaven. "Trust and obey, for there's no other way to be happy in Jesus but to trust and obey."

All Things Work Together For Good.

The way is very long, and for myself I can only say that I feel I have but begun to understand a few things. The way is long and steep, and neither I nor any man will traverse it all. The full truth is for omniscience alone. And yet we must not talk in a despairing way. We must not speak in mock humility of our absolute ignorance. We are not absolutely ignorant. Some things we must hold with the utmost tenacity. We are certain that reason is at the heart of things; that what Helle calls "the terrible doctrine that God is dead" is not true, but lie. We must hold that all things work together for good. This at least is the conviction that has sustained me in man: a weary hour.—John Watson, Professor of Moral Philosophy, Queen's University, Canada.

The Time and Place For Prayer.

The value of prayer does not depend on the place in which it is offered or the times in which we call upon God. The spirit that leads us to observe the times of the church's appointment or of our own appointment and the promptings of a heart filled with gratitude and love as they rise spontaneously is to be sought and appreciated. Let us not be concerned very much as to the time when and the place where we shall offer our devotions, but be deeply concerned about having the spirit of true, earnest worshippers.—Rev. Robert H. Williams in Presbyterian.

mist over his soul. Already he dreams of rambling in green fields and beside running waters. He sees Laura in her own happy home, with a tall and handsome husband waiting on every glance, and he, poor Spook, has a place and a share near her. He smiles more sweetly. He is growing well and strong, and the old life of misery is all slipp'd away and being forgotten. His sojourn has traveled on ahead a little way and opened up to him in his dream the real and happy future dating from that Fourth of July morning when he celebrated.—Detroit News-Tribune.

The pledge has its devotional side—"I will make it the rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day." It also has its ecclesiastical side—"I will  support my own church in every way." It has, furthermore, its practical side—"I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do."

This is one phase of the pledge that has been particularly emphasized and yet one that will always need to be. Contemplation is not all of religion. Devotion is not the goal of Christianity. Contemplation must lead to consecration. Devotion must develop dedication. It is, after all, the doing of God's will in Christ that determines the character of our faith and love for Christ.

The pledge in its practical part is conservative. It does not pledge us to the impossible. It simply says, "I will strive to do." Striving is impossible to no one. Every one can strive. We may not always be able to do what Christ would have us do, but we can always strive to do it, and by God's grace we can usually do it. Hot Wave Has New England Firmly In Its Grasp

MANY PERSONS OVERCOME

Three Deaths and Numerous Prostrations Reported at Boston—Mercury Climbs Above the Hundred Mark in Many Places

Boston, June 29.—Yesterday's weather was the hottest of any June day since the weather bureau was established, but the official maximum temperature of 97 degrees does not begin to indicate the extreme heat experienced in many parts of the city, where the thermometer ranged from 100 to 105 in the shade.

A good breeze during the earlier morning hours greatly tempered the sun's rays, but it diminished as the day lengthened, and in localities where it did not penetrate at all the air was like that from a furnace. As a result 20 cases of prostration were reported, three of which proved fatal. James Francis, a helper on a brewery wagon, succumbed to the heat, and died at the city hospital. Michael Ryan, 42 years old, was found dead in bed last night, due to the heat, as he came home Thursday night overcome from its effects. Luigi Lasco, an Italian, died at the Massachusetts general hospital yesterday.

In addition to the above, 16 cases of persons suffering from exhaustion were treated at the various hospitals, some of whom were sent to their homes later in the day, while two unfortunate received medical aid at police stations, and were able to go to their homes soon afterward.

John Kenney, who is under treatment at the city hospital, is in a critical condition, and is likely to die.

In many places exposed to the sun's rays' work was entirely suspended during the greater part of the day, otherwise the casualty list would have been greatly lengthened.

With the setting of the sun a fair breeze again sprung up, and the temperature dropped to 80 by 11 o'clock.

The mercury reached 107 in the shade at Athol, while in the sun the figures reached were 138. Several prostrations occurred.

Michael Neville, employed in Cobb's morocco factory, Peabody, Mass., died from the excessive heat.

The mercury reached 100 in the shade and 130 in the sun at Clinton. About 1200 employees of the various contractors on the Wachusett reservoirs were forced to quit work. There were a number of prostrations. In the mills the temperature in many rooms was up to 125. The mercury went to 109 at Methuen. Work was suspended in the street department.

One death and three cases of prostration were reported at Lawrence. Nicholas Hartman was overcome by the heat and was removed to a hospital, where he died in a short time. Michael Hennessey, Thomas Rogers and an 18-months-old girl were also overcome. The latter and Hennessey are dying. The thermometer registered 125 at several points in the city.

All outdoor work was suspended by the street and water departments at Waltham on account of the heat. The thermometer registered 104 at 2 p.m. Six employees of the American Watch company's factory were overcome. Two letter carriers were also prostrated while upon their routes.

There were seven prostrations from heat at Lynn. The mercury was 98 in the shade.

Fred Burke, a painter, was overcome by the heat and fell from a ladder through a window into a building at Brockton. The official record of the weather in that city was 94, although in many parts of the city the mercury ran as high as 100.

Five women employees of Seaman's toothpick factory, at Morrisville, Me., became unconscious from the intense heat, and it was decided to close the factory for the time being.

In northern Vermont it was the hottest June day for 25 years, with the thermometer at 104 at 3 p.m. Work in the fields had to be suspended for several hours during the day.

Ernest Stillings, a messenger in the employ of the American Express company, was sunstruck at Rochester, N.H., but may recover. The mercury reached 103 in the shade at Rochester.

New York Feels It

New York, June 29.—New Yorkers experienced the hottest weather of the year yesterday, the official thermometer registering 92 degrees at 4 o'clock, while street thermometers ran up as high as 100. In Greater New York eight deaths and 50 prostrations from the heat were reported up to midnight.

Three Fatalities at Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, June 29.—While the maximum temperature yesterday was but 88, and the minimum 70, three deaths and several prostrations were reported. The dead are: Mary Dermo, 15 years; Gilbert Logan, 65, and Robert Houston, 51.

RACERS DAMAGED

Two Participants in Seawanhaka Contests Will Be Laid Up

New York, June 29.—Two accidents, one of them serious enough to put the crack racing schooners Amorita and Quisetta out of racing for a few days, marred the second day's racing of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht club at Oyster bay yesterday.

Just before the signal for schooners was given, while maneuvering for positions, the bowsprit of the schooner Muriel tore a large hole in the mainsail of the Quisetta. Both schooners continued the race.

The course was a triangle of 11 3-4 miles. The schooner Amorita had covered the first leg of three miles, and four miles of the next leg. They had overtaken the second mark, owing to the hazy weather, and had to gybe to get back to it. In doing so the Amorita's main boom swung over and struck the Quisetta's bowsprit, breaking it off short and dragging the latter yacht by its broken spar, carrying away her topmast also. Luckily no one was injured on board. Mr. Lippitt of Providence, her owner, said that he would not be able to race again for some days. The Amorita's boom was sprung, and she withdrew. The sloop Mira protested the effort for fouling her at the second mark.

The greatest evil threatening this country today is monopoly in private hands." Mr. Johnson thought that the cure for monopoly was an equal rate of taxation for all classes of men.

Death's Sudden Summons

Indianapolis, June 29.—Judge William A. Wood of the United States circuit court died suddenly in his apartments early this morning. The judge was not feeling well last night, but, paying little heed to the sickness, passed the matter lightly, and prepared to retire. About midnight, however, he spoke to his wife, and declared that sharp pains had seized him in the left breast, in the chest and in the shoulders. Judge Woods asked his wife to remain in the room with him. A moment later he asked her for something in an adjoining room. Mrs. Woods rose to procure the article and left the room, returning a few seconds later. When she came back he was dead.

Senator Involved In Timber Suit

Helena, Mont., June 29.—The United States yesterday commenced another suit against the Bitter Root Development company, the Anaconda Copper Mining company and the Daly estate, to recover over $350,000 for timber claimed to have been illegally cut upon the public domain. This makes suits for $750,000 that the government has pending against the same persons. A deputy marshal has gone to arrest a Missoula man, who is alleged to have been the agent for Senator Clark in the land disputes, for which 75 or more entrymen have just been indicted.

Suicide Indirectly Due to Panic

New York, June 29.—Irving C. Smith, 58 years old, an inventor of a number of steam and electrical engines, committed suicide yesterday by shooting. The Northern Pacific panic in Wall street caused a firm which was to have financed one of his inventions, an electric motor, to abandon the project, and this made him despondent.

Good Swimmer, but Was Drowned

Malden, Mass., June 29.—Chesley Ross, 24 years old, went to Lake Quinsigamond, in Wakefield, last night, boating. Ross, who was a good swimmer, went in bathing, and soon after he entered the water he was drowned. He had apparently been seized with cramps.

Police Protection Needed

Moncton, N.B., June 29.—Shediac citizens are agitating for police protection because of recent attempts of some midnight prowler to enter several houses. The citizens are arming and searching for the miscreant, but there is yet no trace of him.

Fast on a Ledge

Rockland, Me., June 29.—Schooner Willie, with coal, went on Drunkard's ledge, and will probably be a total loss. Steamer Bodwell tried to pull the vessel off the rocks, but could not budge her.

You may as well expect to run a steam engine without water as to find an active, energetic man with a torpid liver and you may know that his liver is torpid when he does not relish his food or feels dull and languid after eating, often has headache and sometimes dizziness. A few doses of Chamomile root tea, or Tonic, will restore his liver to its normal functions, renew his vitality, improve his digestion and make him feel like a new man. Price, 25 cents, ample free at all druggists.

MARQUAND & CO. ASSIGN

Sequel to the Failure of the Seventh National

ON BEAR SIDE OF MARKET

Had Recently Been Forced to Cover at a Heavy Loss—May Be Several Days Before a Statement of the Firm's Status Can Be Given

New York, June 29.—The announcement of the failure of Henry Marquand & Co., bankers and brokers, the name of which firm has been connected with the embarrassment of the Seventh National bank, had been anticipated, for the events attendant upon the closing of the Seventh National bank had let in strong light upon the confidential affairs of the concern.

Assignment was made to Frank S. Smith, without preferences or statement of assets and liabilities.

The railroad guide shows that Frank S. Smith is vice president and general counsel of the Pittsburg, Shawmut and Northern railroad. Henry Marquand is first vice president of the company.

Inquiry at the local office of the Pittsburg, Shawmut and Northern railroad, as to the effect of the failure upon the railroad, brought out an assurance that there would be no disastrous consequences as far as the railroad was concerned.

"But didn't Marquand & Co. finance the railroad?" was asked. "Oh, yes," was the reply of the official, "but they have the bonds, and we have the money." He added that Marquand & Co. had merely handled the bonds of the road, but did not control it.

Marquand & Co. have been at times recently heavy sellers of stocks, and were very aggressive on the bear side of the stock market. One day they sold fully 50,000 shares of stock, breaking prices two to three points; but after their selling ceased the market rallied, and they were forced to cover at a heavy loss. They repeated these operations from time to time.

The firm consisted of Henry Marquand, who is son of Henry G. Marquand, and Frank B. Poor, son of the former president of the National Park bank. It was said that the elder Marquand had advanced $250,000 to help out his son's firm.

The admitted embarrassment of the firm in connection with the Seventh National bank failure resulted in the wholesale calling in of the stocks loaned to them for delivery, and they were obliged to buy heavily in the open market to cover. At the same time, the actions of the clearing house committee and of the comptroller of the currency put official disapproval on securities in which the firm had large investments, and which figured as part of the collateral in the loan of $1,600,000 from the Seventh National bank, and which caused the suspension of the bank. The disturbance in the stock market, caused by the embarrassment and which depressed prices, worked to the firm's advantage so far as it showed profits on their contracts, but the blow to their credit deprived them of resources to take advantage of these conditions.

Assignee Smith said that he had been going over the books and lists of securities of the firm with counsel of the assignee. He said that probably several days would elapse before a statement of the firm's status could be given.

Mr. Smith said that the firm had many excellent securities, and added that he had called personally upon the creditor interests, requesting them not to sacrifice any of the firm's securities, which they held as collateral for loans. In all cases, he said, he had received assurances that no such sacrifices would be made.

Mr. Smith further said that under the circumstances he did not think any of the creditors would suffer.

What Barker's Friends Will Do

Arlington, N.J., June 29.—Thomas G. Barker's friends definitely decided at a meeting held here last night not to take an appeal from the verdict of the jury which found him guilty of assaulting Rev. Mr. Keller. The energies of those who have interested themselves in the case will be devoted to caring for Mrs. Barker, and in securing a rebate of a part, at least, of Barker's five-year sentence.

Got Off Ocean's Highway

St. John's, June 29.—Steamer Algerine, which has just returned from the scene of the wreck of the steamer Lustania, off Cape Ballard, reports that during a fog Thursday another large ocean steamer approached the Newfoundland coast, running straight for the shore. The stranger was almost on the rocks when the Algerine blew a whistle of warning, which caused the endangered vessel to reverse her engines and head seaward. Another large unknown steamer had a similar experience Saturday.

Independence at Provincetown

Provincetown, Mass., June 29.—The Independence dropped her anchor in Provincetown harbor last night, after a beautiful run across Massachusetts bay, as the first leg of her course around Cape Cod to New London. For nearly an hour and three quarters she sailed at a speed of over 15 knots with sheets started, and about six points off the wind.

To Make Further Tests

Washington, June 29.—The Krupps works have applied to the navy department for the test of another group of their new armor plates for warships, a group of thin plate having failed to pass a test held at the Indian Head proving grounds, a short time ago. The department has acceded to the request.

Shock and Fall Didn't Kill

Camden, Me., June 29.—John Flannery, in the employ of the electric lighting company here, caught hold of a live wire with both hands while at work on a pole yesterday. His hands and shoulders were severely burned, and he was badly shaken up by a fall of 20 feet, but he will probably recover.

Storti Out of Death House

Boston, June 29.—Warden Bridges has removed Luigi Storti, who is under sentence of death for the killing of Michele Calucci, from the death cell to a cell in one of the buildings in the large yard. Storti has been confined in the death house since March 28. He is in fairly good health.

Namouna Reaches Colon

Colon, June 29.—The Colombian gunboat Namouna, formerly an American pleasure yacht, arrived here yesterday. The boat has an Italian crew and English officers. She carries eight Hotchkiss guns.

My little son had an attack of whooping cough and was threatened with pneumonia; but for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy we would have had a serioius time of it. It also saved him from several severe attacks of croup.—H. J. STRICKFADEN, editor, World-Herald, Fair Haven, Wash. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

Relative to the failure of city governments, Hon. A. E. Pillsbury said in his address at Newburyport this week: "It is idle talk of wholly eliminating the influence of political parties from any form of municipal government. Make the representative body so broad that no scheme can be carried through it on party lines or from partisan motives and the government will be as free of partisan influences as any government can be where political parties exist. The patriot is he who sets his country right and stands in the way when it goes wrong. If this is not patriotism the Revolution was not."Mr. Pillsbury believes in a single council and lays down two rules or principles which must govern efficient municipal organization:"1st—the whole executive power and responsibility should be vested in a single head."2d—all legislative power should be vested in a single council, so large as to be a real representative body."With the executive power should go the whole power of appointment and removal of subordinate officers saving only that heads of executive departments should hold not by fixed terms but until removed."The powers of the council being wholly of a legislative character, lie in determining the amount and general destination of all appropriations and of the tax levy or loans required to meet them. This once disposed of the duty and power of the council is left to the executive. Few meetings early in the year would be enough. The council being thus relieved of the necessity of constant attendance and attention throughout the year public-spirited citizens may be induced to accept membership in such numbers as to make it a truly representative body of the whole people, restoring to city government the vigor and direct-ness of control."Quincy has its single council and the separation of the Legislative and Executive departments, also a large council and is well governed but the latter is not large enough to be representative or to properly protect the taxpayers. A council of 50 or 100 would be more representative, and then a few meetings or "town meetings" in the spring should do the legislative business of the city."Crooks—Playfair" is the heading of a wedding in one of the Boston dailies today. Impossible!

Drift of Opinion.

"A new terror to the driver or pedestrian on the country roads has loomed up in the person of the fellow with the fast motor carriage. The bicycle scrocher and the driver of the 20 road horse are bad enough to dodge, but the auto in the hands of men not entirely great on the handling of machinery is a very devil on wheels.The driver who sees one of these machines bearing down on him at a thirty-miles-an-hour clip can't tell whether it will pass him or smash into him, and he's pretty sure it will rattle his steed. All he can do is to hang on to the animal, breathe a prayer and hope for the best. When the auto hizzes past in a cloud of dust and perhaps of steam he can thank his lucky stars that one more danger is avoided in life and can face the onslaught of the searching cyclist with comparative equanimity. — Brockton

HOME-BUILT SHIPS.

Fore River Company Marks Revival of Shipping Interests.

That remarkable craft, the first seven-masted steel schooner, will be a Boston-built vessel as well as Boston-owned. She is designed by Mr.
B. C. Crownshield, who planned the Independence, and the contract for her construction, it is announced, has been given to the Fore River Ship and Engine Building Company of Quincy Point. She will be the largest merchantman ever launched on Boston Bay, except the famous Donald McKay clipper Great Republic.
The vessel will cost about a quarter of a million dollars ready for sea.

The Boston Journal says, editorially,
This is the first large merchant work undertaken by the Fore River Company, which is building government cruisers and battleships. It marks the beginning of the revival of the merchant shipping interests of Boston Harbor. Last autumn, when the Frye Subsidy bill was pending in Congress, the Fore River Company received inquiries for some sixty merchant craft, contingent on the passage of the subsidy legislation.
Southern and Western filibusters, aided by the organs and attorneys of foreign steamship lines, prevented action on the Frye bill last winter, or long before this our harbor would have been the seat of a thriving and important industry.

If the Frye bill passes next winter, as is expected by our shipowners and merchants, Boston shipyards, instead of one order will have scores. This legislation means more to Eastern Massachusetts than to any other part of the United States. A yard like that on Fore River, which can build first-class battleships and 3,000-ton steel schooners, can build any merchant craft that floats. Massachusetts Congressmen who fail to support a protective shipping bill by voice and vote, will have a very awkward explanation to make to their constituents.

Y. M. C. A. Fete.

The elm-bordered avenues of the historic Dorothy Q. mansion, known more recently as the Butler place, are to take prominence in the evening promenade concert and out-of-door fete, to be given next Tuesday evening for the benefit of our Y. M. C. A., by those working on the Building Fund committee. These broad, smooth avenues, lighted with colored lanterns, and further by the full moon which is promised for the occasion, will be very attractive to young and old; music is to be added by an orchestra. June is an ideal month for enjoyment. The old mansion is fine in its architecture, and this occasion should draw from neighboring towns, as the place is on electric lines and the grounds all about are favorable for social enjoyment. The party is called a promenade concert and the object one that we all are interested in.
The time set to begin is half past seven o'clock.

Life Insurance Payments.

The Insurance Press reports the payment of $32,336 of life insurance by old-line companies to Quincy people during the year 1900, to which is to be added $4,296 paid to Atlantic people.
The sum of $41,005 was paid to Weymouth people, including $11,000 and $10,000 on life of Benj. S. Lovell, and $10,000 on life of George J. Richards.

The Braintree payments amounted to $10,000, Randolph to $4,162, Holbrook to $2,082, Hingham to $3,530 and Milton to $2,348, the latter including $29,848 on life of George H. Chickering.

The sum of $15,400,000 was paid in Massachusetts in 1900 against $14,800,- 000 in 1899. New York and Pennsylvania were the only states to lead Massachusetts.

Thirteen Candidates.

Manet encampment of Odd Fellows'

the R. P. degree in the presence of delegations from Brockton, Weymouth, Dorchester and South Boston. Deputy Mitchell and suite were also present.
A turkey supper, ices and fruit lemonade were liberally served.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says:
"After using the Pain Balm for a few days
my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born again,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will bear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

Park Murder Case.

Francis Cahill, suspected of killing
G. W. Park of Quincy, was arraigned in the Dorchester municipal court yesterday morning on the charge of manslaughter. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 till July 5, when the case will be aired, says the Boston Advertiser. Cahill was later committed to the Charles street jail in default of bail.

Shortly after the case was called Capt. Hunt of station 11 asked for a continuance of a week. Cahill rose and addressed the court thus: "I'm an innocent man and I have an invalid wife and five children, and I want to go home and care for my family. I don't care for myself. If Capt. Hunt had done as I asked him yesterday in summoning John Smith, another heraldic driver, I could prove my innocence in five minutes. Instead of that he has taken Smith to police headquarters to tell his story there.

"Your Honor, I object to this case being continued. I want to go to trial now, this afternoon or tomorrow morning, at the latest. I do not want to be kept in the cell down stairs today or until my case comes up, because I nearly died there yesterday from the heat."

Judge Churchill then asked about ball and Cahill said if they let him out he could get $10,000 bail.

Capt. Hunt said: "I am holding Cahill because I think he knows something about the affair. I am desirous of clearing up the mystery as soon as possible. I don't think there will be another arrest for the present."

Capt. Hunt of station 11 with Inspector McKay was in Quincy yesterday following clues which it is hoped will further strengthen the chain of evidence around Cahill.

Rear End Collision.

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident on the street cars this morning caused by a rear end collision. The cars contained two picnic parties, one bound for South Weymouth and the other for New Downer Landing. The forward car stopped at the Wharf street turnout at Quincy Point to permit a Quincy bound car to pass. The second downward car was a short distance behind. The motorman of this car was unable to bring his car to a standstill and it banged into the forward car. The front windows were smashed by the shock and the passengers thrown forward in their seats. The car was not moving very fast and this doubtless prevented a serious accident.

Three children received slight injuries, and one little girl had her lip cut, requiring several stitches. One lady also received an injury to her forehead. The girl and lady were taken to Dr. Bushnell's office and the rest of the party proceeded on its way.

Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral of George Prout was held Friday afternoon from his late residence on Granite street. The services were very largely attended, delegations being present from the Grocers' association and from the Granite Manufacturers' association. These two organizations sent floral tributes, and there were also many other flowers sent by friends. The services were conducted by Rev. George A. Strong. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

The Old Colony Association of Universalists held a grove meeting at Ridge Hill Grove, South Hingham, Tuesday, July 9. Rev. Frank O. Hall is among the speakers.

BON VOYAGE.

LARGE FAREWELL PARTY TO MR. ANGUS MACINTOSH.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by a large party at the handsome residence of Mr. Andrew McIntosh on Franklin street Friday night. The occasion was in honor of his brother Mr. Angus McIntosh of Quincy street who is to sail next week for Scotland. Mr. McIntosh has been in poor health for the last few months, and takes the trip to his native land in the hopes that rest and change of climate will restore to him his usual vigor and health.

As a mark of the esteem in which Mr. McIntosh is held, his friends and associates decided to gather together and tender him a joyous goodbye and also to wish him a bon voyage and a happy return to this country again.

Mr. Andrew McIntosh kindly offered the use of his fine home for the occasion, and there Mr. McIntosh with his wife were unwittingly enticed to meet their friends.

The party was, notwithstanding the extreme heat, a complete success, the commodious house and extensive lawn with its trees and flowers afforded all the charm and opportunities so desirable for a large party.

Dancing and other lively exercises were enjoyed. Miss Belle McIntosh, who is an expert at coon songs, sang and delighted all present; Mr. D. Drummond, Mr. John McIntosh and Mr. Gauld were also much appreciated as singers. Mr. Carlo Baratta's string band was in attendance and rendered excellent music to song and dance.

In the course of the evening Mr. McIntosh was formally bade goodbye and presented with a small token, the gift of his friends who were present. Mr. McIntosh was not aware of what the small parcel contained but he was sure that it was something for which he could safely thank the donors which he did very willingly.

Refreshments cooling and various were liberally served during the evening and not till the big yellow moon had gone well over the blue vault did the happy company break for their homes.

Among those present were: Mr. Frank Madison, Mr. Gus Luntz, Mr. Charles Kalbert, Mr. Algol Dalby, Mr. Neal Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. A. WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW
Many Reasons Why Business Men
View Situation With Confidence

New York, June 29.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: It does not follow because bad banking methods have caused one of the smaller New York banks to close its doors, with attendant circumstances that create discussion in Wall street, that general business is in any way affected by or at all responsible for the trouble. The country is undeniably prosperous, and with prospect of an abundant harvest to supply our own needs, and increasing European deficiencies, the situation is viewed with confidence. A few more labor disturbances have arisen, and others have been settled. Some disagreements in the coal region at times assumed a threatening aspect, but the troubles have been local, and do not affect the mining industries. Reports from the country speak of a continued active movement of merchandise with the jobbing trade, and embracing nearly all lines.

The fiscal year closes with conditions in the iron and coal industry in marked contrast to the situation at the corresponding date in 1900. This year difficulty is experienced in stopping machinery long enough to make necessary repairs, prices are well maintained and steady, without unreasonable inflation, while a successful season makes it possible for many concerns to avoid labor controversies.

Footwear forwardings from Boston have averaged over 100,000 cases weekly for two months, raising the total for the half year to 2,358,521 cases. Exports to Great Britain are a most satisfactory factor in the present movement.

Wheels at textile mills are no longer generally idle. Improvement in all branches of this industry has come with a rush, and manufacturers are making up some earlier losses. Gains are more conspicuous in the woolen goods division, because depression had lasted long and had been more severe.

"Certainly it is true that the acts of congress do not provide for the disbarment of an attorney who commits a crime; nor do more than provide that a minister of the gospel shall be stripped of his cloth, or that a great moral or social leader, under like circumstances, shall be dethroned and cast out in disgrace. Congress has no function in such matters. Society has its own way of protecting itself; its own system of rewards and punishments.

"The petitioners' disbarment, therefore, was no part of their sentence. It was the commendable act of the Pennsylvania courts to purge its bar of those who had brought discredit and shame upon it. Your parson could not restore them to practice. This is a matter solely for the courts which rejected them.

"All the consequences of crime are disagreeable and distressing. These petitioners were lawyers. They well knew the high ideals of their profession and that no self-respecting court in a law-respecting community would tolerate upon its roll, and thereby hold out to the world as worthy of confidence, men who, with deliberate design, abandoned the high traditions of their profession, and entered into a criminal conspiracy to corrupt the currency of their country and seduce officers of the government into a betrayal of their trust.

"The suggestion that the high-minded judge who imposed the merciful sentence in this case could not have considered the possibility of their disbarment needs no comment."

Petitions of Ingham and Newitt

Are Refused

As to the Status of Two Prominent Pennsylvania Lawyers Who Were Implicated in Counterfeiting Cases—Disbarment Was Deserved

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

Mr. Bowser is so regular in his comings and goings that when he comes home four hours ahead of time the other afternoon Mrs. Bowser knew that something had occurred to break his programme. She didn't have to ask what it was, as he had a kodak with him and at once proceeded to explain. "I thought I'd come home and get a few snap shots at the landscapes around here."

"You've gone and got another kodak," she exclaimed.

"Is it of the baby and the goat?"

"Yes."

"Then you drop it like a hot potato or I'll come down on you as big as a house!"

"But you got one a few months ago, and don't you remember what happened? All the pictures you took were cross-eyed and wrong end up, and you

MR. BOWSER'S WOES.

HE BUYS A KODAK AND GOES OUT TO TAKE SNAP SHOTS.

After Several Failures to Get a Good Picture He Finally Caught a Group in a Picturesque Pose, but the Negative Was Never Developed.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

He moved around and made ready, and in another minute the button would have been pressed but for an interruption. A woman suddenly appeared in the doorway beside the goat and called out:

"Now, then, what's going on out there?"

"I'm about to take a picture with my kodak," replied Mr. Bowser.

"Is it of the baby and the goat?"

"Yes."

"Then you drop it like a hot potato or I'll come down on you as big as a house!"

"My dear woman, let me explain the situation. I am an amateur photographer. I am taking a few pictures for

"I understand perfectly," she interrupted.

"Me old man sat right here one day two months ago a-smokin' of his pipe and I thought that it was good to live when along comes a widow wid jest sich a machine as that. He peeks and squints and takes a pictur' and goes off, and two days later me Dan'l is arrested by the police for stealin' four barrels of cement and six bunches of shingles. Be off, I say!"

"My good woman, I solemnly assure you"—began Mr. Bowser, but she advanced and punched him in the back with a broom, and he had to move on.

He traveled six or eight blocks before he struck his next "landscape." It was a rude shanty, with a sign of "Saloon" over the door, and there were a dozen picturesque figures loafing around and spitting cotton. Mr. Bowser decided to take a picture and label it "The Home of Industry" and none of the idlers objected as he made ready. Indeed, some of them assumed still more picturesque poses, as if to favor him. In a couple of minutes his work was done, and he was about to turn away when one of the gang approached and queried:

"Was that a snap shot, wasn't it?"

"It was."

"And we all did our best for you?"

"You did, and I'm much obliged. I think the negative will work out beautifully."

"And about de drinks, cully? Do boys is expectin' at least a keg of beer. We all hardworkin' men, wid wives and kids to support, and we can't pose for nuttin'. Will ye come in and tell Jimmy to tap a fresh keg?"

"A keg!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser. "No, of course not. I'm willing to buy you each a glass of beer, but you don't want to pile it on too thick."

"Dey was beautiful poses," suggested the man.

"Yes, the poses were all right."

"And de boys won't take less'n a keg."

"Then they won't take anything. The crowd of you ought to feel highly honored at being photographed."

"Dat's so, cully. But about dat keg?"

"I shant pay for any keg."

The man turned to his gang and made a sign, and next minute Mr. Bowser was surrounded and picked up and flung into a blanket held by six men. Before he could scarcely yell out he was being tossed in the air, and for the next ten minutes he performed more gyrations than he thought possible for a human being to go through with. When the crowd was weary, he was spilled out of the blanket, the fragments of the camera were handed to him, and he was headed up the street. His back was covered with grass and dirt, his hat caved in, his whole appearance dilapidated, and he started off down the street with the ambition of an artist surging up in his soul, and the family sat on the steps and looked after him and wondered whether he'd come home on the gallop or in the ambulance. Mr. Bowser did not have to go far before finding something that appealed to his artistic temperament. An old umbrella mender who had taken a seat under a shade tree had fallen asleep. His hat had fallen off, his legs were stretched out on the sidewalk, and the picturesque attitude would make a famous picture. Mr. Bowser stopped and set up his kodak, and as he did so various appropriate titles for the picture ran through his head. It could be called

"A Modern Brigand," "Innocence In a Great City," "Not Dead, but Sleeping," or "Wake Him Not."

He had just got the range when a man crossed the road from a saloon and asked:

"What ye goin' to do to old Petro?"

"Take his picture."

"What fur?"

"Oh, just to make one of my collection. I'm out taking snap shots, you know. I think the old man will work out beautifully."

"But I don't t'ink so. De old man is me friend, and nobody's goin' to play dirt on him if I can help it. Git along wid wid squirt gun!"

"But don't you understand that I simply want a picture of him as showing my own work with the kodak?" protested Mr. Bowser.

"I understand all about it. De old man may take away yer umbrella to mend and furgit to bring it back, and ye run to de coppers wid his pictur' and make him trubble. Git along or der'e'll be a row."

"And Mr. Bowser went up stairs without a word in reply." M. QUAD.

"There was a look of terror in his eyes, and he couldn't keep his chin still. A number of boys followed him as a living curiosity," and now and then a pedestrian asked him where he got his jag, but he made a bee line for home and finally shut his front door behind him. All he brought back with him was one leg of the kodak frame. As he stood before Mrs. Bowser with bulging eyes and wobbling chin she realized what had happened; but, like the good wife she was, she refrained from adding to his sorrows.

"Yes, I know," she quietly observed. "It's all my fault, of course, and your lawyer will see my lawyer, and there'll be a divorce and all that, but meanwhile you'd better go up and take a bath and change your clothes and lie down for half an hour before dinner. You have evidently run across some landscapes too big for your artistic temperament and had a bad time of it."

"And Mr. Bowser went up stairs without a word in reply." M. QUAD.

College Baseball.

The Yale athletic managers have stated that C. P. Cook, pitcher, and L. G. Waddell, second base, of this year's varsity nine, who recently graduated from the Sheffield Scientific school, will return to Yale next year to study law.

The two are candidates for captain of next season's varsity team.

The dark skinned natives like the game and will wager their money on everything connected with the sport.

The favorite bet of the Cuban is that the batsman will or will not reach first base. He does not care how he gets there, for with him it is simply a case of "does or doesn't." Getting his base on balls or on an error is just as great an achievement in the eyes of the Cuban as if he had made a corking drive good for a base or two. After reaching first base the betting is continued that he won't reach second, and then third, and so on.

Plungers in wide rimmed hats walk through the stands announcing their willingness to wager various sums, and they are taken up with all of the gambling fever so prevalent in southern countries. But the Cubans don't like to be beaten too badly, and consequently the teams to be taken there should not be up to the playing strength of the National or American league organization.

Of the pitchers in the American League this year Griffith, Katol, Carrick and McGinnity have all done good work. McGinnity of Baltimore is showing himself to be the same "iron man" as old, and nobody need be surprised if at the close of the present season he has pitched in more games than any of the other twirlers.

McGinnity learned early how to save his strength in delivering the ball to the batters, which accounts not only for his success, but for his wonderful endurance. His preliminary movements are of the sort to add speed and control to his delivery and are not of the back, neck, shoulder and arm straining sort adopted by so many of the other pitchers. In thus saving his strength he has it when compelled to use it.

Heldrick, Van Haltren, Strange and Sheppard are doing some great work this year both in the field and at the bat. Strange is a little chap, but has won his spurs quickly this year. Van Haltren, his running mate, is old enough to be his father, yet the veteran never played better ball than he is doing today. He is as spry as a kitten and is positively fast on his feet. Heldrick of St. Louis will come pretty close to leading the country with the bat this year. Robinson has the find of the year in this young man in my opinion.

While on the topic of successful players it should not be forgotten that the Eastern league has developed a younger star this year for whose services there will be a wild scramble at the close of the season. Homer Smoot of the Worcester team already has a batting average of over .400, and if he can continue to keep up the good work with the stick his future is assured, for the heavy and scientific batter is what really counts in baseball after all.

Battling for the title of the best of the various clubs are not the happy family one would expect to find where interests are so identical. The sentiment against Freedman of New York, while nicely cloaked, is as positive as ever, and no love is lost between the other club owners and the two men who control the Philadelphia club.

Also the feeling at Boston and Chicago is not of the brotherly or fraternal sort. The presence of the hustling American league in the field, the lukewarm loyalty of the minor leagues and the organization of the Players' association will prove to be important factors in the readjustment of the baseball schedules for next year.

I am still of the opinion that the major leagues will come together before the end of the present season simply as a means of self protection. If this is done, the minor leagues will quickly fall into line, and the players' grievances can be adjusted in short order.

If this is not done, the baseball conditions next spring will be chaotic in the extreme, and baseball stock in large and small cities will not be worth what it is today.

And the players themselves can do much at this time to help bring order out of the tangle. The leaders in the association of green diamond knights realize that contract jumpers and players whose word is worthless are a real menace to the sport. If they can prevent wholesale jumping in case of dispute, they will do much to preserve the integrity of the sport.

I am told that when the warring factions come together N. E. Young will retire from the head of National league affairs and that his successor will in all probability be Ban Johnson.

Until recently the man named as the logical successor of Young had considerable support from the other club owners, but he appears to have lost much of his popularity during the last month.

That Young will retire seems assured, and the game will lose one of its most honest and faithful servants. Young has labored earnestly for the game for a quarter of a century, and his work entitles him to recognition. May his successor be as earnest, intelligent and honest!

Already arrangements are being perfected for the further invasion of American teams to Cuba next winter. The only hitch at present is that the Cubans show a disposition to want the best without going through the formality of paying for it. This difference promises to be adjusted within the next few weeks.

Thomas Simpson, the secretary of the Brooklyn club, is the American representative of the Cuban Baseball Association and the man who took two teams to Cuba last winter. Owing to disagreements the venture was not a success, although the promoters practically lost nothing.

The next teams to be taken to Cuba will be made up of a sprinkling of old stars and filled with young and ambitious minor league players. Teams of this sort will play good ball and yet not make a show of the Cubans, whose opinion of their own ability on the green diamond field is decidedly inflated.

The dark skinned natives like the game and will wager their money on everything connected with the sport.
